Californian's Aides Seeking To Win Over Uncommitted If the President Acts

By R. W. APPLE Jr.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Aug. 14 -Ronald Reagan's aides passed the word to key delegates today that the main thrust of their attack on President Ford at the Republican National Conventioo would be an attempt to force him to name his Vice-Presidential choice sooner

After meeting all morning with Reagan supporters who sit on the rules committee, John P. Sears, the conservative Californian's top strategist, said that "the only thing we're pushing stroogly before the committee" is the proposal that Presidential roll-call.

Mr. Sears said that he felt ouite good about our chances of prevailing on the floor" if Mr. Ford won the Rule 16-C fight in the committee. Richard L. Herman, a member of he President's strategy board who is managing the Ford operations in the rules committee, said that he had a majority on 16-C both in the committee and in the convention as a whole.

There were some indications that the pivotal uncommitted delegates were sympathetic to the Reagan position on 16-C. Fighting raged yesterday in the suburbs east of Beirut and heavy shelling was reported between Moslem and Christian villages on the main Belrut-Damascus highway. Rightist Christians and leftist Moslems alike appeared convinced that the next big battles. following the fall of Tell Zantar, would occur in the upper Matein district, about 30 miles east of Beirut, and in the miles southeast of the city. Witnesses at Tell Zastar reported looting and said Christian militiamen had been replaced by demolition crews with buildozers to remove the rubble of 52 days of siege and level the site. [Page 1. Column 1.]

Turkey offered to resume talks with Greece "at the highest level" to work out a peaceful solution to their dispute over offshore oil prospecting in the Aegean Sea. The Turkish Foreign Minister, Ihsan Sabri Caglavangil, advocated new negotions with Greece at the end of a long meeting in New York with Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger at the Waldorf Towers. Mr. Kissinger earlier had a breakfast meeting with Greece's Foreign Minister, Dimitrios Bitsios. Mr. Kissinger said that "we will do the utmost to help our friends," but he said that the United States had not assumed a formal role of mediator. [1:2.]

The South African Government, embittered by local newspaper coverage of rioting by blacks, has threatened to put new restraints on the press. Cornelius P. Mulder, the Infor-mation Minister, was critical in particular of two of Johanneshurg's principal newspapers, The Rand Daily Mail and The Sunday Times. At a meeting of the governing Nationalist Party in Durban, he said The Sunday Times was one of the papers that had said that apartheid, not black unrest, was the real danger to the country. Mr. Mulder said that one of the restraints he had in mind was a requirement that journalists be South African citizens finent in both English and Afrikaars, the language of the dominant whites in Sonth Africa. He said this would eliminate foreigners who could take the first plane home if trouble erupted as a result of their writing. [1:3-4.].

Ronald Reagan's aides told key delegates in Kansas City that the main thrust of their attack on President Ford at the Republican National Convention would be an attempt to force him to name his Vice-Presidential choice sooner than he wants to. John P. Sears, Mr. Reagan's chief strategist, said following a meeting with Reagan supporters on the Rules Committee, that "the only thing we're pushing strongly before the committee" is the proposal that would require all candidates to name running mates before the Presidential roll-call. The President's supporters have a bare majority on the committee. [1:8.]

The Republicao platform that will be preseated to the convention on Tuesday night is based on "less government, less speoding and less inflation," and smoothes over some of the major differences between President Ford and Ronald Reagan and contrasts sharply with the Democratic platform. Strategists for the President and Mr. Reagan expressed general satisfaction with the platform, although neither side got everything it wanted. [1:6-7.]

never beeo established. Uotil now, the area did oot seem important enough for anyone to stake claims.

The seas have become increasingly important to the Soviet navy as a strategic door to the Atlantic Ocean. And for both Norway and the Soviet Union, fishing rights there could soon be in dispute along with rights to as yet unknown offshore oil deposits. "So far," Mr. Frydenlund said in an interview today, "we have had a short and manageable border with the Soviet Union. But with the extention of activity, our points of contact are greater and there arise increasing possibilities of conflict."

Norway is wary of the eruption of a fishing conflict similar to one that divided Britain and Iceland extended its limits late Ideal of the Government might have to consider inviting its Atlantic ellies to establish bases in Norway as a sychological foil against the Russians.

Mr. Frydenlund said the Government opposed such moves, in part because they were just as likely to have the opposite firm and there arise increasing possibilities of conflict."

What the Administration

malize relations.

What the Administration seems to be doing is carrying out a delicate balancing act—making gestures that indicate that it is disentangling itself from the formal treaty relationship with Taiwan while using arms sales to put the Chinese Nationalists there in a position to defend themselves unaided. Asked for an explanation of the emission of mention of the defense treaty, a State Depart-

the emission of mention of the defense treaty, a State Department spokesman. Frederick Z. Brown, said: "The fact that we have a treaty with the Republic of China on Taiwan speaks for uself. The President and Secretary of State Rissinger have tentionally referred in general to our maintaining a strong Asian posture and to the constantly of our concern."

Silence by Kissinger

Stience by Kissinger

Secretary of State Henry A.

Missinger has given several speeches on Asian policy in the last two years, discussing every major problem in the area except relations with Taiwan.

A Pontagon spokesman, Tod.
P. Huilin, said the Defense Department could not determine why the treaty had not been mentioned by the Defense Secrelary, Donald H. Rumsfield, in his annual budget presentation relary, Donald H. Rumsfield, in his annual budget presentation to Congress. He did note defenseties with South Korea, Japan and the Philippines. Mr. Hullin said the treaty with Taiwan; was mentioned by Gen. George. S. Brown, Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, who discussed every major military contin-gency in Asia except a possible conflict between Taiwan and China. William Roberts, a White House spokesman, said that the President had spoken of United States relations with Taiwan only in response to questions. Asked on March 12 about policy on China, Mr. Ford responded that his Administration was moving toward normalizing relations. He went on to say: "Pelations with the Chinese Nationalist Government are good. We have a defense treaty with the Chinese Nationalist Government. I hope as we move toward normaliza-tion with the People's Republic of China that we can maintain a proper relationship with the Chinese Nationalist Govern-

Not Trying to Highlight It

Of the handful of Administration officials privy to the se-crets of policy on China and Talwan, all refused to comment except one who asserted, "we're not exactly trying to highlight the treaty with Taiwan, and that's all I'm going to say."

Until about a year ago key Administration officials said privately that Mr. Ford and Mr. Rissinger wanted to begin negotiations with Peking on diplo matic recognition, but by their accounts two matters got in the way: the collapse of the South vietnamese Government, plus concern about American credibility, and the Presidential campaign. The officials acknowl-edged that Mr. Kissinger was not going to press the President to loosen ties with Taiwan, thereby giving Ronald Reagan, his challenger for the Republican nomination. An issue with great appeal to conservatives.
In the Sbanghai communique of 1972 the Administration promised ultimate American military disengagement from Taiwan and expressed hope for "a peaceful settlement of the Taiwan question by the Chinese themselves." No time limit or format was defined.

Peking declared that Taiwan was a part of China and that the "liberation of Taiwan is China's internal affair." It left vague how liberation was to be accomplished. In recent weeks there have been indications that Peking is interested in focusing attention on the Taiwan question by toughening its position. Accord-ing to diplomatic sources, Peking is suggesting that reunification can be accomplished only hy force.

TURKS ASK TALKS WITH THE GREEKS

Mr. Kissinger had breakfast with Greece's Foreign Minister, Dimitrios Bitsios, before receiving the Turkish official in a different suite on the hotel's 35th floor.

Speaking with reporters after each of the two meetings, the Secretary stressed the United States desire for a negotiated settlement of the Greek-Turkish dispute "to prevent a conflict."

Mr. Kissinger said that "we will do the utmost to help our friends," Greece and Turkey, to overcome their difficulties. But, he declared, the United States was not acting in the formal role of a mediator.

After meeting with the Turkish Foreign Minister, Mr. Kissinger met again with Greek officials to convey his imprestions and suggestions to Mr.

Bitsios.

The Secretary cooferred with the Greek minister from 8:30 to 9:15 A.M. The subsequent meeting with the Turkish minister lasted almost twn hours. Mr. Kissinger explained fater that translation was required in his talk with the Turk, while Mr. Bitsios, the Greek, "speaks better English"

Council to Meet

In his statements to the press, Mr. Kissinger recalled that the United Nations Security Council had yesterday started a debate on the dispute between Greece and Turkey, as requested by the Athens Government. The debate is to resume Tuesday.

The Secretary said that the United States was consulting with its European Allies io the Security Council — Britain, France and Italy—to work out an "acceptable" draft resolution. The text would presumably call on Greece and Turkey to refrain from provocative action and to resume negotiations.

Prime Ministers Met

The Prime Ministers of Greece and Turkey, Coostantioe Caramanlis and Suleyman Demirel, had inconclusive talks on the Aegean oll dispute and on the Cyprus dispute in Brussels earlier this year. In suggesting new talks yesterday, the Turkish Foreign Minister apparently meant that these contacts could be resumed.

Mr. Kissinger emphasized yesterday that "the United States is not taking any position" in the Aegean dispute, a problem "that has to be solved between Greece and Turkey." The Secretary added that he did not know when direct negotiation would start.

A reporter asked the Secretary whether the Uoited States had asked Greece and Turkey to refrain from military action.

Mr. Kissinger replied: "We haven't asked for any commit-

ATHENS, Aug. 14 (Reuters)

The Soviet Unino has urged Greece and Turkey to exercise the utmost self-restraiot in their dispute over territorial rights in the Aegean.

Cathedrals of Britain In Need of Craftsmen

LONDON, Aug. 14 (UPI)— Britain's ancient cathedrals and churches are suffering from a shortage of craftsmen to keep them in repair.

Lincoln Cathedral, whose stone has oeeded restoration for 80 years, has two masons on its staff and requires at least three more. Westminster Abbey, to deal with the shortage, has taken on a woman apprentice mason. Canterbury Cathedral, the central church of the Angican communion, has enough masons on hand.

"We are fortunate in having and keeping some really brilliant craftsmen in our team," said Canon Donald Ingram-Hill, vice dean of the cathedral. "We are certainly luckier than in New York where, so I am told, there are only five stone masons available to work oo the Cathedral of St. John the Divine."

Divine."
Exeter Cathedral, on which large-scale restoration is in progress, has a mason-sculptor in charge and four masons working under him. Its surveyor, Peter Gundry, said he was not recruiting additional men because of Britain's financial situation.

for him to meet you at Altman's this Tuesday, we asked him what his ideal fashion is.
"As American as

"As American as possible," answered Fashion Avenue's Quiet Man.

"I do clothes that reflect American taste, go with our fast paced American life."

Then he told us that the woman he has in mind when he designs is the one who can cope: with a career, a husband, a child, a home.

Sounds like the story of your life? Then you'll love Geoffrey's latest scheme for separates. The four pieces here constitute a day-into-evening wardrobe.

At 8 a.m. you button into this soft-shirt (note the new dress-shirt bow tie), wrap into our herningbone tweed envelope skirt (no zip, just button and go), pull on the soft little sweater (just one button at its v-neck). But don't forget to slip the soft-skirt into your shoulder bag.

After office hours, all you do is subtract the sweater, switch skirts, and meet aforementioned husband for dinner at "21." That's coping.

Soft-skirt (78.00) and shirt (60.00) are creamy brandy alexander beige Ultressa polyester. Sweater (48.00) and tweed skirt (70.00) are pale charcoal gray wool. Everything for sizes 6 to 14.

But there's more about Mr. Beene you ought to know. For instance, he once meant to be an M.D. and studied anatomy. (No wonder his fit's so perfect.) For instance, he thinks clothes should "move" the way bodies do. "Don't tip-toe.

Stride!" he tells his models.

But you'll find out for yourself when you meet Geoffrey Beene and see informal modeling in our Studio III, Tuesday, August 17th, 1 o'clock till 2.

QUEUES PLAGUING COMMUNIST BLOG

Long Lines Are Creating Political Unrest in Poland and Hardship Elsewhere

By MALCOLM L BROWNE

WARSAW, Aug. 10—"If there is ever a revolution against Communism," a Pole remarked with annoyance, "it will be started by someone who had to stand in line too long."

He himself had been waiting a balf-hour in a line that snaked all the way across Warsaw's picturesque Old Town Souare to buy a 5-zloty, or 15-cent, ice-cream cone.

No one buying ice cream in Old Town Square on a Sunday afternoon has anything pressing on his mind, and in any case, there are diversions such as an exhibit of amateur painting and an iting and an internal Hungarian band playing a folly czardas.

But on weekdays it is another matter, and time wasted in lines is contributing to serious political unrest in Poland.

Most women in Communist countries have jobs, whether they have families or not, and shopping is a major problem. It becomes acute when a woman, or her husband, must spend two or three hours a day waiting in lines to buy meat or sugar. The situation in Poland has been just that way for the past few months.

The burden of waiting in ubiquitous and interminable lines for everything in the Communist world is something to which people have gruderingly become accustomed. (An exception, perhaps, is Yugo-slavia, where it is normal to light and squeeze through a crowd to get ahead of everyone else.)

In a bread store in the Soviet Union, one may first wait in line to see the bread and various price tags, a second line to buy a receipt entitling one to the loaf, a third line to present the receipt and receive the bread and perhaps a fourth line to have it wrapped. An error at any stage in the proceedings means being sent back to the beginning.

Enrolling a child in school, applying for an apartment, job or pension, getting a driver's license or even getting a tooth fixed are matters that require many weeks of time doing nothing but staoding or sitting in lines.

Medical treatment is free, but to get a cut finger bandaged lovolves even more lines than buying bread as papers are checked, administrators decide which clinics must be visited in what order, and so on.

After waiting for several hours in any line, a would-be supplicant frequently finds that closing time—either for lunch or for the day—has come. The door is slammed, and the only alternative is to come again

For some people, there

ways around the lines.
"I have to do it the hard way," a Rumanian remarked, "because I am not a party official and have no special right to skip the lines. But when I need to see the doctor I find a carton of American cigarettes uoder the table gets me in to see him very fast."

In European Communist countries, a newly married couple must generally wait from five to 10 years to get an apartment of their own. They live with in-laws even after having children. Family argumeots are continuous, and the divorce rate is staggering. In Poland, despite a crash program to build apartments, the situation is as bad or worse than in any other Communist country.

But even apartments can be bad.

In Prague, for instance, $20,000 in hard currency under the table will put a couple at the head of the line for a good apartment, which still must be paid for, of course. There are similar shortents to apartments throughout the Eastern bloc, but they all require large amounts of money that is bard to come by in strictly legal

Price Explains Problem
In Poland, problems have become acute. Only part of the delays result from real sbort-ages.

Meat is apparently scarce because farmers, even after a new price adjustment, still are not getting the prices they feel they oeed. So they respond by not producing.

"Under Communism," ooe
East European said, "everyone must have a job. But there is no requirement to work."

no requirement to work."

The current sugar shortage, on the other hand, is apparently more the result of boarding and inefficient distribution than a real sbortage. Sugar is now being sold loose from the sack rather than packaged.

Poland grows sugar beets and normally produces enough sugar for an exportable surplus. There is oo reason to believe that the sugar crop during the past year has been bad. And yet families spend hours in lines each week to buy just enough sugar to get by.

"Lines and hardship are endurable in times of real crisis," an East European said. "After the war, wheo Europe was in ruins, it seemed normal to wait in line for an egg. But to have to go through such nonsense today, 31 years later, while the West is working without interruptions or simply relaxing, well, it says something about the system."

capitalist island in a socialist duties.

with oil and gas revenues, this little Arab country, with almost six millioo people and few natural resources, is appealing to foreign investors to help create jobs. A 1972 law has afforded wide tax benefits and full guarantees on expatriating profits and capital to people who establish factories working for the export market.

The other major attraction is relatively cheap and abundant labor and this has brought in large numbers of clothing and leather-working plants which require much labor relative to

Many West German, Dutch,
French and Belgian investors, some of them having difficulties at home with expensive labor and outmoded equipment have transferred to Tunisia, offering about 30,000 jobs over the last four years. A special agency for the promotion of investment has cut red tape to a minimum and made for rela-tively quick bandling of administrative problems connected with establishing a business in

Base of Political Stability The success of the program bas depended to a considerable extent on political stability and this has been assured during the last 20 years of Tunisia's independence by President Hahib Bourguiba, who has ruled the country with little toler-ance for any opposition to the single-party system.

But Mr. Bourguiba, who ob-served his 73rd birthday Tuesday with officially sponsored celebrations throughout the country, is showing signs of agiog. There is no obvious successor and there are many rival political and ideological clans. The reliance oo private initiative, particularly of foreign origin, has its critics. Government officials acknowledge.

University students, particularly unruly and lacking the reverence for Mr. Bourguiba felt by older Tunisians, are imbued with the socialist ideas that pervade most of the third world and assail what they call foreign economic imperial-ism and its control of the Tu-nisian economy. They tend to: look to Algeria and Libya for More moderate opponents of Mr. Bourguida's rule say they are not against foreign investment on the condition it brings capital and technology to the country.

"We do not need people who merely seek to take advantage of cheap labor," said one such opponent, Ahmed Mestiri, a former minister who, with a small group, has been trying to a more democratic system instead of one-man and one-party rule.

But in the Ministry of Econ-omy, it is pointed out that Tunisia by itself constitutes too small a market and generates too little capital of its own to ttract large amounts of capital and technology from outside the country.

Several projects that require large-scale production to be profitable, such as automobiles and shipbuilding, have had to be abandoned because of the country's limitations.

Active Birth Control Program In the meantime, the country's population is growing at 2.6 percent a year, a rate that is kept down mainly by the biggest-scale birth control program in the Arab world. About 50,000 to 60,000 new jobs are needed every year. Tunisians used to go to Europe in mas-sive numbers for work but their numbers have been reduced to a trickle by Europe's own economic difficulties. The idea arose to encourage the work to come to the Tunisians through foreign and Tunisian-owned factories that

Tanaka Arrest in Lockheed Case Spurring Moves Against the Premier

By ANDREW MALCOLM

TOKYO ,Aug. 14. Prime Minister Takeo Miki, beset this week by renewed efforts within his twn Liberal Democratic Party to oust him, has repeated his intention to stay in office to pursue the Lockheed bribery scandal, oversee basic political reforms and lead the governing party into national elections this fall.

But there are mounting doubts here that the 69-year-old Prime Minister, who leads only a minor faction of his party, will be in a position to fulfill his coefficial plans. This is because his party opponents, once divided among several hopefuls for the prime ministry, now appear to be lining up dehind a single replacement candidate, Takeo Fukuda, the 71-year-old deputy Prime Min-

The next two or three weeks are expected to present Mr. liki with an important test of durability. leaders and members are to hold several conferences in Tokyo and Mr. Miki will contimue his series of private politi-cal meetings with his chief party rivals. Mr. Fukuda and Minister of Finance, Masayoshi Ohira, who is 67.

The Tanaka Case This is all part of the political jockeying and basic party realignments touched off by the arrest on July 27 of the Liberal erful factional chief, Kakuei Tanaka. The 58-year-old former Prime Minister is charged with violation of foreign-exchange regulations in connection with the Lockheed Aircraft Corpo-ration's multimillion-dollar peyments here to promote the sale

More serious charges, including bribery, appear likely in the near future. As Toyko's prosecutors continue their Lockheed investigation, each day's news-papers are full of allegations of involvement of elmost a score of politicians and clase associates of Mr. Tanaka's.

One of these is Kenji Osano. a wealthy businessman and friend of Mr. Tanaka's who has enjed any wrongdoing in the ocheed affair. On Thursday, the special Lockheed committee of the House of Representatives decided to summon Mr. Osano for further questioning late this

How Miki Hung On

But Mr. Miki is an unconventional politician. A minor fastion's leader, was was in-stalled in December 1974 as a temporary compromise candidate to avert a major leader-

An attempt to oust him last support.

But the arrest of Mr. Tanaka appeared to tip the precarious balance of power in Mr. Fukuda's favor, in recent days, Mr. Fukuda has been talking of "purifying" and "freshening" the party with new leadership, and Mr. Ohira has agreed.

After separate meetings with the Prime Minister this week, both men emphasized the differences that separate them from Mr. Miki. He used the sessions as public platforms to em-phasize the need for moderniz-ing political reforms under his adership.

Lockheed Case Drags On

However, he put completion of the Lockheed investigation first. The inquiry seems to be taking longer than officials had predicted. Now Osamu Inaba, the Justice Minister, and a Miki ally, says the investigation might not be completed before the middle or the end of next month. By law, lower-house elections must be held by De-

BUS LANE'S FUTURE DIMMER ON COAST

Foes of Traffic Experiment Seek to Continue Halt Ordered by U.S. Court

By GLADWIN HILL

Special to The New York Times LOS ANGELES, AUG. 14-One of the Federal Government's principal experiments for promoting bus travel and car pooling, to cat urban traffic and air poliution, was balted suddenly this week. Whether it could be revived seemed highly problematical.

Under the experiment, the high speed left hand lane on a freeway was restricted during rush hours to buses and cars with three or more occupants.

Underway since March 15 on the 12.5-mile freeway from Santa Monica to downtown Los Angeles, the project had engendered intense controversy. The vast majority of motorists relegated to the three other freeway lanes howled that the idea was a disaster. State officials contended that it was starting to produce the desired results.

Their disputation was cut short on Monday when the United States District Court here ordered the experiment suspended, on a technicality. Judge William Matthew Byrne held that the State Department of Transportation, in instituting the project as part of a federal-ly mandated "transportation control plan." had failed to comply with Federal and state laws requiring an eovironmental impact assessment.

The ruling brought cries of jubilation from freeway com-muters and a celebratory cocktail party by a city councilman who had led opposition to the project, and the freeway immediately reverted to its accustomed free-for-all pattern.

Legislators Plan Moves

Theoretically the ruling entails only a naitus of some months for preparation of an impact assessment, which even if adverse, would not legally stop the Diamond Lane project, named for its distinctive pavement markings.

However, the experiment was ballooning into a political issue, with state legislators at Sacramento proposing ti thwart it.

And officials of the Eovironmental Protection mental Protection Agency in Washington indicated informal-ly that the experiment had proved so noexpectedly contentious that there would be a lot of thought before it was tried

They said it was the only one of a half dozen different spe-cial-laning programs underway in various parts of the country that had not had favorable re-

A lane of Route 3, in New Jersey, outside the Lincoln Tuonel, us used in rush hours for buses only.

In the reverse-lane system, vehicles on a two-way thor-oughfare are allowed to use a lane that normally carries traffic in the ipposite direction. A specially constructed bus-only lane has been operating successfully for over 18 months on the San Bernardino Freeway in Los Angeles.

However, the E.P.A. officials said, the San Monica Freeway experiment was the first case io which one lane of an existing multi-lane freeway we pre-empted for priviledged catego-ries of vehicles.

Delays to Enter Road

The Santa Monica has four lanes in each direction, and the left-hand lane in each direction was made the "diamond" lane. The system was in effect for three hours in the morning and four hours in the evening five

The problem of getting eligible vehicles on to the freeway and into the high-speed lanes involved an elaborate access "rationing" system, with traffic lights at 30 on-ramps where drivers were sometimes held up for as much as 20 minutes.

he most complesous result of the experiment were conges tion on the remaining three lanes of the freeway and tributary streets, and a marked increase in the number of acci-dents, while only a scattered stream of traffic moved down the fast lane.

Nevertheless, state officials had indisted that the results were constructive enough to pursue the experiment through its scheduled one-year trial.
They said the freeway's normal load of 242,000 vehicles a day had been reduced to 235,000. and bus ridership increased from only 1,000 persons a day to 4,000

The special-laning is one of the dozen "transportation control plan" strategems advanced by the E.P.A. under the Clean Air Act of 1970 for reducing auto traffic in cities where the regular vehicular and stationary-source of smog abatement programs will not achieve compliance with Federal air quality standards.

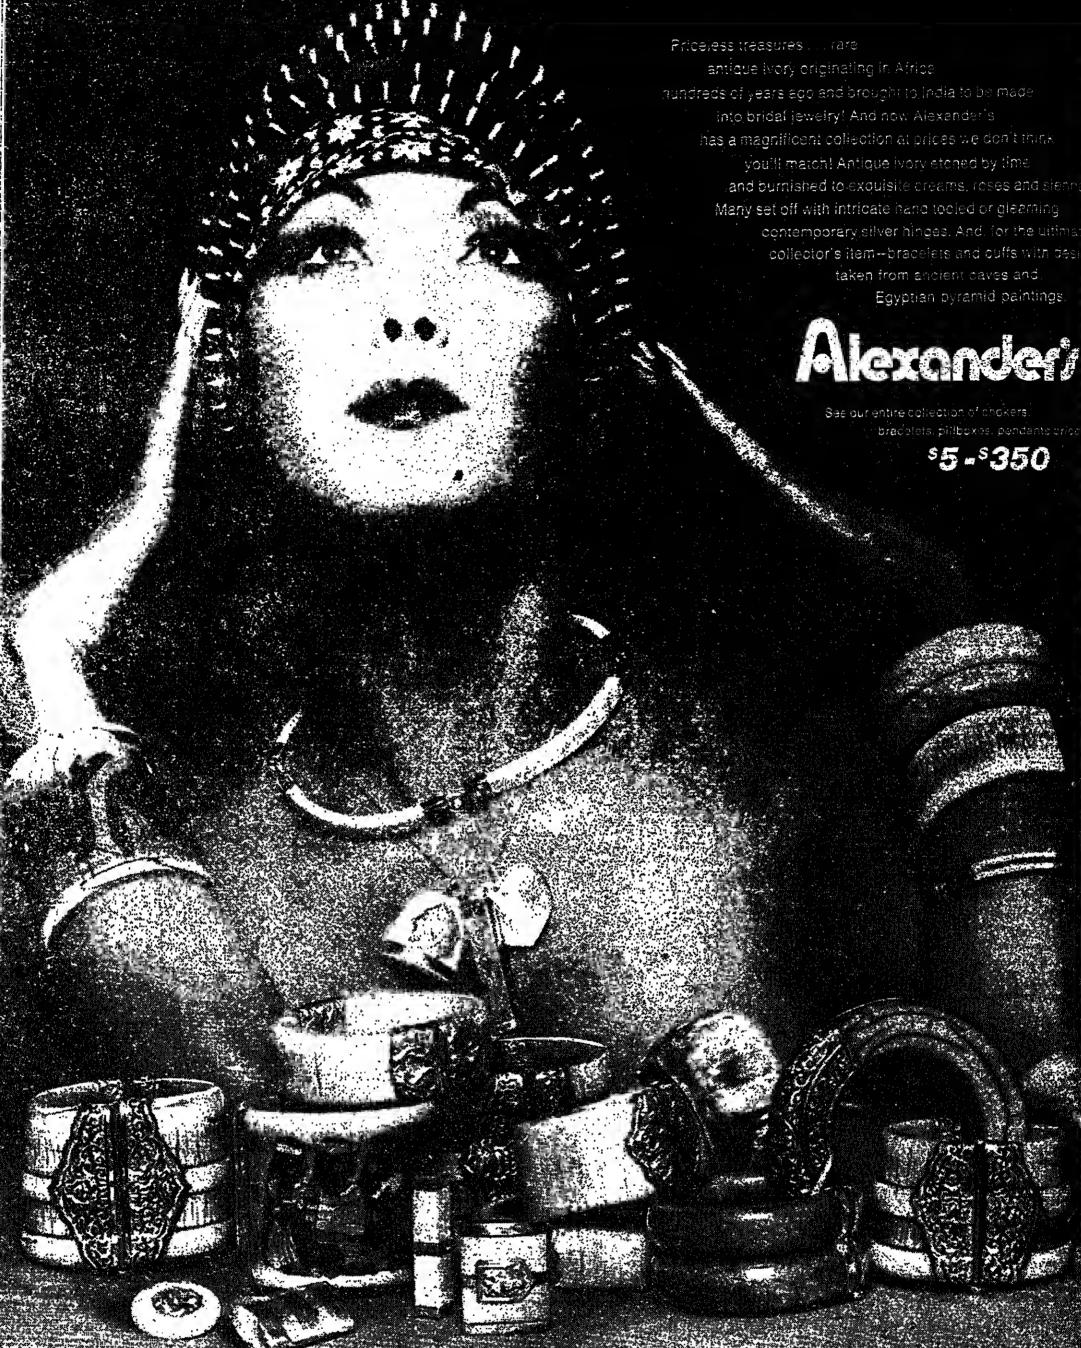

These strategems range from installation of special mufflers on cars to parking rules aimed discouraging unoecessar

the Vice-Presidential rumor millinere actually was a treadmill.

Two days before its official topening, the Republican National Convention seemed likely to revolve around the still unanswered question of President Ford's choice in a running mate.

The issue was central to the skimishing in the convention Rules Committee between the forces of the President and those of Ronald Reagan, who

Says That Post-Convention *Folls Have Found National Strength for Georgian

By LINDA CHARLTON

PLAINS, GA., Aug. 14— Jimmy Carter's polisters, with-out giving details or statistics, said today that polls taken since the Democratic convention show Mr. Carter "basically even or ahead" throughout the country and with "a greater depth to the support" for him among voters.

Patrick H. Caddell, who does Mr. Carter's polling, said that the impact of the Democratic convention and of Mr. Carter's acceptance speech had been "dramatic" in its positive effect on voters' "perception" of Mr. Carter, particularly among those who had been "unsure" of their feelings or had reservations about him.

Mr. Caddell did not say precisely wheo the polling was done, nor did he give the size of the samples or the locations. beyond saying that "15 or 20" nespond saying that 15 or 20 unspecified states in all regions of the country had been polled on a state-by-state basis, and the rest polled in regional "clusters." He said that 48 of the 50 states had been polled, with Alaska and Hawaii omitted.

G.O.P. Strongholds He said he believed that whe individual state results from some normally Republican states were known it was likely that Mr. Carter might be a few that Mr. Carter might be a few points behind his Republican opposition in those states.

The polliog thus far, Mr. Caddeli said, showed no significant difference in results between a Ford candidacy and a Reagan candidacy; the polling was done, however, before Mr. Reagan announced his Vice-Presidential choice Senator Richard dential choice, Senator Richard S. Schweiker of Pennsylvania. Jody Powell, Mr. Carter's press secretary, interrupted to say that when what Mr. Caddell called the "halo effect" of the Democratic convention wore off, and after the Republican convention, "it is almost inevitable that we will slip."

:Asked about Mr. Carter's re ported problems in the North-east, Mr. Caddell conceded "a certain softness" in areas in which Mr. Carter has not campaigned. But, he said, the "most substantial progress" in terms of increased support was shown among Roman Catholics, liberals and voters under 30 years of age.

The major concerns of the voters remain much the same, Mr. Caddell said. He listed the economy, government ineffi-ciency and waste, and moral decay and lack of leadership as among them. He added, in response to a question, that the anti-Washington feeling was still an important factor.

None Written Off Mr. Caddell said that there "15 or 20 [states. that we consider the most contested," but that no states were being written off at this point. On his way back to Georgia next week from a West Coast trip, Mr. Carter will make a stop in what Mr. Caddell called one of the "traditionally hase Republican states" of the farmbelt region, such as the Dakotas. Nebraska, Kansas, or Iowa.

Preceding Mr. Caddell at the outdoor oews conference, which was held beside the overgrown tracks of the Seaboard Coast Line Railroad running through Plains' Main Street was Tim Kraft, the national director of field operations for the campaign.

Mr. Kraft said that 32 of the 50 state coordinators have been confirmed, and the rest are "in various stages of confirmation" that is, being checked out for acceptibility with local Demo-cratic elected officials and state party organizations. The state-level Democrats do not have veto power, he said, hut are being "consulted."

vesterday that he had made his choice for the California state coordinator but would not officially name him until Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr., who spent the night before last in Piains, had his say.

Mr. Kraft said today that Governor Brown had been con-Kraft identified the California. coordinator as Terrance O'Connell, who was New York State coordinator for Senator Henry M. Jackson in this year's primary campaign.

One Regional Vacancy

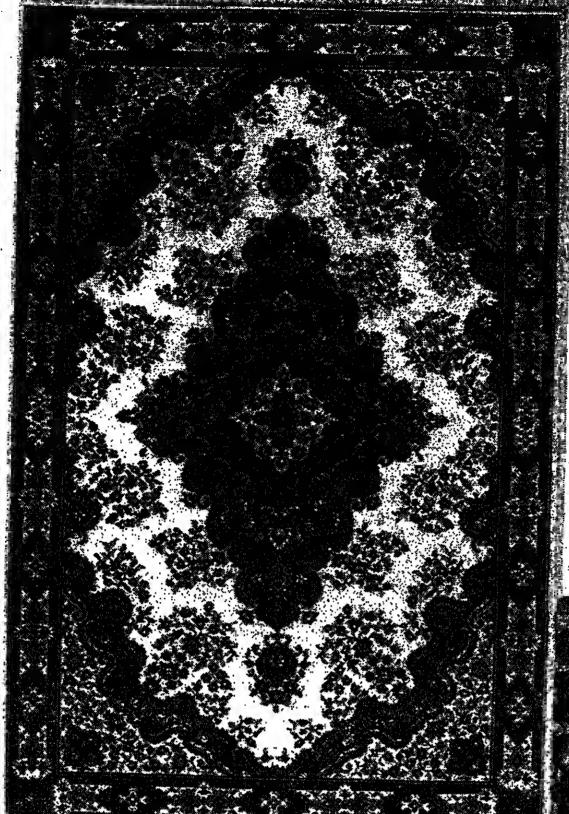

In addition, he said, nine of the teo regional coordinators have been named. The coordinator for the Northeast region, which includes New York, Connecticut, and the five other New England states, is Mary Sheckelhoff, who worked in Mr. Carter's primary campaigns in Florida, Connecticut and Ohio.

There is only one Georgian among the nine. Phil Wise, Mr. Wise, a Plains native who was a state coordinator in several primary states, will coordinate the Southern region for the national campaign. The only state coordinator for the New York metropolitan area who has been named is Gerard Doherty, the New York State coordinator .Mr. Doherty managed Edward M. Kennedy's 1962 Senatorial campaign in Massachusetts and the late Robert F. Kennedy's Presidential primary campaign in Indiana, Mr. Doherty is a former chairman of the Massachusetts Democratic Party.

U.S. PLEA IS DENIED IN SOCIALIST SUIT

Court Refuses to Dismiss Damage Claims Filed by Party Against F.B.I.

By ARNOLD H. LUBASCH

Government lawyers have lost a move to dismiss claims by the Socialist Workers Party fir millions of dollars in damages for alleged wrong-doing by the Federal Bureau of Investigatioo.

The motion to dismiss the damage claims on technical legal grounds was rejected by Judge Thomas P. Griesa in a recent hearing on the three-year-old lawsuit that the Socialist Workers Party filed in Federal District Court in in Federal District Court in

The Socialist Workers, political party, alleged the F.B.L and other that the F.B.L and other Federal agencies had used bur-glaries and other illegal tactics to disrupt the party's activities and violate the rights of its

Judge Griesa has condocted numerous hearings on various legal issues to prepare for trial nf the complex suit, but a trial date has been delayed indefi-nitely hy discovery procedures to uncover evidence in the case.

Administrative Claim.

On the issue of damages, the Government asked the judge to dismiss the claims on the ground that the Socialist Workers Party had failed to file a required administrative claim within a two-year deadline pro-vided by Federal law.

The Federal Tort Claims Act provides that anyone claiming damages for wrongful acts by a Government agency must file an administrative claim with that agency within two years to obtain money damages from the Federal Government.

The Government's motion contended that the Socialist Workers Party knew about the wrongdoing alleged in the law-suit for mnre than two years before it filed an administrative claim for damages, but the party's lawyers argued that they had not learned about many burglaries and other illegal acts until recently illegal acts until recently.

Judge Griesa ruled that it was "inappropriate" to dismiss the damage claims at this time adding that issues involved facts to be determined in a trial of the suit. However, he left open the possibility of holding a "preliminary trial" to determine when the Socialist Workers Party had learned about the alleged wrongdoing.

Documents Turned Over Under court-ordered discovery procedures, the Govern-ment has already turned over more than 30-pages of documents from the files of several agencies, including documents disclosing that the F.B.L burglarized the Manhattan offices of the Socialist Workers Party 92 times from 1960 to 1966.

The Government has also given the party's lawyers the files on an F.B.L informer, Timothy Redfearn, who reportedly burglarized the Denver offices of the party on July 7 nf this year.

The files on six others, identified as F.B.L informers who spied no the Socialist Workers Party, will be turned over tn the party's lawyers next Thursday under an order by Judge

The Justice Department is iovestigating F.B.L burglaries that have been disclosed as a result of the lawsuit, which is seeking injunctions against the illegal acts and a total of almost $40 million in damages from the Government and sev-eral individuals. In addition to claims against the Government, the suit seeks damages from three individual F.B.I. agents allegedly involved in burgiaries and from former President Richard M. Nixon, former Attorney General John N. Mitchell and John W. Dean 3d, whn was the White House counsel when the Government allegedly intensified a campaign agamst the Socialist Workers Party.

Plaintiffs Listed

The suit said that the "syste matic campaign" included bur-glaries, informers, warrantless glaries, informers, warrantless wiretapping, monitoring the mail and illegal harassment that disrupted the party and interfered with the lawful political activities of its members.

The plaintiffs are the Socialist Workers Party, several of its leaders and the Young Socialist Alliance, an affiliated organization of people under the ganization of people under the age nf 30,

Leonard B. Boutin and Herthe plaintiffs. The Government is represented by William S. Brandt, John S. Siffert and Thomas E. Mosley, Ass United States Attorneys.

CHESAPEAKE BAY FACES POLLUTION

WASHINGTON, Aug. 14 (AP)

The Chesapeake Bay faces long-term environmental dangers as contamination from the pesticide Kepone spreads throughout the estuary, according to the chairman of a Government study group.

"The stuff is all over the place," said Dr. Jack W. Blanchard, head of the Environmental Protection Agency's Ke-pone task force, which was set up to investigate contam-ination of Virginia's James

The pesticide, used domes-tically to control ants, roaches and fireants and abroad to fight the banana root borer, has caused tremors and impairment of sight in persons ex-posed to it. In addition, tests conducted for the National Cancer Institute linked the pesticide to liver cancer in rats and mice.

Given the spread of Kepone in the James River over the last year, there is no doubt that it will move within the bay itself, Dr. Blanchard said in an interview yesterday.
"Within three to five years the contamination could spread from the lower bay north into the upper portions of the bay,"

The problem will be long-term in nature, he said, and added:
"It's an exceedingly persistent compound. About the only step that can be taken is to dredge out contaminated sedi-ment. But it will be some time before we realize any beneficial aspects of that."

· Variables Are Cited

The extent and speed of the pesticide's spread corthward in the bay will depend on such physical variables as water physical variables as water movement and salinity, and such biological variables as the kinds of acquatic life being affected,

"For example, bluefish have great ranges and great appe-tites," Dr. Blanchard said, and because Kepone has an affinity for fatty tissue, it could be expected to accumulate in the bluefish. Contaminated bluefish have been detected in samples taken from markets in Baltimore, Norfolk and elsewhere.

Dr. Blanchard said that the Virginia authorities bad found traces of Kepooe io flounder, traces of kepooe to flounder, bluefish, sea trout and croakers in the lower Chesapeake Bay.

The Food and Drug Administration said Thursday that its samplings of finfish being sold in northern markets would be transed up heaves of the Kepool stepped up because of the Ke-pone fiedings.

Kepone is not likely to be found in significant levels in the bay's oysters, since they have a type of oatural flushing action, Dr. Blanchard said.

But the chemical is expected to accumulate to high levels in crabs, the bay's most significant fishery resource. The bay's Atlantic blue crabs spawn in its lower reaches, which is where Kepone contamination is now the greatest.

River Was Closed

"I don't think there will be a problem in terms of the complete wiping out of ac-quatic life," Dr. Blanchard said. What's going to happen that most species will begin showing up with traces of Kepone in them."

Last December, Gov. Mills E. Godwin of Virginia closed the James River to all fishing because of Kepone contamina-

A grand jury has indicted officials of the now-defunct Life Sciences Company of Hopewell, Va.: the city of Hopewell, Allied Chemical Corporation and several individuals for Kepone contamination.

Life Sciences made Kepone for 16 months for Allied, until it was closed in July 1975 by the state after many of its employees came down with ilinesses diagnosed as Kepon poisoning.

Kepone found its way into the James River from the city sewage system, it was charged

But, according to four in mates who were interviewed, the womeo who fight or incite fights in the prison number only 10 to 15 out of the total populatinn nf about 400.

The superintendent, Frances Clement, whn was interviewed about prison problems in her office, agreed.
"The majnrity nf women

here are trying to do their time and get out," she said. "There are just a small percentage whn are having problems."
And one inmate said, many violent situations could be prevented if officers interceded when they sensed that tensinns were high.

"You can tell an infficer that you think there's a problem, hut they don't respood," the in-mate said. "They let women have the fight, and when it's broken up, they lock them up. They can see signs that a woman is upset, but they don't deal with it. They wait until something happens."

3 Counselors on Staff

There are only three coun-selors on the staff at the prison, and the women said they may have to wait weeks or even mnnths before the counselor answers their requests for an interview.

"When she finally calls you down it's been so long that you've forgotten what your problem was, or you've solved it yourself," one woman said. The prison is a cluster of modern red-brick anl old stone buildings oo a hilly, barren campus in a residential area of nnrthern Westchester. The complex is surmunded by a steel mesh feoce topped with slanting rows of barbed wire.

The four inmates who were interviewed, wearing hlue and greeo prison jumpers, sat in the administration building at one end of a long table in a room that is usually reserved for parole board hearings. One woman, Sandi Thom of North Tonawanda, who is serving a senteoce of two to four years, wrote a letter to the Westchester District Attorney, Carl Vergari, on March 22. Sbe

LESS GROWTH NOTED IN CITY EMPLOYMENT

WASHINGTON, Aug. (UPI)—City governments grew by only six-tenths of 1 percent last year, the smallest expansion in municipal employmen in 14 years, the Census Bureau said today.

However, municipal payrolls continued to expand signifi cantly, the bureau said. From October 1974 to October 1975, the standard 12mnnth period used by the hureau tn measure municipal emplnyment growth, the country's cities gnt 15,000 new employees, bringing the total to 2,506,000. Of these, 468,000 were part-time wnrkers.

This slight increase repre sents the smallest such expar sion since 1962, when the rate grew by only four-tenths of percent, the bureau said. The slowdnwn reverses trend established in late 1960's and early 1970's. From 1965 to city governments expanded by an average nf percent a year. In 1973, they grew by 4 percent. But municipal payrolls continued to increase. In October 1975, payrolls were up 7.3 percent. $2.1 billion nver the previnus October.

Since 1946, municipal em plnyment has risen from 1.2 million tn 2.5 million. Payrolls bave risen from $206 million to $2 billion.

Use of Charter Revisions Worries Some Councilmen

By MARY BREASTED

ment in time for the 1977 elec-

Some members of the City councilmen and representative Council are attempting to block from the Police and Sanitation one of the charter revisions passed by the voters in a refpassed by the voters in a ref-erendum here last November whether the City Councilmen and to reshape the implemen-like it or not—and the Board tation of another such charter of Estimate will have the final revision. The Councilmen see the broad the fines but them as a threat to their power and perhaps to some members survival in office.

Councilman Howard Golden.

But Councilman Henry J.

The two revisions of concern to Mr. Golden and some of the other Council leaders would do the following:

He raised ob-mate to pass a plan, submitted jections to the bill—which by the Mayor, for "coterminus" would put off Council reapporby the Mayor, for "coterminus" would put off Council reappordistricts for community planitionment until 1981—and toning boards and police and sanitation services. The Mayor's plan for these districts must go able to kill the bill for the
to the Board of Estimate by Oct. 1, and the Board of Estimate must pass the final plan by next Jan. 1.

Other Requirements

The second charter revision would also require that the new community planning boards be made up of members appointed by the borough presidents, with half of the members drawn from a list of nominees submitted to the borough presidents from each of the local councilmen. Each community planning board would then be empowered under the law to appoint a salaried district manager to process all local service complaints and perform other functions the community board might assign to him.

Since processing service com-plaints has traditionally taken a major portion of City Councilmen's time and has also kept them in the good graces of their constituents, the Council-men who are worried about the "coterminality" charter revi-sion are most concerned that the new district managers feel accountable to them. And the key to this accountability, the Councilmen believe, is going to turn on the way the commu-

Mr. Golden explained his colleagues' worries: if Councilman X's district contains portions of five of the new community planning board districts, then Councilman X would have to deal with five different district managers to help make his constituents' complaints known. As Mr. Stern explained his inter-pretation of the Councilmen's concern, Councilman X would have much stronger influence over the selection of district managers if the community plenning districts were neatly contained within his own district-because then Councilman X would pick half of the mem-bers of each community board within his councilmanic dis-

Tentative Proposal

Last June, the Charter Implementation Committee, a group appointed by the Mayor, re-leased a tentative proposal for leased a tentative proposal for the map of the new coterminus service and planning districts throughout the city. (The Queens map was not included in that proposal, but it has since been drawn up by the demnittee.)

The Brooklyn Councilmen osed map. Howard Golden's councilmanic district contained portions of several of the new Naming districts. Leon Katz's concilmanic district, also in brooklyn, contained portions of five of the new planning-board districts.

Victor Marrero, the Chairman of the City Planning Commission, who has been involved in the designing of the Charter Implementation Committee'a "coterminality" map, said that his major concern had been to design districts that "the Delical design districts that "the Police Department and the Sanitation

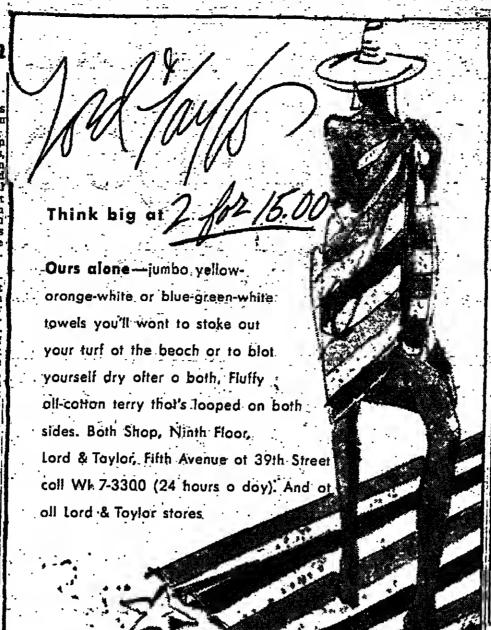

Department and the Sanitation Department could live with."

The Brooklyn Councilmen said that they could not live with the proposed lines for their borough, however, so they asked the Charter Implementation Committee to tion Committee to go back to the drawing board and draw planning-district lines that were more harmonious with councilmanic lines.

Police Balk at New Lines

The Implementation Committee drew up new lines that were more pleasing to the Brooklyn City Councilmen and made some adjustments on its lines for other boroughs where individual councilmen or community groups had complained. But the Brooklyn changes were boroughwide, and when the Police and Sanitation chiefs saw the revised lines, they balked at accepting them.

The whole matter has now gone to Deputy Mayor John Zuccotti, who has scheduled a meeting next week with all the interested parties, the Brooklyn'

Unexpected Woes Slow Beame Plan for Economic Recove

• ¶Are drastic remedial measures oeeded to halt the city's private-sector jobs losses—600,—agency itself is changing, Mr. 000 since 1969—or will this Beame is looking for a new trend end without moch inter-kind of administrator to lead it.

Those Involved Involved in the effort, besides her and Mr. Kaplan, are other members of the Planning Com-specific problems.

The focusing of this work in the commission and in the Deputy Mayor's office rather than in the Economic Development Administration is seen at City Hall as an implicit recognition of the weakness of the Eco-nomic Development Administration staff.

"They just don't have the people who can do this kind of thing." said a City Hall aide lose to the work.

it also is seen as the inevi-table result of the appointment of Mr. Zuccotti, himself a former chairman of the Planning Commission, as Deputy Mayor, putting him and his aides at the center of policy-making for the Beame administration.

Beame administration.

By the time he resigned in June, Mr. Eisenpreis and his staff were no longer being consulted on the direction economic policy should take. If a new administrator were in office now, he would be involved in the planning, but so far Mr. Beame has not been able to find a candidate strong enough to command respect in the business community who would be willing to take the job.

Advisers to the Mayor who have been involved in the search said one difficulty was the short time—only 16 months
—Mr. Beame's term in office has to run. This is thought to be too little time for anyone serious about the job to make an impact on the city's mooumental economic problems. Business Tax Cuts Utant

There also is uncertainty among candidates about how high a priority Mr. Beame is prepared to give economic development in the fierce comvelopment in the fierce com-petition now going on for scarce public dollars. Though the Mayor has said that re-building the economy was going to be "paramount in city policy," doubts persist, because he has refused to endorse the deep cuts io business taxes recommended two months ago hy a Municipal Assistance Cor-poration task force as e neces-sity for ecocomic revival. sity for economic revival.

Soch tax cuts could force the city to ask the municipal employee unions to accept further layoffs and deferrals of wage increases, steps Mr. Beame might be reluctant to take if he decides to run for re-election next year. The unions were a major part of the constituency that elected Mr. Beame two and e half years ago.

The present structure of the Economic Development Administration also is a deterrent because it includes the troubled Department of Ports and Terminals, whose leasing arrangements in the Hunts Point and Bronx Terminal markets have been subject to widespread criticism. Candidates for the administrator's job have ad-vised City Hall they would not take the post unless this department was separated from the Economic Development Administration.

The Mayor's Management Advisory Committee, headed by Richard J. Shinn, president of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, has drafted a proposal for restructuring the Economic Development Administration, but so far it has not been acted upon. The proposal suggests cutting Ports and

But for all his gifts as a performer, it is Mr. Dia-mond's spogs that are the center of his act, and it is his ability to write them that im-mediately lifts him above the category of simple performer. Mr. Diamond's material is full of talent; at his best he cruises through songs like a limonsine in overorive, grand and expeosive. But for this taste it is still too unabashedly pop to provide more than a faint passing pleasure. The lyrics lapse too comfortions tably into the slick or, worse, the hollowly rhetorical. The music, while usually catchy, rarely reaches below a neatly crafted surface to engage the deepest emotions. And surely Mr. Diamond's decision to place a 20-minute medley from his soundtrack to the "Jonathan Livingston Sensuil" film right near the Seaguil" film right near the end represented a miscalcu-lation: Popular it may have been, but it shows him at his most nakedly bombastic.

But as ever when one considers a popular artist, pop-ularity is in at least some sense its own reward: Mr. Diamond unquestiooably pleases his fans, and perhaps Diamond that's quite enough. One wonders, though, if it's

The Nassau County police said they had solved 14 burglaries in Plainview and Bethpage, L.I., during the last two months with the arrest of four teen-age boys. The youths, detectives said, tole several thousand dollars in cash, jewelry, rifles, ammunition and household items. Only a small amount of the loot has been recovered. The only a small amount of the loot has been recovered. The police said more arrests were expected.

Michael Daley, 16 years old, of 122 Haypath Road, and Scott D. Johns, 17, of 523 Central Avenue, both of Bethpage, were charged with third-degree burglary. The two other suspects, 14 and 15 years old, were not identified because of their ages. Both were booked on charges of juvenile delinquency.

Police Auxiliaries' Action Defended

The lawyer for the Auxiliary Police Benevolent Association criticized the Police Department for beginning an investigation of three auxiliary oficers who did not intercede when they saw three unionned officers being ha-rassed last Wednesday by an irete crowd in Astoria, Queens. James Egan, counsel for the auxiliary officers, said at a news conference that the auxiliaries radoed for police assistance when they saw the incident. He said that was all auxiliary officers were permitted to do under Police Department reguations.

Youth Gangs Decline to Yield Weapons

A poic spokesman at the Fifth Precinct, which incudes Chinatown, said that no weapons had been turned in yeschinatown, said that he weapons had been turned in yesterday by members of youth gangs inthat area. On Friday, Capt. John W. Ferrica, the precinct commander, said at a news conference that he understood that members of youth gangs who had been in street fights in the lower Manhattan neighborhood wanted to give up their weapons. He said that for the next 10 days the department would accept guns and knives from youths and extend immunity from the usual charge of illegal possession.

72% of World Population In Developing Countries

--- Underdeveloped countries, particularly in Africa, Latin America and Asia, contain 72 percent of the world's population, according to a Government study.

Oyer the last 25 years, the study by the Census Bureau reported, the world population has expanded from 2.5 billion to almost 4 billion, with most this increase in the underdeveloped-also called develping—countries.

In 1950, such countries accounted for 86 percent of the population. Surges have oc-curred in Latin America, whose populations grew by 9.9 per-cent: Africa, up 12.4 percent, and in India, up 15.9 percent. At the same time the popu-lations of North American counlations of North American countries advanced only 4.8 percent while Europe expanded by 5.6 percent, the study said.

But thousands upon thousands may be just over the technological horizon, sive research leboratories. Solar cells, he said, lent themselves to use in razors because razors require little energy, and rechargeable razors had already proved perhaps arriving sometime next year to usher in a new dawn in shaving.

It's the electric shaver. But it is as far removed from the electric shavers of the thirties as the Concorde is from what the Wright brothers flew at Kitty Hawk

What's coming up is the solarpowered shaver, the successor to both the electric shaver with e cord and the rechargeable shaver with removable cord. One of the prototypes, developed by N. V. Philips of the Netherlands, whose electric razors are marketed here under the Norelco hrand name, is already in the United States.

The razor itself, with the three adjustable rotary shaving heads familiar to legions of shavers here and abroad, is in all respects identical to Norelco's conventional rechargeable razor. The difference is in the case.

Set into the exterior of the lid are nine solar cells, each resembling a dark lens roughly the size of a 25-cent piece, framed in plastic. Also on tha lid are e small green button and a tiny red light.

Leading out of the inside of the lid is e short cord and plug. If the green button is pressed and the red light fails to glow, the razor needs a charge. Then tha plug is placed in the base of the razor and the closed case is exposed to the sun or to an electric light. Exposure for 24 hours to the sun or to a 100-watt light is sufficient to charge tha razor for three weeks of sheves.

At the present time, the only one of the solar cell razors in the United States is et the offices of the North American Philips Corporation at 100 East 42d Street.

According to Robert Moes, manager of Norelco's Personal Care Divisions,

But, Mr. Moes said, it is hoped that economies will bring down the price of cells, in much the same way that transistors and other electronic devices became less expensive after their original If all goes well, he said, by Christmas of 1977, the sun's energy may be in widespread use in obliterating 5 o'clock shadow with razors priced around $100.

What is inhibiting commercial production of the solar cell razors is the cost of the cells. The nine cells in the

Campaign Aide Asks Inquiry on an Aftered Picture

MIAMI, Aug. 14—Representative Louis Frey Jr., President Ford's campaign chairman in Florida, has called on the Justice Department to look into the legal aspects of the alteration by a prominent pro-Ford Latin leader of an official White House photograph, later sublished here.

In the original picture, taked by a Presidential photographer, several other persons were vis-ible, in addition to details of a large White House conference

Frey 'Very Disturbed'

"I am very, very disturbed by this act," Mr. Frey, Republican of Winter Park, said this week. "If Justice Department lawyers find that no laws have been broken, then the national committee should look into this matter. It is our responsibility to clear this thing as soon as possible."

The altered photograph was given by Mr. Casanova to The Herald which, unaware of the alteration, printed it last Febru-ary on the front page, illustratng a long feature story about he banker.

The article stated that Mr asanova had "clout" at the White House and that he was "steadily growing more impor-tant behind the scene." Mr. Casanova was quoted as saying that he expected to be appointed by the President to a high Federal post.

"Want to stay your baby," the cable stated, "and authorize you to negotiate 1977 U.S. tour." It was from Dieter Graefe, the manager of the Stuttgart Ballet, and was addressed to Martin Feinstein, executive director for the performing arts at the Kenoedy Center in Washington, D.C. The wording of the cable was both flip and authorita-tive. Its breeziness, however, symbolizes a fresh wind of change blowing in the field of concert presentations-one which appears to be strengthening the importance of Washington, D. C. in the cultural affairs of the United States. And that could have considerable significance for opera, symphony and ballet

Before taking a close look at Martin Feinstein and the Kennedy Center, it is necessary to explain some recent developments in the field of concert presentation. Since the heydey of the great impressario Soi Hurok, who died in 1974, costs have skyrocketed. Production and think I'll stop feeling snrry for playwrights. Altogether. I've felt sorry for them in stages over the years, adding a tear or two each decade because it was clear—each decade—that the go-ing was geiting tougher. You see, playwrights have always faced one particular hazard. As successful, thoroughly workable, play doesn't tell single thing about writing his next.

second to the third, and so on till career's end. w, play is unmapped territory, with a topography of and no street-signs. The writer enters it bliodfolded, ning whatever rules he may have picked up in annthe , and gropes his way through thickets and around a until he stumbles onto what he thinks is a possible thether or oot the path is leading bim anywhere will a mystery until he gets there, at which point it'll all late. He may be up against a beaut of a black wail. dividual plays succeed because their individual secrets en decipbered, and every dramatist, on matter how oced, feels himself a trembling covice as he advances aw material. (Don't tell me that novalists and other llers have approximately the same problem, because n't. It is much easier to repeat a formula on the page 1 the stage, as is evident from the series-books and the that make the best seller lists regularly. The presence actors and a large live audience tends to expose a this evasions, repetitions and easy-outs by making tangible, so visible.) it's all become much worse in the past 15 to 20 years.

y, if Moss Hart knew that he didn't know how to s next play and that be'd have to go to the mat with m its private tricks through contact, be at least knew comedy, nr a farce, looked like. A comedy looked sethiog Philip Barry or S. N. Behrmao might bave a farce like something Genrge S. Kaufman or George light have done. Ditto with melodrama ("The Deslours" or "Dial 'M' for Murder"), social drama ("All "Dead End"), genre pieces ("Awake and Sing," of the Wedding") and so oo. Everyone bad a rough tha formal universe in which be meant to place his ew something of its overall look—once he'd licked and unique details. He may bave had problems, but it going to fall off the edge of the world.

then we all fell off the edge of the world. With the of Beckett and the Absurdists and Grotowski and ook (let a few names stand for the many), every trashape was challenged, the very ootioo of form dissolved. The last crutch was nn longer available: it wasn't Mostly playwrights had to work as though sverything heginthiokable now to write's Kaufman farce or a regulation "suspense" play; put something together that so much as looked like William Inge and you'd be tagged out-of-date before you got your front porch nailed up.

Which meant that from now on a playwright would bave to invent not only the innards of a piece but also the external configurations in which these might be displayed. It wasn't enough to make up a story anymore; ynu had to make up the cosmos in which it took place. A playwright bad to imagine his plsy and imagine what a "plsy" might be at one and the same time. Small wonder one sorrowed for the tribe.

There were occasional brave exceptions, of course. "That Championship Season" did look like William Inge, and 'Sieuth" belonged to a school that had once comfortably accommodated "Witness for the Prosecution." But these were rarities, uppity self-assertions on the part of their authors, and no one could safely count them models calculated to help an audience feel snug or a playwright secure.

ning with Aeschylus had been scrapped. Sui generis from top tn bottom, and bring your own modeling kit.

A harrowing proposition, quite deserving of sympathy. If I have at long last decided to hold back my remaining lears, it's simply because I now notice that new and presumably young playwrights don't seem to fael at all intimidated hy the task. Just hack from vacation, I've been dropping in nn things I'd missed, Off Brnadway in general and "Vanities" and "Sexual Perversity in Chlcago" in particular. Neither of these two successful enterprises (both ara selling out) resembles what would have been called a play when plays were familiar faces. Both fly flags confidently announcing that their authors are perfectly prepared to construct outsides and insides simultaneously, reaching for whatever fits aod blithely dismissing past babits.

They're not radically inonvative, mind you, nothing so triumphantly bizarre as, say, John Guare's "House of Blue Leaves." They're just casually free sbout what they need and ready to make the stage yield to them, rather than the other way around. "Vanities," dramatically the stronger of the two and an evening I heartily recommend, splits its stage, its time and its people into three equal portions. A trio of bigh-school girls, cheerleaders all, sit at their dressing tables applying the wigs, eyelashes and lacquer that may just constitute all they ever get out of their ardent, fuony, ultimately empty lives. Cheerleading is a very serious business; it is difficult for these girls to imagine people coming to the game just for fun. In a college sorority house, five years later, frey are still pretend-innocents (one, ferociously a virgin, is determined that the Kappas will open their doors to "no flower children, no drugs, no git-tar players"). The future, however, is beginning to look as through it had fissures in it and you realize that the exuberantly animated girl who has organized her life about ber ever-present notebook will fly apart like unlocked looseleaf the minute it is taken from ber.

A last meeting, with six more years gone, is brittle, hitchy, caustically amusing and surprisingly touching. Shrill greetings, simultaneous aighs that sound like doorbell chimes, and the great terrible eyes of actress Jane Galloway—they seem to have been scraped from an Etruscan frieze—combine in an oddly ebullient requiem, bleakness and champagne nn the rocks. The characterizations are naturalistic enough; but author Jack Heifner has evolved a format that will tell us only so much as he wisbes to-obliquely, in passing, by refraction. It's enough.

David Mamet's "Sexual Perversity in Chicagn" (preceded oo the bill by a two-men-on-a-park-beoch play, "Duck Variations") makes its shape out of the way words are used, out of an ovar-arching cadence that replaces the structural authnrity narrative would once have imposed. Narrative here is elliptical, unimportant, nnt much more than lightning-flash glimpses into the sexual enthusiasms and hostilities briefly generated by two young men, two young women. But the language in which real and imagined relationships are boasted n; regretted, mocked, makes use of rhythms that are selfstarting, then nunstop, finally overriding. You can't fight with an express train.

The effect, io a curious way, is veotriloquial. If you look at the text of Mr. Mamet's play, you will see endless tripledotted blank spaces and broken constructions; you will immediately imagine an evening of stammers, pauses. But under Albert Takazauckas's remarkable direction, you get oothing of the sort. If one chap is telling another of his experiences with a girl who had to be dive-bombed and capalmed in order to achieve sexual climax (and a vividly funny passage it is),

For many years she has been recognized as one of a bandful of leaders in the teaching of acting in the Uoited States. Stella Adisr, Harold Clurman, Sanford Meisner, and Lee Strasbert all came out of the Group Theater in the thirties, (Harold Clurman called the period "the fervent years") and became interpreters of the Stanislavski Method-a technique based on the work and writings of Konstantin Stanislavski, the Russian actor and director who died in 1938. Exactly what the method meant was unclear, and still is, to all too many actors. Strasberg based his view of the Method on what Stanislavski had taught and writtion. In other words, the ac--that an actor must create between these two schools of teo in his early careeroamely, that the sctor should past" in order to convey emotor should remember a tragic moment, say, to convey anguish. But Stella Adler traveled to Paris to study with Stanislavski at the end of his career, wheo the Master bad refined and clarified his Method. Ever since, she has taught what she learned then hy imagination, not by memory. While there is no war dramatic techniqua there is, of course, a fundamental difference between them, and each bas its supporters. Strasberg, probably the best known tn the general public, has many followers. Oo the other hand, so does Miss Adler. Meisner, director of Neighborhood Playhouse, and calls ber "the greatest teacber of acting in America."

'The Truth of Your Art Is in Your Imagination'

What Do They See in Each Other?

Miss Adler, who lives and works in New York City, goes to Hollywood most summers to teach, and Is welcomed there like a queen by her admirers. Her classes in California this summer provided an opportunity to witness her technique.

"Stanislavski wanted the truth of man on stage," Miss Adler told the students this summer. "He didn't waot the actor. He wanted the truth, the universal truth. The truth of your art is in your imagination, oot in what you coosciously remember."

Ooe girl said, "But when you told me to imagine a lake in Switzerland, I couldn't help but remember a real lake I had seen in Switzer-

"Then put your lake, in Morocco," said Miss Adler. "You must get away from the real thing, because the real and cripple you. To think of your own mother's death each time you want to cry oo stage is sickness."

"I'm cnnfused," said another girl. "I feel a terrible contradiction, because all the exercises I've been taught to use are from my own past experiences and my owo past emotions, and I can't get beyond that."

"Then you've been crippled." Miss Adler repested, more firmly than before. "And say that Stella Adler said so. Don't use your conscious past. Use your creativa imaginatioo to create a past that helongs to your character. I don't want you to ba stuck with your own life. It's too little. You won't he able to play Medea or Lady Macbeth or Blanche DuBois. If you stand nn your head, you won't be able to play them until you create them in you. Acting is the art of creating."

One young woman playing Nioa in "The Seagull" ,said she was having trouble with her "sense memory" (a term used by Method teachers) and had to take longer to feel the storm outside.

Theo throw some water on your face," Miss Adler told her, "You've been crip-pled by this crazy Method acting. You don't oeed all that time. Your imagination can be trained to do it in a second. Make your imagination create it in you. You're limiting yourself to your own cooscious mind. Your creative imagination will oot limit you. You'll be able to draw on 2,000 years of uncooscious blood memory."

The effect can be electric. Midway through the course one studeot said, "Stella Adler taught me more in five minutes today than any of other teachers have tsught me in five years." And the effect can be lasting. Harold Clurman - director, producer and writer - frequently asks for Miss Adler's opioion on performances. Warreo Beatty came over to kiss her hand while she was dining at a restaurant in Hollywood. Zero Mostel apent an afternoon with her. Marloo Brando took ber to dinner and put oo the first suit and tie ha had worn for montha because he felt "a oeed of some kind of ceremony to hooor Stella Adler."

The heat in Hollywood this summer was unbearable. It hado't heeo so hot since 1883. But there was oo lethargy in Misa Adler's classes. You can't wander into acting," she had said. Students ran dowo the street to be on

Still, she asked more from them. "Maximum, not minimum," ahe damaoded, "More energy. You can't be an ector without energy. You can't be boring. Life is boring. The weather is boring. Actors must not be boring."

don't think Carol has looked at anyone in the last 20 years, except an audience. When she goes to the bath-room, she makes an Exit. When she returns, she makes an Estrance. With Carol, the performance is bigger than

"Ooce, we were playing Seattle, and I wanted to ask ber about a routine. I knocked on her dressing-room door. 'Carol, are you decent?" 'No,' she said. 'I havs my clothes off. Coms in.' All she had on was a towel. I didn't want to look at her. I mean, if I looked at her, her husband would think I was cheating on him. 'George," she said, I have to find an eyelash, then we can talk.' She started to get up. 'Wait, Carol-don't get up,' I said, let me find tha eye- flapper is nostalgia gone haylash.' I forget. What's the point to that story? Ob yeah. It's her openness, her theatricality that makes her funny. Sba emphasizes her bigness, she makes you notice her eyes, her mouth. That's why she can go out there, sing a perfectly straight soog like 'Hello, Dolly' and get laughs. You don't even think about the soog. You're watching her capsize a character.

"So, Carol's bumor, ultimately, is bar manner. It's a style she invented herself. She mimics the gold-diggers of the twenties and thirties -well, so do a lot of actresses, but when Carol plays Lorelei sbe lovingly mocks the character. Sha's the dumb blonde, but she's oot dumband we all know today that the 'dumb blonde' lsn't dumb. She oever was, Carol makes us understand that joke, Her dumb blonde becomes larger than life — like Jimmy Carter's teeth, And she kids the whole sex thing, there's no emharrassment. Her oversized vulnerability, her baby wire. And the sophisticated provincialism you see in Dolly Levi is a contradiction that zaps the audience like benzedrine. Then, Carol does a burlesque, a low comedy routine, she adds an exaggerated innocence that makes you laugh without feeling oaughty. Who else could do a take-off oo Bardot with that umbrella mouth -or Dietrich, wrapping those swell legs around a chair. backwards, and nnt bring out the vice squad? Carol is a comic creation of her own. But what else could that girl do in life? Can you imagine Carol Channing running an elevator? Sha'd gat atuck between floors."

There was a snappy rap oo ths dressing room door. "Fifteen minutes, Mr. Burns."

"See, just like in the M-G-M musicals." He stood up, tapped the ash from his cigar. "By the way," he added confidentially. "I found the missing eyelash."

Downstairs, in her dressing room, Carol Channing kerplopped a pouch of fake cal or vocal paraphernalia.

diamoods oo a glass table, ahimmied out of her sequined habit and with a "please don't mind my metatarsals," stepped into her final frock. Then, sitting back oo ber milady-shaped pouffe, she pondered the essence of George Burns's comedy. George, the jnke is always understated and cootrolled. He can be funny just by letting his partner get the laughs or not asying anything at all because he's very much aware of comedic rhythm. George doeso't have to do. any physical work; for him, the comedy is mental, it's all in his head—be works on a kind of emotional intuition. Maybe that's what Stanislavsky was talking about—if you think it, yoo don't have to do it. "George never does anything with his face, it's a mask; he never changes the tone of his voice, he has no mannerisms, except his cigar, and that's his style. I don't know any other comedian wbo succeeds without pbysl-

He doesn't twitch, he hardly moves. Ha is the stand-up comedian. George alwaya says, 'If I'm sweating, I know I lost the aodience.' But be leads the audience with his wry modesty, patience and tolerance. Comedians usually rely on the slow burn or the comedy of insuit. Not George, Ha diesn't put down anyone. He keeps his cool bead while the world crashes around him. He'a Samson. Nothing bothers him. George is an innocent wbo has outlived all surprises. Basically his humor is rooted in 'situational' material Lika be tells about his struggle for survival in tha theater-the time his pants fell down on-stage or be was mistakenly booked as a dog act. He invites us to sbare these experiences and laugh at them. He doesn't make smart in-jokes. We're all allowed in when he admits pouring a drink down Warren Beatty's cumberbund at party. We believe that atory, and all the others, like admiring the ruby in Zsa Zsa's belt wheo it was really the cherry that fell out of his drink. He can make us helieve anything. And Georga bow to make them funny meao, Gracie, ber sister and mother, and me-by listening, patiently to their problems. He doesn't answer back with one-liners. His softness is masculine and cuddlyfunny, oot hitchy."

Later, their act over, Burns gets a standing ovation and Carol rusbes into his arms. "Al Jolson used to run the water faucet hackstage so he wouldn't bear the applause for other performers," he says, accepting the bug.

"Ob, George, I never heard that before," exclaims Carol. "Of course you didn't I just made it up," replies

Burns. Slipping his arm through hers, they cake-walk to a purring limo that will take them to dinner. "Yeah, it's oice to smoke a cigar, tell a few jokes and use the same makeup as Dolores del Rio," Burns murmurs philosophically. "Not a bad life." "Dolores del Rio?" protesta Carol. "Isn't that a beach in California?"

"I don't know, sweetheart." ha smiles, waving to autograph-hunters behind a police barrier. "Maybe it's on Long Island. There's no certain an-

"How lucky we are to have 'The Ritz' around to brighten the fall season. Its comedy is as raunchy and knock-about and low as it is sharply eatiric and rich with bland innuendo. Weston and Stiller are excel-lent. Moreno'e creation of Googie Gomez is one of the funniest enthnic-comedy characters on stage or screen in recent years—you'll fall in love with her. 'The Ritz' le for aduits who can appreciate the slapstick and the sex, the iunacy and the eheer raffish nonsense that e lot of talented people have concocted with not too many worries ebout

"Rowdy, nutty entertainment with an irrepressible group of comic performers."-William Wolf, Cue Magazine

"There has never been a movie quite like 'The Ritz'. It's in the zany mold of farce end slapstick eo honored by the brothers Marx and Ritz. It'e a romping comedy—funny end crammed with talent. Though my mad crush on Woody Allen Is well known, he is go-ing to have to ehere me In the future with Jeck Weston, who is a greet comic with heert. Don't miss him in 'The Ritz'."

"The Ritz' hes a great sex of humor. It is e reel fun-fectory with a laugh a minute coming off its assembly line! It's a wild and wooly comedy with a Merxien (Groucho, not Kerl) slant. Jack Weston is absolutely perfect. Jerry Stiller, Kay Bellerd, F. Murray Abra-ham and Peul B. Price ere hilerious as hell. Rita Moreno's comic genius fills the film with e special rough-tough vulnerability end mekes for constant chuckles."

DANCE VIEW

By CLIVE BARNES

Savoring the Afterglow of Vintage Years

his bas to have been the most remarkable season in New York's dance history. We've been treated to our native companies: the Joffrey, of course, New York City Ballet, American Ballet Theater, the Pennsylvania Ballet, the Eliot Feld Ballet. And then all the great modern dance companies: Martha Graham, Aiwin Nikolais, Paul Taylor, Merce Cunningham, Alvin Ailey (who even now is at the New York State Theater), Murray Louis. And that is not even to mention the vast, diverse selection of dance events that are not yet on what might be called a Broadway level. What's more, there have been all the visiting companies: a casual band of Russians organized by Igor Moiseyev, Britain's Royal Ballet, the Royal Danish Ballet, the National Ballet of Canada. And then there have been all the visiting guest artists. It has been a great dance year.

It would be impossible - and if not impossible, invidious to talk about this dance seasoo io any qualitative fashion. How do you compare New York City Ballet with Paul Taylor? Or even Britain's Royal Ballet with the Royal Danish Ballet? Yet, for reasons I will discuss at the beginning of next season, it may bave been not only the best of the hatch but the last of the batch. We may oever again see this kind of diversity. It is going to become increasingly difficult for foreign dance companies to appear here. And there seems no way in which the problem is going to be solved. No foreign company can pay its way, and few foreign governments are nowadays orepared to pick up the tab. International dance has become almost as simple as that

I suppose dance years are like wine vintages. The year 1945, for example, was very good for Burgundy. The year 1946, for example, was very good for ballet, I was living in London at the time. The Royal Ballet (it was then, of course, called the Sadier's Wells Ballet) had just moved ioto the Royal Opera House, Covent Garden. There was a new company-called the Sadier's Wells Opera Ballet-being formed at the Sadler's Wells Theater, Roland Petit brought his Ballets des Champs Elysées to the Adelphi Theater in London and Serge Lifar brought the Nouveau Ballet de Moote Carlo, with Yvette Chauvire, to the Cambridge Theater. But, looking back, probably the most important international dance eveot of that year was the first overseas appearance of American Ballet Theater, It was then simply called Ballet Theater, and the date was, appropriately, July 4, and the place was Covent Garden. The program was Fokine's "Les Sylphides," Jerome Robhins's "Fancy Free," the "Black Swan pas de deux" danced hy Nora Kaye and Andre Eglevsky, and Fokine's "Blueheard," with Joho Kriza. Not only was it a night to remember, it was a seasoo to remember. Ballet Theater then was at the top of the beap.

transportation expenses have led the way. As a result, the guarantees required by overseas companies are beginning to reach what one booking agent calls "astronomical heights." Ticket prices have been raised, but bookers feel they have reached the maximum acceptable increase yet still cannot offset costs.

Last year, there were rumors that the Royal Ballet would soon make its last tour to the United States. Wheo Hurok Concerts, Inc. hrought the Bolshoi Opera to New York for several weeks in July, 1975, the agency lost a reported $400,000 to $600,000 on the deal. What was even more dismaying was the news that even if the Bolshoi had sold every seat at the Met every night it appeared there, Hurok Concerts still would have lost money.

If there were oo alternative, present circumstances would drastically redoce the number of foreign symphonic. ballet and operatic companies visiting the United States. But just as the commercial managers find the business of importing foreign companies ever less tempting ficancially, to the rescue comes the non-profit corporation which can operate at a deficit and make up its losses by soliciting tax deductible contributions. Roger Stevens, the chief fund-raising officer of the Kennedy Center, and Martin Feinstein are pioneers in this field. "I'm not interested in what commerical managements do." Feinstein says. "At Kennedy Center, I don't want to impinge upon them in any way, hut we can do what they can't. They have to make a profit. We

For example, La Scala, perhaps the world's most famous opera company, arrives at Kennedy Center next mooth. The venture will cost about $2 million — a sum which cannot possibly be recouped by ticket sales. Accordingly, Feinstein got the Philip Morris Foundation to put up $100,000 and the Cafritz Foundation to dooate $125,-000. He then encouraged a local department store to hold an auction which is expected to raise $50,000 and persuaded Local 22 of the International Association of Theatrical Stage Employees (stage hands) to agree to a temporary moratorium on a a scheduled wage increase. Finally, the Kennedy Center itself will contribute $270,000 and Feinstein arranged to have the Italian government contribute 700 million lire and agree as well as to supplement that sum should the deficit run higher. Only Washington will have La Scala on this trip to the United States.

But other Feinstein importations for Kennedy Center will go out from Washington to other American and Canadian cities, New York among them. "We already have a working relationship with the Metropolitan Opera House," Feinstein says. He is also working with Toronto, Ottawa and Los Angeles, He bas arranged for the Stuttgart Ballet to open at the Kenoedy Center next May and then proceed to New York, Feinstein is also negotiating right now with John Tooley, general administrator of the Royal Opera House, Covent Garden, about bringing the Royal Ballet to the Kennedy Center in 1978. Then, too, it was Feinstein who originally invited the Paris Opera to visit the United States this fall although Hurok Concerts will manage the New York engagement, and Feinstein had been invited to go to Vienna for discussions of a possible visit of the Vienna Opera in 1978. And so it goes.

Feinstein is optimistic about the ability of Kennedy Center to raise money to support these and other presentations. Kennedy Center, after all, with its three theatersan opera house, concert hall and theatrical auditorium—is a national mooument. Corporate donors and other philanthropists like the idea of supporting its ventures, be believes, simply because Kennedy Center is located in the nation's capital and thus their contributions appear to be gifts to the entire nation rather than to a specific locality. 'Money will not dry up for things that are worthwhile," he says.

The federal government, it should be noted, provides no funds for events within its buildings. Income for the Kennedy Center is derived from box office receipts and from Kennedy Center Productions Inc. which solicits funds from foundations, corporations and individuals.

Feinstein's colleague, Roger Stevens, who is chiefly responsible for raising the funds Feinstein will spend, likes to stress the importance of tight budgetary control. "Just because we're nonprofit," Stevens says, "doesn't mean we aren't as concerned as anyone about balancing our books. Yes, it's quite true that we serves as the unsalaried chairman of the board of Kennedy Center and also operates privately as a commercial theatrical producer. "I see no problem with that," comments Feinstein. "We make deals with all commercial producers - with the Shuberts, Arthur Cantor, the Theater Guild or anyone else. Roger Stevens does not get favored treatment. Every such joint venture has to be approved hy our board of directors, and, as a matter of fact, Roger's periner, Robert Whitehead, is always comhave been quite successful this past year in attracting financial support from large corporations such as Xerox, Mobil Oil, Exxon and McDonald's. But some of that was special because of the Bicentennial and we may not receive such gifts in the future. Nevertheless, it's also true that we think of ourselves as a public service organization and so we undertake some projects which the old Hurok organizatioo, for example, would never attempt."

There have been some who have been critical of the fact that Keooedy Center's nonprofit productions might be exploited by Stevens, who plaining to me that the toughest and least favorable deals he and Roger Stevens make are those made with the Kennedy Center."

Roger Stevens himself adds -that whenever his commercial ventures tied in with Kennedy Center make a profit he happily donates his share of them hack to Kennedy Center. "The Washington Post made an elaborate investigation of my commercial operations," he says, "and found nothing amiss."

The Kennedy Center is becoming a magnate not just for foreign performing arts companies and for corporate and private largesse, but for tromes and opera companies as well. Feinstein explains: "Before Washington became a cultural capital, everyone thought he ought to play in New York. Performers still do, of course, because the reviews in New York are so important. But things have changed. Now Washington has become important because the National Endowment for the Arts is here. The Congressmen who support the arts are here. As a result, it's very important for the organizations which receive federal support to expose themselves in Washington. As a matter of fact, recently I had one major. orchestra come to me and express just that point - they wanted to increase the number of times they performed in Washington for just that

"Washington has become important for another reason. too," he continues. "The Kennedy Center has three of the best theaters in the world. Every conductor and every ballet company that comes here tells me that. Last fall, the conductor Karl Böhm told me. Between curtain calls, I clasped my hands in thanks for this auditorium. The acoustics are perfect. But, of course, the physical plant wouldn't mean a thing without a public, and, over the years, we have developed one of the best concert and theater-going publics in the world."

final ingredient in the growing importance of Kennedy Center and Washington, D.C. as a cultural center, and that Feinstein himself. Now a handsome, graying man in his mid-fifties, Feinstein knows the field of concert presentations as well as anyone alive. He worked for Sol Hurok for a quarter of a century and was generally regarded as Hurok's heir apparent. The son of Russian migrants, Feinstein had joined Hurok in 1946 as assistant publicity director. In 1950, he became publicity. director and subsequently a vice-president. ad emotional insufficiency is the commonest form vie acting. To be fair to the actors, the aimlessness and foolishness of most movie scripts are partly responsibile. Excessive acting is less common nowadays, but two examples of it can be seen in "The Return of a Man Called Horse."

I liked a good deal in this movie about an English gentleman who goes to live and fight with a tribe of Indians. Irvin Kershner, the director, sought to emphasize the mystical and ritual aspects of the Indians' life. Although it is overlong and overblown—the Parsifal-like music is unbearable—I believe Mr. Kershner has often succeeded extraordinarily well. The opening massacre is a heart-rending masterpiece. The director coocentrates oo the fleeing, terrified women and children, on the smoke and confusion; and brings back memories of the most tragic Vietnam War footage.

Mr. Kershner's camera draws strength from its long meditaon the faces of the Indians. Not, though, from the faces of the two principal actors, Richard Harris and Gale Sondergaard. Miss Sondergaard is cast as an old Indian squaw. It is not that she is a bad actress, but in trying to catch the slow impassivity possessed by the real Indians in the cast she forces her face in a fashion a camera will not tolerate. Her mouth wants to move, she compresses it, we see the compression; the effect is that of a jawful of

When Mr. Harris, still back in England, wants to convey the notion that he is musing about his memories of his first visit to the Indian tribe, he applies musing like make-up. When he comes upon the ruined remains of his tribe's settlement, he applies horror. In a critical situation he casts his eyes upward.

Instead of simply feeling things, he instructs his face to react to them. We see the instructions. The long initiation scene is hard to bear, but not mainly because of the ritual mutilation. (This, I thought, was handled well. It was painful to watch but it was not gratuitous.)

It is Mr. Harris's mutilation of his own features that hurts: he huiges his eyes, he lets his mouth gape open. Mr. Harris doesn't know that a large part of human pain is borne with a still face, not from hravery hut from weariness. But the camera knows it, and tells us.

thriller about an Arab terrorist plot to blow up the Superbowl Back in the office, he fields calls from Warren Beatty, an attorney who reports oo the progress of Evans's lawsuit against a Hollywood gossip columnist and an agent from William Morris who is bickering over a contract for one of his clients. Bob Evans is unquestionably one of Hollywood's husiest, most successful and flamboyant independent producers, one whose shrewd commercial instinct and consuming passion for movies set him apart from most of his fellow producers. At the moment heris putting the finishing touches on two movies that could well be the blockhusters of the coming season. Actually, Evans harks back to another era of moviemaking. During the thirties and forties, producers were the auteurs of Hollywood movies. Producers like Samuel Goldwyn, David O. Selznick and Hal B. Wallis decided on a story, supervised the writing of the script, hired the director and prepared the final cut. Although their influence on movies was not always a good iofluence, they were clearly the dominant force in the business.

Today, directors and actors have more power, and producers have been relegated to e distinctly secondary position. Most present-day producers are former ageots, and therefore adept at making deals, calculating salaries and percentages, hut they have little competence outside this financial realm. Generally speaking, as soon as they set the deal, they go to work on their next project.

"Many producers are working on too many films," says Evans, "and that's why they have lost their integrity. There are still some very producers in Hollywood, but it's a breed that has become rather select."

Evans is ooe of the few contemporary producers who has worked in the film industry in any kind of creative capacity. He started out in radio as a child actor, and he got his first movie role when Norma Shearer spotted him at the Beverly Hills Hotel and recommended him for the part of ber late busband Irving Thalberg, the leg-eodary head of M-G-M, in "Man of a Thousand Faces." After playing a few more un-Evans decided he was not making sufficient progress, so he gave up acting and returned hriefly to his family's clothing business. But be feels that his acting experience gave him a greater sympathy for filmmakers than many other contemporary producers have. "I have more compassion for the creator," he says, "whether it's the actor, the director, or the writer. I know what it takes to make something good. It can't always be judged by dollar signs."

However, when Evans first went to work for Paramount in 1966, his acting background made him the hutt of many industry jokes. "People said, That B-actor is suddenly becoming an executive," he recalls. "When I came into Paramount, they thought I'd last six months." Instead, thanks to successes like "Love Story" and "The Godfather," Evans had a looger tenure than most of his rivals at other studios; ha was production chief at Paramount for over eight years. Bot he was not satis-

"I was a bad executive," Evans says now. "I would get very involved with just a few pictures, and I let a lot of other things pass. I was lucky, hecause at least the pictures that I got involved with ended up being successful. But I realized in the last couple of years that my interest was not in sitting down with agents or packagers all day and making deals. I wanted to be in the cutting room, working on the scoring: I wanted to be more fully involved with the making of Last year, after producing "Chinatown," Evans decided to give up his job at Para-mount and become an independent producer. He has an exclusive contract with Paramount, and he insists that the studio has approved all of the projects he has proposed. The only conflict, he says, is that "They would like me to make more films, which I don't want to do. They send me things all thetime which I turn down. I want to make fewer pictures, not more," - ".

Evans has already met opposition from Paramount over the release of "Marathon Man." The film, which Evans is co-producing with Sidney Beckerman, was originally scheduled for release in June, but at the last minute

From B-Actor To A-Producer

Evans asked that the release be delayed until October, because he and the director more time to work on the editing. "Paramount had the best theaters in the country." Evans says. "It was the hot from the exhibitors' standpoint. And wheo I told them wouldn't have the picture for summer, Paramount had to give back something like $15 million in exhibitor's goarantees. There was chaos at the studio, and if I hadn't been in such a strong positioo, I may have had to acquiesce. But I held my ground, because I didn't want to turn in a film that didn't get all cor efforts to make it as good as possible. I pilot, waits to see an official at the Veteran's Administration office and finally explodes in frustration at the hureaucracy. 'I have a different ending that I want io the scene," Evans explains. "As Frankeoheimer filmed Dern throws voghurt in the secretary's face. The way it was in the book, he walks over to the desk, and their eyes meet, and he takes all the papers on the desk and throws them off. John likes it better with the yoghurt, and he may very well he right, but I want to have an opportunity of seeing it the other way. I think in Frankenheimer's version the moment went by too quickly; milk out of it, The agreement would not rush the picture. Time is probably the greatest if I don't like something, he'll asset a film has, unlike television, where you have only 12 or IS days to shoot. You need time in making a film. I think the hig mistake we made with 'Godfather II' was to rush it out. If we had had three months to edit it, the picture would have heeo at least 25 per cent hetter for audiences. David Picker, president of Paramount, explains why the studio agreed to delay the release of "Marathon Man": In order to get the best possible 'Marathon Man,' we had to delay the release. When you are dealing with certain kinds of exploitation filmswhat I call commodity films -you might be willing to rush them out in less than perfect state. But not with filmmakers of this caliber." Evans works on his films from the script stage all the way through the preparation. of the foreign-language version. Before shooting, his main concern is to choose the right people for the project. One of his favorite strategies is to hire directors usually associated with art films to work on pulp material; he selected Roman Polanski for "Rosemary's Baby" and "Chinatown," Francis Ford Coppola for "The Godfather." and John Schlesinger for "Marathon Man." "Marathon Man' could have been a potboiler." Evans concedes. But to get a John Schlesinger and a Dustin Hoffman and a Laurence Olivier gives the movie a texture that this kind of genre film has never hadbefore. When you get that kind of talent to do a large audience film instead of an esoteric picture, that's when you have a chance at something special."

During production Evans watches daily rushes, and he lets the director know if there are scenes that are not filmed as he imagined them. For example, on "Black Sunday," Evans and Frankenbeimer are in disagreement over one scene where Bruce Deta, playing an ex-Air Festes that John and I have is that do it the way I want, we'll look at both versions and decide. I have the same relationship with Schlesinger."

According to Schlesinger, Evan's main cootribution is made during the editing stage. One of his concerns io post-production is the music. "I'm a music freak." Evans admits. "I'm rather fanatical. I put people's noses out of joint many times and hold up the picture to get the right score. On 'Love Story' I threw out Jimmy Webh's score, and I went over to Europe and spent the entire summer with Francis Lai working on a new score. And if it weren't for hia theme, the picture wouldn't have worked. Francis Coppola and I had terrible fights on 'The Godfather.' He wanted to use Nino Rota's music in many places where I wanted to use American music. I won my point"

Evans contends that this kind of friction with directors is healthy: 'Too many directors are surrounded hy sycophants, yes-men, people who are always telling them, 'That's brilliant, that's great.' That's not productive. The healthiest thing is to have conflicts."

The directors who are working with Evans now agree with him about the value of a vigorous collaboration. Schlesinger saya, "I need a producer, because I get too close to the film, and need an objective eye. The director-producer relationship can be very productive. I've worked with three very strong producers-Joe Janni, Jerry Hellman and now Boh Evans." Frankenheimer concurs: "I try to surround myaelf with people who will be honest with me to the point of pain. If two people agree about everything, one is unnecessary. I want a genuine collaboration, and for that you need a strong and creative producer like Evans." The actors who have worked with Evans also seem

'Although you would not dresses or from his life-style, Evans actually has very good taste," Dustin Hoffman com-ments slyly, "He has a fine sense of detail. I've seen him looking at rushes, and he picks up if a shot is just a little too hright or too dark. I have not worked with many other producers who are that meticulous. His nose is very commercial, but this can be valuable, hecause he keeps the film from becoming pretentious. He just wants the movie to reach people."

Nevertheless, Hoffman and the other people who have worked with Evans admit that there are definite limits to what he will attempt. Jack Nicholson says, "Bob has less esoteric taste than I do. He'a not interested in specialized films at all. There are certain films that would interest ma that he would never even consider." John Schlesinger adds, "Boh would have rejected 'Sunday Bloody Sunday. He was implacably onposed to Day of the Locust. He couldn't understand why anyone would want to dosuch a depressing story. His taste is popular, but that is perfect for a thriller like 'Marathon Man.' "

The films that Evans has planned for the future do no represent much of a risk. He seems to want to make gense films oo subjects that have already demonstrated stroog commercial potential For example, he is now. preparing "White Dog." horror film about a vicious dog that has been trained to kill blacks and is later retrained to kill whites, and he plans to make a disaster movie called "Blizzard." Robert Towne is writing a sequel to "Chinatown" for him, and Evans also wants to do a remake of Hitchcock's 'Notoria ous" if be can find a content porary approach to the story. Ohviously, Evans sees himself as an eotertainer. Unlike some of the producers of the past, he has no hurning social acconcerns. "I just want to do pictures that are captivating

But in a film like "Black" Sunday," which deals with the Arab-Israeli conflict, is it possible to avoid a political statement? "It's difficult to avoid." Evans replies, "but I think we have lessened it. We're making it as apolitical as possible."

In a gag reel filmed during the making of 'Marathon Man," Dustin Hoffman does a delightfully. funny imitation of a hurntout Evans in 1996, going on national television and pleadiog with the public to "send" me a love story-a good man-woman story."

"People laugh at me about this," Evans admits, "but I am desperate to find a good love story. I think that's my strength. Tweoty guys can make a better Western than I can. But I do believe that in human relationships between meo and women, I can cootribute. In everything I do, I huild up the woman's part. In 'Black Sunday' the woman is the lead; it may not be a love story, but at least there's a man-woman relationship. In Marathon Man' I've made the girl's part more important.

"I don't want to do the macho thing because I thinkthat's been overdone. Now I'd like to find a real romantic story to tell, but writers are not writing love stories. One reason is that it's difficult to write women today. Men are, easy to write. They have a lot of props you can play. with - guns, cars, boats, horses, gymnastics, every kind of fight. With women you really have to get under the skin. That's difficult writing Also, I think people are less romantic today. There is less romance and more ser. less romance and more sea. Guys went back to see the picture seven or eight times and brought a different girl every time, because when the girl walked out of that picture, for the next few hours she was in love, I think there was more sex that came from 'Love Story' than from any porno film. I went to Paris for the opening, and it just impressed me so. went to eleven theaters, and 32 at every theater, the boys and girls would walk out 110 kissing. ters, either. "O.D." no longer means olive drab in all quarters of our society, but then Shakespeare's obsolete vocabulary does not bother us too much. There are footnotes and variorum editions to clarify things, when needed. But nothing dates so surely or so quickly as propagandistic art, and the survival of an occasional "Alexander Nevsky" or "Guernica" merely stresses that. The Blitzstein symphony was commissioned by the Air Force, which was a strike against it immediately, but it also grew out of the composer's fealty to the Communist party and to the Soviet Union. In the early 40's Blitzstein, like every right-thinking democrat, was rooting for the Russians and hoping for the second front. Hitler had to be defeated, and the Russians were the heroes of what was then called with some reason "the free world."

But the patriotic music of the 40's not only has dated, which is understandable, but has become a national embarrassment. Samuel Barber's Symphony No. 2 (1944), elso an Air Force commission, originally used a recording of the radio beams that fliers followed in navigation. The composer later eliminated that bit of literalism from the score, and he probably doesn't mind that his other Air Force commissions such as "Commando March" (1943) do not turn up on programs much nowadays.

There is, in fact, something about sitting down to write propagandistic music that seems to turn a composer's brain to jelly. Can any reasonable distener accept the fact that thoven composed the "Battle" Symphony? Could the same Prokofiev who wrote the Third Piano Concerto really have produced "The Story of a Real Man"?

No, benality and self-deception are so integral a part of patriotic music that even in the few successful examples of the genre we must learn to evert our ears in embarrassment at times. Aeron Copland's "A Lincoln Portrait" has survived for more than 30 years, mostly on the merit of a text that is mostly by Lincoln, but the score has a terribly hollow ring that reminds us how easy it is to produce empty nhetoric when propaganda is the muse. There is, of course, great art that starts out to work for the state or some other noble cause but somehow goes astray. The "Eroica" apparently was intended as a tribute to Napoleon at one point, to: mention the most imposing example.

The "Airborne," however, does not go astray, not for a moment. The music is a patchwork recalling Prokofiev, Mahler or Shostakovich as well as Copland and other thirtyish models. And it drapes itself clumsily over some of the worst poesy ever committed to paper. The overall theme, which may be identified as the Jonathan Livingston Blitzstein theorem, is that flying equals freedom. The work's tone is radioplaylet inspirational, circa 1945, and its eyes are clearly fixed on the wild blue yonder. It is difficult to imagine anyone but a specialist in World War II antiques listening to the piece straight through its two record sides, but it must be preserved as a curio of that era, just as you might save a can of Spam or a "ruptured duck."

The effects of ideological indoctrination do not wear off quickly, and often stay in the bloodstream for life. Long after World War II had ended, composers such as Shostakovich could not shake off its paralyzing banality.

Along with many others of the Blitzstein generation, Leonard Bernstein might be cited as an example of a composer whose music has never lost a 40's flavor. It vacillates between orotted platitudes and Stage Door Canteen breeziness. Even 20-odd years later in his Mass, a brave attempt to come to terms with another time and esthetic, he cannot resist getting down on all fours to sing propagandistic babytalk to his audience, the message this time being youth-serving clichés of the 60's. His lighter stage works have never moved much beyond the 40's, of course.

But the Bernstein/Blitzstein rhetoric, with its stress on readily absorbed messages, is not peculiar to them by any means. An entire generation of American composers was infected. One has only to think of representative works by Samuel Barber, Morton Gould, Norman Dello Joio, Paul Creston, William Schuman or Aaron Copland to see that they share, in spite of differing talent and training, a way of approaching music that may be called public, for lack of a more precise word. They all wrote, in their own ways, equivalents to Copland's "Fanfare for the Common Man," A few wrenched themselves clear of this public style, sometimes at a high price. Copland adopted serial techniques in the 60's, as Roger Sessions had done in the previous decade. Elhott Carter, whose first successes date from the war period, decided to write the most complex music he knew how, and thus avoided being trapped in any sort of widely understood idiom. But all felt the 40's powerfully and either embraced that time or ren from It in fear,

A few sons of the 40's, such as John Cage, do not seem to have been aware that there ever was, in the phrase of the day, "a war on." They armored themselves against the seciousness and solemnity of the time with oriental detachment, wit and calculated nonsense. And yet no artist escapes entirely from the grip of his generation. It is entirely possible even in the extreme instance of John Cage that an attic trunk will be opened one day and out will fall a cantata in praise of the Flying Fortress or Major Dick Bong. Every composer has at least one "Airborne" or "Battle" symphony in him, if he tooks shallowly enough.

premiere of his opera "Wa Come to the River in London, comes closer to home with the news that Henze is currently writing no fewer than three works for the Concord String Quartet, which is based at Dartmouth College. The triple premiere is set for Sept. 12 at the Berlin Festival. and continues a promising affiliation; the Concord has just recorded Henze's Quartets Nos. 1 and 2 for the BBG. The new scores—Nos. 3, 4, and 5-will be taped by them for German television. Concord cellist Norman Fischer points out that the new works are Henze's first quartets in 25 years.

The affiliation between the German composer and the American players began three years ago when Henze was in New York and heard the Concord perform Elliott Carter's Second String Quartet. Mightily impressed, Henze promised to return to the quartet idiom, largely due to their youthful stimulus.

Their most recent meeting, according to Fischer, was at an Indian vegetarian restaurant in London, where they got together to talk over the BBC taping (Henze was toobusy at Covent Garden to get to the studio; the Concords were too busy with their concert schedule to get to the opera). As for the new quartets, only No. 3 was in hand earlier this month; Fischer re-

Zubin Mehta, who is at present music director of the first orchestra and music advisor of the second, will surpass even Berlioz in terms of numbers: the composer managed to muster only 130 players for his abortive first attempt to perform the work in Paris in 1830. Pre-Baroque Instruments Can Sound Spicy ncient musical instruments are a mystery to most music lovers. Even so erudite a music critic as George Bernard Shaw failed to catch a veiled musicological insult when he once received an unflattering letter addressed to Mr. G. B. Shawm. (His wife enlightened him-a shawm, she informed the great man, is an obsolete wind instrument.)

A generation ago, only schulars of Medieval and Renalssance music had any real knowledge of such arcane and long forgotten instruments as the shawm, sackbut, crumhorn, regal, rebec, serpent and rackett. In these retrospective times, however, as more and more early music groups spring up, the unique sounds of these instruments and the music written for them are once again catching the fancy of audiences. Certainly one of the most popular ensembles, on disks at least, is the Early Music Consort of London directed by David Munrow (who, sad to say, died last May), and their latest recording serves a very practical need: a survey in sound of over 70 pre-Baroque instruments accompanied by a lavishly illustrated 98-page book by Munrow explaining their history, construction and usage.

The format of the two records is simplicity itself. One disk is devoted to the Medieval era and another to the Renaissance, while the musical examples group the instruments of each period into families of woodwind, keyboard, brass, strings and percussion. The book follows a similar arrangement so the listener may read the background material and study the pictures before hearing each selection.

It's a fascinating journey back into time, conjuring up the unfamiliar sounds of an age that most of us know only visually, through paintings and books. Virtually all the instruments played on these disks are in some ways ancestors of what can be heard today in a modern symphony orchestra. Munrow rightly cautions us not to think of them as primitive forerunners. Although they may lack the power, range and mechanical precision of present-day instruments, each one has a very special timbral characteristic which composers used singly or in combination to produce tonal blends that annot be achieved with modern counterparts.

"There is no orchestral instrument as strident as the shawm," notes Munrow, "as sweet as the gemshorn, or as hollow as the panpipes, nothing to compare with the nasal edginess of the rebec or the hiting rattle of the tromba marina, nothing to match the vocal timbre of the cornett or the rich buzz of the crumbern and regal. . . . The people of the Middle Ages and Renaissance liked gorgeous colors in their clothes, sharp contrasts in their paintings, and highly spiced dishes at their table. The characteristics of their musical instruments were equally individual and uncompromising."

It would be impossible to detail all the wonderful, highly spiced" sounds to be heard on these disks, so a few samples must suffice. The very first selection is clearly designed to set one's ears ringing (Munrow was a good showman as well as a musicologist): an anonymous 14thoriental shawm in duet with the brilliant clarion voice of a six-foot medieval trumpet, accompanied by the pulsating beat of nakers, tabor (varieties of small drums) and the tambourine. This is wildly extroverted outdoor music recalling the near-Eastern origins of the shawm, a double-reed parent of our comparatively gentle oboe. Doubtlessly the aggressive combination of shawm, trumpet and drums was first heard by Europeans when the Crusaders came face to face with a Saracen military band in the 12th century.

Despite its suggestive name, the rackett produces a soft buzzing tone, "almost as if one were blowing through a comb," according to "Syntagma Musicum,". Michael Practorius's Renaissance treatise on the instruments of his day. A consort of four racketts makes an especially beguiling combination on "Caro Ortolano" by the 16th-century composer Giorgio Mainerio. Plucked string instruments were legion during the years before 1600 and the examples here cover a wide range: harp, lyre, psaltery (plucked strings over a square soundboard), dulcimer (an ancestor of the cimbalon), lute, mandora (a smaller, more compact type of lute), gittern (a prototype of the guitar), cittern (a metal-string variation of the lute) and other related instruments such as citerone, orpharion, bandora and penorcon.

From such a rich palette of sounds, composers could construct an almost endiess variety of courtly entertainments. Even so, it must be kept in mind that the voice was still the king of instruments throughout these years and the most profound musical statements were always made in this edium. Instruments accompanied singers, provided light dance music or added an extra measure of pomp and circumstance to ceremonial functions. Munrow duly notes this in his introduction and points out how all Medieval and Renaissance instruments were measured by their capacities to imitate different facets of vocal timbre.

mand complete technical mastery over these often intractable instruments, but they gracefully voice each line and phrases.

A specialist in taming the intonation difficulties of ancient woodwinds, Munrow himself plays some two dozen instruments with assured virtuosity, overdubbing all four parts in a consort of shawms on ooe selection. It is just possible that . everything may sound too sauve and that the rougher, more raucous approach of another English old music group, Musica Reservata, comes closer to actual Renaissance performance practice (Munrow, interestingly enough, was a member of usica Reservata before starting his own ensemble).

Another quibble concerns the layout of the book. Muns lucidly written and crammed information, but the design is confusing as the four-column type threads its way around pictures, charts and captions in a rather haphazard fashion. (The book, by the way, is published separately by Oxford University Press and may be purchased on its own for $12.95; Angel's complete package with the two records costs $20.98.)

Anyone who samples this instructive and entertaining pair of disks will undoubtedly wish to explore the vast repertory of pre-Baroque music in greater detail. Sticking with the Early Music Consort there are numerous fine disks to choose from. The complete Renaissance band in full cry may be heard on Angel's 'Pleasures of the Court' containing 16thcentury dances by Susató, Byrd, Dowland, Nicholson and Morley, while the group offers a selection of Praetorius's delightful "Terpsichore" dances on another Angel disk together with several of the composer's sacred motets. The Consort provided the authentic background music for the two popular television series "Elizabeth R" and "Henry VIII and His Six Wives"; compositions used in the latter film are on Angel SFO 36895.

Another "Pleasures of the Royal Courts," a new Nonesuch release, features the sweetly modulated countertenor of James Bowman with the Consort in love songs by anonymous 13th-century trouvères and composers-in-residence at the courts of Philip the Good (15th-century Burgundy), Maximilian I (16th-century Germany), the Medici (16th-century Italy) and various Spanish rulers during the early 16th century. In music of more depth and substance on a recent Scraphire disk, the Consort gives a luminous reading of the Missa "Ge la face ay pale" by Guillaume Dufay (1400-1474), one of the great masters of his or any other musical era and a fastinating link between the Medieval and Renaissance ages.

With David Munrow's death, the future of the Early Music Consort is doubtful. Most groups of this nature deper on the vision and enthusiasm of a single individual (the New York Pro Musica, for example, could not survive long after its founder Noah Greenberg died). Even though Munrow's loss is a severe one for early music aficionados, others will surely take his place-England has already produced another formidable pre-Baroque scholar-performer in Anthony Rooley who leads his band of musicians, The Coosort of Musicke, in an ambitious four-record set on L'Oiseau-Lyre entitled 'Musicke of Sundrie Kindes."

The scope of these disks covers a wide range of secular Renaissance music between 1480 and 1620-a handy complement to Munrow's earlier three-record anthology of Medieval secular music, "The Art of Courtly Love," on Seraphim. Each record side in Rooley's collection is arranged into a self-contained program illustrating various aspects of this 140-year period: the Flemish school of Obrecht, Isaac and Josquin des Près which dominated Europe around 1500; the flourishing of Italian music at that time, particularly the frottola; the kaleidoscopic variety of the Freoch chanson as practiced by Jannequin, de Sermisy, Compère and others; the wide influence of the light Italian style throughout Europe during the 16th century; the fusion of Flemish, French and Italian styles in Spain and Germany; the Italian madrigal (Marenzio, Willaert, de Rore, Gabrieli); English music; and the transition period at the turn of the century leading to the

Of course even this four-hour compendium can only scratch the surface of such a vital and productive century. while the major musical statements were primarily reserved for sacred works, especially tha mass and motet. Still, listened a side at a time, this carefully planned, sensibly chosen and deltly performed survey vividly conjures up the sounds of the Renaissance, one of tha most colorful periods in the history of Western music.

and our minds uneasy because of Richard Pryor. We were listening, you see, to Richard Pryor on e long-playing record. Mr. Pryor, as anybody who has seen such movies as "Uptown Saturday Bingo Long and the Traveling All-Stars and " will tell you, is a very funny man. He also used y scary man, a hlack Lenny Bruce, before telehim clean up his act. His career is doing nicely movies, although not on television. He was, if television, at least misplaced: his flow was cut up his language—the dirty words and the multiple rences—was taken away from him, and so the was gone. There is simply no way a routine like listened to on the long-playing record—a convereen a wino and a junkie, with Mr. Pryor taking -would have been tolerated on television. And yet was an amazing piece of craft, a short story in and painful with a subtext of anger; we were anitizing, a laundering of the self until it shrinks e size of family enterainment, is of course one of al social purposes of television. If reality smells, t. (A side-effect is the feeling of liberation a per-eriences when he graduates from television to tha wies, and not very daring ones at that, suddenly n a whole planet of possibility when compared to ophobia of bits on the box. But what a collection of comedmany and varied the TV styles. Several styles were machina for dispensing one-liners, like Bob Hope o Marx; a pratfaller above and beyond the call of ike Milton Berle or Jerry Lewis; someone who ared about visual comedy, like Erme Kovacs.

a broad enough representation to think about the e comedy of topical comment, of self-deprecation, Juitur, of interpersonal abuse; ahaggy, lewd, milit-

le were sitting around the other night with our ant, blasphemous, comball, ad hominem, ad absurdum, ad thumbs bleeding because of tab-top beer cans nauseam and let stew-and the cooling of television. We've come a long, alienating way from vaudeville and the desperate desire to please. Instead of keystone, it is snow-cone comedy now. A certain invulnerability is required, a dissociation from your own material. (Somebody else wrote it, and if it isn't getting any laughs, you ad-lib against the writers, or against tha studio audience, and somebody else wrote the ad-libs, too.) There are, to be sure, throwbacks like a Carol Burnett or a Flip Wilson, but no sweat is the general rule. If this doesn't work, let's try that, it's all the same to me, life is a spectator-sport, you know Sport, he follows our band, hi Sport, you old athlete's foot, we lost another war today, if anybody finds it please call toll-frea unless New Jersey

I suspect this technical manipulation of the self, this protective and defensive cool, is a consequence of trying to work out a relationship with the medium. There is a etudio audience, seen, and an audience at bome, unseen. To which do you play? You are manufacturing your own authenticity. What a bind. Why not play them off against each other? Folks, I'm an innocent bystander, at the scene of an accident. Life is an anecdote that happened to somebody else. Blame

Then something odd happens to the material. The material becomes television itself, not the discrepancy between what ought to be, or whet was expected to be, and what actually is in the culture at large, but the discrepancy between what television is and what we are while we are suspiciously or mindlessly, watching television. Television becomes the culture. Remember how often commercials are parodled, and soap operas, and Westerns, and cop shows.

After limiting itself to exclude the anger, pain, streets and sweats of a Pryor or a Bruce, TV then proceeds to parody only what it has already deemed acceptable. It is safe to make fun of all which has been previously decided to be safe. Reality is made small; criticism of reality—a comic business-becomes smaller still. How interesting to bave a parody of a culture without having much of a culture. We tickla one another inside a straitjacker.

Which brings me finally to NBC's "Saturday Night Live." admit addiction. Surprise is a trip. But Chevy Chase and friends-have you ever thought about the concept of a "guest host"?-are too much congratulated. Their let's-see-if-we-canget-away-with-this impertinence, their scrummaging and prepschool smut, looks good only by comparison with what we've come to expect. After the blahs, "Saturday Night" resembles a whoopee. Bravely, the thick skull of Gerald Ford is thumped, the teeth and accent of Jimmy Carter boistered. So much for two-party politics. A farce is institutionalized, not

And the material is entirely TV culture, or vidcult. The press conference, the news broadcast, the satirizings of commercials, even the loving pan to the cameras lovingly panning the studio audience in search of a grinning jerk whosa mug-shot will be captioned as though be or she were on the precipice of winning three years of linoleum or Monty Hall's cheeks, whichever comes first-all is vidcult. What are we laughing at? At that which we have been instructed it is permissible to laugh about because it is unchangeable.

young Englishman spoke caimly yet assertively: "Michael, I wish to commis sion the design of ao atomic weapon, and then take it to Sweden to have it tested."

The speaker was not a terrorist or a representative of tioo; he was John Angier, a producer of "Nova," the scientific documentary series mounted by WGBH, this city's public-TV statioo, "Micheel" was Michael Ambrosino, then executiva producer of 'Nova." The conversation took place in August 1974, lo Ambrosino's office at the headquarters of WGBH, looking out on Harvard Stadium and the Harvard Business

Michael Ambrosino is a peaceful family man. He knew that the idea of a public-TV station sponsoring the design of an atomic bomb would present certain delicate legal, ethical, moral and political questions. He nonetheless approved project.

Angier crossed the Charles River to Cambridge, where he recruited a 20-year-old M.I.T. chemistry student who, using ooly unclassified source materials, researched and designed an atomic weapon within five weeks. Angier's Swedish experts concluded that the student's bomb might, indeed, work, and that if it did work, it would produce an explosion small by nuclear standards but devastating by most other standards. The result was "The Plutonium Connection," which aired nationally in March 1975 and was the single most successful "Nova" show to date in terms of critical and audience re-

That such a project was dreamed up and carried out et WGBH should not surprise regular viewers of public television, who frequently see the station's call-letters receding into an electric blue background during any given week. According to Anders Yocom, program coordinator for the Public Broadcasting Service (PBS) in Washington, WGBH provides more hours network programming than do any of the other 40 odd program-producing member stations of PBS. Furthermore, in the past half-dozen years, WGBH-produced programs have won 12 Emmys, 3 Peabody Awards and numerous other citations for excellence, as well as consistent

What accounts for this particular station's superiority in not only quantity but quality of public-TV programming? Who provides the inspiration behind such innovative productions?

According to Sylvia Davis, tha creative director for WGBH, tha station's success results from an etmosphere that fosters innovation, comblned with an ambitious fund-rising arm. "People are able to shape themselves bere," she said recently. There is a respect for eccentricity here that encourages peopla like Julia Child [of "The French Chef"] to develop. It is not as though we sensed a great need for a cooking show-but here was this potent woman with an obvious need to share her tal-

Miss Davis also credits the station's general manager, Michael Rice, with "encouraging us to take chances." She adds, "Mike is supportive when you're leaping into a void-and when you are highly competitive, as we are, that's a major asset." In addition to "The French Chef," these leaps have resulted in numerous highly "Crockett's Victory Garden," how-to gardening show; "Erica" (instruction in nee-dlework); "Joyce Chen Cooks" (Chinese cooking); "Theonie" (Greek cooking); "Making Things Grow" indoor (mostly Romagnoli's Table" (Italian cooking); "Evening at Pops," featuring Arthur Fiedler conducting the Boston Pops; "Evening at Symphony," with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, usually conducted by Seijl Ozawa; "Maggie and the Beautiful Mechine" (with exercise therapist Maggie Letvin) and "Zoom." (After a year of reruns, the popular eudience-participation show "Zoom" is again in production with a new cast of rugby-shirted pre-teen-agers; another children's show, "Rebop," a new series of 10minute documentaries about youngsters of various ethnic backgrounds, will make its debut this fall.)

In addition to its regular series, WGBH steadily churns out short series and one-shot programs on everything from sports ("Grand Prix Tennis," with Bud Collins) to politics (a 1975 dramatization of the latergate cover-up trial). "Arabs and Israelis," a sevenpart series that ettempted to explain the Middle East situation in buman terms, was aired early last year follow-economic terms: "We're working on a project now to dramatize Hawthorne's 'The Scarlet Letter.' It's a six-part series, and it will cost $500,-000 per episode. But we can huy British productions like 'Madame Bovary' for $15,000 to $30,000 apiece. Why should our donors, like Mobil, pay $3 million for six episodes of The Scarlet Letter when something like that is evailable?" Nevertheless, he says, work on "The Scarlet Letter" is going forward. Not all WGBH productions are that costly. The hudget for this year's surprise hit, "Crockett's Victory Garden," runs about $3,000 per halfbour show. And each show is done on location-location in this case, being a 75 by 75 foot square of dirt carved out of the WGBH employees' parking lot. "The soil," says Jim Crockett, the 60-year-old host of the series, "was the world's worst-blue clay that had become nearly as hard as concrete." When he began digging in April 1975, Crockett soon discovered that before it had been e parking lot, his garden plot had been a town dump; cultivation yielded all sorts of broken glass, twisted metal, and a whole, if rusty, eutomobile muffler. Nonetheless, by November of last year, Crockett had grown what he estimated to be $700 worth of groceries-and that doesn't includa the roughly 30 cantalopes which grew near the fence and were ing numerous problems in stolen right off the vines in workshop in neighboring Watertown, But most of the oew money has gone toward programs that are produced with the network in mind. For a while, this resulted in tensions within the station: people working on programs intended for only local showing-most notably local news and public affairs programs -complained that they did not receive the same kind of treatment that network-

"They were never quite serious, somehow," says Di-anne Dumanoski, a staff writer with the weekly Bosi ton Phoenix newspaper who left WGBH in 1974 after working for three years on "The Reporters," a news show that had been underwritten by the Ford Foundstion and specialized in cover-age of neighborhood events. There was never a real commitment to local news," she the station's president, David Ives, and Michael Rice, among other WGBH executives, of "chronic dilettantism": "There was a tremendous amount of agonizing over the purpose and mission of the station, but a tremendous lack of connection with the community. They might ask us to do a piece on bluecollar workers, not because blue-collar workers were doing anything ocwsworthy, but because they were trendy at the moment. And then they would lose interest." Devid Ives, the tough, dry Brahmin who is president of WGBH, acknowledges that Dumanoski may have a point, "But it is not a matter of ettitude," be claims. "It's a practical matter of who's got the dough. We don't do any programming except that which we believe will make local programming better."

Both Ives and Rice deny that the station's management bas an élitist attitude. As Ives puts it, "By broadcasting concerts, plays and other cultural events, we are making available to the general public events which until recently were available only to the top income brack-

According to Rice, the station is "first of all, a community broadcast service. When we come up with a new program, it is for our own audience. But because Boston is so rich in resources, the things that we develop become useful to people around tha world." He cites the station's close relationship with various nearby cultural institutions, notably the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and with Harvard, M.LT., and other area universities.

worries at WGBH. Austin Hoyt, who produced the conservative - oriented half of "The Advocates," a public affairs show with a debate format that aired nationally from 1969 to 1974, is concorned that in the future it may become more and more difficult for WGBH to pry money from the PBS cooperative to do public affairs programing.

In the early days, according to Hoyt, WGBH was "like a freewheeling band of brothers playing stickball along the Charles"—an atmosphere that encouraged improvisation and creativity. But, he says, mounting labor and money problems could divert creative energy away from where it should be.

Yet, for the present, WGBH continues to produce an impressive array of program-ming. As "Nova" producer John Angier says, "It is quite a flexible place, one that keeps up with changing demands and changing ideas. And management is not un-chases and distributes to PBS: "Classic Theater" (television adaptations of dramatic works by euthors ranging from Shakespeare to Bernard Shaw); "The Ascent of Man" (Jacob Bronowski's wideranging anthropological and historical survey); "Masterpiece Theater" (an umbrella titla covering a number of dramatic series, including "Upstairs/Downstairs," and "Shoulder to Shoulder") and "Monty Python" (a potpourri of zany slapstick humor), among others. Most of these acquisitions come from the British Broadcasting Corporation, and they give the oetwork a distinctly British and, soma say, élitist tone. Henry Becton, a young, redheaded lawyer who oversees cultural programming at WGBH ("cultural" meaning everything except public affairs), regrets this dependency on the BBC

hat's so special about German art? Why don't the Germans let more of it out? Are we missing something really great, or needn't we care? These questions are raised by the arrival at the Metropolitan Museum of four early German paintings from the Alte Pinakothek, in Munich (They will stay bere for two years, as part of an agreement by which the Alte Pinakothek plays host to three French Imssionist paintings from the Met.)

The pictures in question were painted during the lifetime of Albrecht Dürer. They are: "Two Wings from an Altarpiece" by Barthel Bruyn the Elder (1493-1555); "Two Wings from the Altarpiece of St. Gereoo" by Anton Woensam von Worms (Before I500-1541); 'The Lamentation over the Body of 'Christ" hy the Master of the Holy Kinship; and "St. Christo-pher with the Christ Child" by the Master of St. Christopher

The name of Bartel Bruyn has magic, in this context. No one who has been to the Wallraf-Richartz Museum in Cologna will forget tha outrageous festivity of his 'Three Kings." Kings were kings, in Bartel Bruyn's view, and he dressed up his three in the very height of fashion. Nothing was ton good for their visit to the Infant Jesus. Silks, furs and velvets abound. Embroidery runs riot. As for the traditional manger. oothing of it remains but e bundle of straw which looks as if it had been tied up by tha Yves St. Laurent of the day.

But—and this is the point—not everyone has been to tha Wallraf-Richartz Museum in Cologne. And the only way to know German painting and German sculpture is to go to Germany. (It helps to know German, too: barely one in a hundred of the relevant books is available in English). It isn't even a matter of going to three or four key museums; Nuremberg, Cologne, Munich, Dresden, Frankfurt, Berlin. Germany has to be covered town by town and village by village before we know what we are talking about,

In the course of that tour the enquiring visitor will find himself in places known to very few foreigners: Blickeburg, Insterburg, Eckernförde, Wolfenbüttel. Many of them have other claims on our attention-it was in Wolfenbüttel, for instance, that the semi-colon was invented-but the first fact about them is that painting, sculpture and architecture are integrated into the local life in ways that cannot be paralleled in a museum. (And what spectacular country too! No one forgets tha drive toward the ancient town of Coburg at that moment in high aummer when the flat-topped acropolis of the Veste seems to lift off in a haze of heat.)

No one small loan can take the place of these investigations. Nor can give it any idea of the panoramic richness of the German achievement in painting and sculpture between let us say, the birth of Dürer in 1471 and the death of Caspar David Friedrich in 1840. If anything, it may emphasize the gap which divides us from the Germans who were trying to come to terms with the idea that an individual human being may—just may—be the most important thing there is.

This really put them in a terrible bind. The Church was still the Church, yet the climate of the times in the Cologne School (to which three of the four artists belonged) was toward a high degree of individualization. Bartel Bruyn was one of the great portraitists of all time. For the most part he worked with ill-favored captains of commerce, and yet he managed to discover in each of them an inner glow. Some glows are more alluring than others, of course, and when Bartel Bruyn was faced with an irredeemable brute there wasn't much that he could do. But he managed to ally the humane study of individual physiognomies to the demands of the Church: no small feat, that.

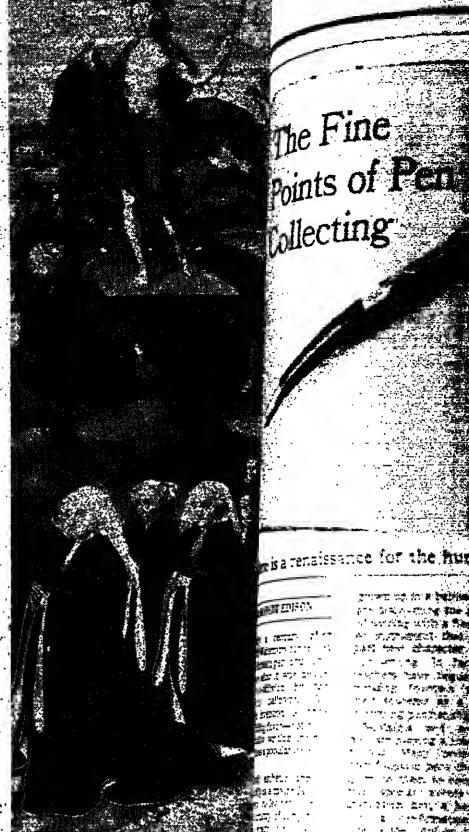

Cologne at that time was one of the great cosmopolitan cities of the West. But the paintings at the Met retain certain specifically German traits—some of them seductive, some of them not. The woodcut was at the basis of much of German art at that time, and the woodcut is necessarily a linear art. Anton Woensam mastered the art of the woodcut better than almost anyone, and his two scenes from "The Martyrdom of the Theban Legion" prove that he could carry over from woodcut an ideal lucidity of statement and the command of detail which we expect from a great Chief of Staff.

It does leak out, however, that as a man he was rather creepy. Agreed that in a scene of martyrdom people have to get their heads cut off, but there is in Anton Woensam'a account of the tribulations of the Thebans a most unlikable relish. Admiring as we may be of his organizational skills, we can't help noticing how that mailed fist grinds into the eyes of that severed head.

So these in many ways are disquieting pictures. From the refusal to idealize, for instance, we can well understand how generation after generation of foreign connoisseurs was disconcerted by the terrible bluntness of German painting. The ecstatic lyricism of Dürer was one thing, but the grimness of his contemporaries! The acidity of their color! The piling-up of fact after unpalatable facti

Foreigners couldn't come to terms with it-and just as well, too, since the Germans didn't want to let the pictures go. This is one aspect of the "true German art" of which Hans Sachs has something to say in the last scene of "Die Meistersinger." It isn't the whole of German art, and it is not entirely likable. But it is part of the history of European awareness. People painted these pictures in order that other people should understand their own natures. That is the highest function of art, and it is fulfilled with a rare perseverance in these loans from Munich.

On 'Counterfeit'

To the Editor:

Hilton Kramer's attitude in. his article "Our Museums Are Flooded with Counterfeit Art" [July 25] typifies the ar-rogance with which the museum-going public is treated hy art critics. Reproductions help us recreate in our imaginations the spirit, the anguish and the beauty of an original work. To the Editor: Cheers and cheers again for Mr. Kramer's superb essay on the "Our Museums Have Become Flooded with a Niagara of Counterfeit Art."

It would take a real optimist (which I am not) to belleve that even this statement may halt "the numbing abundance, etc." that is diverting attention "from the experience of art." But how much this needed saying in a atrong, loud voice!

LOUIS ZARA New York, N. Y.

To the Editor: At one time, when museums acrved a small, well-educated elite, that "private communion" hetween eudience and art work extolled by Hilton Kramer may indeed have taken place without any intermediaries. Today, however, the museum hosts a much larger, and far more motley group, even as It displays e far greater variety of works. It is no more realistic to expect the varlegated works in the museum to speak directly to museumgoers than to expect all listeners to respond intelligently to a new composition by Stockhausen, all readers to comprehend Joyce's later writings, or, for that matter, all those trained in classical Western painting to be moved by Chinese silk scrolls or the latest multi-media presentation concocted in the lofts of SoHo. For these unsophisticated, but well-intentioned, audience members, the intermediaries furnished hy artistic institutions serve a genuine need. Were the Photo-Secessionists Truly Avant-garde?

y is it that an approach to picture making condemned as conservative if not reactionary in painting is praised as progressive if not avantgarde in photography? I am thinking of the works of the Photo-Secessionists whose pictures were reproduced by Alfred Stieglitz in his celebrated publication, Camera Work, along with drawings, paintings and sculptures by such French modernists as Picasso, Matisse and Brancusi. I am thinking particularly of the photographs of Gertrude Käsebier and Clarence White, currently on view

This exhibition perfectly exemplified the kind of photograph that was reproduced in Camera Work from its founding in 1903 almost to its demise in 1917. The tone is set by Käsebier's "The Picture Book," which Stieglitz selected in 1902 to appear in Camera Notes, the predecessor to Camera Work Under a tree in a meadow sits a young woman in a long white dress, her long hair falling in two strands over her shoulder. Beside her sits a small child. a boy I think, absorbed in a book, and she is pointing out something in . The picture is steeped in a soft, dreamy, otherworldly atmosphere. The sunlight on the meadow and the shade of the tree indicates a pleasant summer day, but otherwise no cine of costume or setting tells us where we are or when. We are, in fact, oot in the real world at all but in Storybook

The same is true of picture after picture by Clarence White as well as Gertrude Käsebier. Storybook costumes and storybook settings and poses predominate. Languid ladies in vaguely Grecian or medieval dress wander through orchards or meadows or sit at windows gazing at crystal globes. Very young boys with grape leaves in their hair play pan pipes or wrestle nude in sun-dappled forest glades. The pictures are beautifully composed and lighted, and the high artistic aspiration of their makers is evident. However, they resemble the works of academic conservetives such as Thomas Dewing, Kenyon Cox or Abbott Thayer, or even popular illustrators such as Maxfield Partish, far more than they do the work of the School of Paris modernists, Indeed, they represent all that French and American modernists are usually presented as having revolted egainst.

Camera Work, Camera Notes and elsewhere, as well as platinum and glycerin prints by White and Käsebjer. The focus is soft, the values are close, and the artistic influences are the fashionable ones of the pre-modern era: Pre-Raphaelite, Japanese, Whistlerian. Käsebler's portraits of children, for which she was famous, frequently portray them in vaguely Holbeioish costumes and poses for which she was also famous. She even composes sentimental genre pictures of littla old white haired ladies who look pensive and resigned.

All this is charmingly done, and no one would wish it undone or otherwise done. But to think that it was avantgarde even in its time is to ignore even thing else that was being done at the time. What the Photo-Secessionists ectually did was to translate into photographic terms e number of different ways of picture painting that were already widely accepted in the early 20th century. These ranged from anecdo-tal genre and Old Master imitations to—at their most ad-vanced—the atmospheric tonalism of Whistler, which had so shocked Ruskin 25 years earlier in 1877. The Photo-Secessionists were not the only photographers doing this, either. Tha same kind of photographs were being made by all the other photographers who exhibited in the flourishing photographic salons of the era.

The technical procedures they sometimes adopted were the only thing the least hit avant-garde about the Photo-Secessionists and other early 20th-century salon photographers. In the current exhibition, there are several glycerin prints of Käsebier that have been worked over by hand to meke them look more like etchings or drawings, and in numerous pictures by both Käsebier and White the camera's natural tendency to record a wide range of grays has been deliberately thwarted, resulting in pictures of an unnaturally (but artistically) limited range of grays. In the 1920's and 1930's, young photographers such as Paul Strand and Edward Weston considered these practices old-fashioned and unphotographic; but when they were first introduced around the turn of the century, an older generation of photographers considered them outrageously new-fangled and unphotographic, Except for these technical procedures, however, the only thing thet was avant-garde about the Photo-Secessionists was

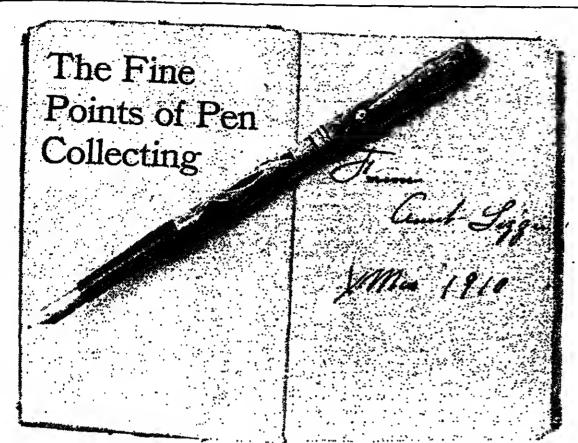

So why are the Photo-Secessionists thought to be avantgarde today? Partially it is because of their association with Alfred Stieglitz. Stieglitz did indeed introduce and promote many avant-garde painters and sculptors in his various galleries and publications, and even when his artists were not avant-garde, he operated in such an atmosphere of exclusiveness and "higher meaning" that they came to seem special to his devotees. As a result, posterity tends to think that all the artists he favored were avant-garde even when, like White, Käsebier and all the older Photo-Secessionists, they

In addition, the Photo-Secessionists have maintained a reputation as evant-garde because most people judge photographs and paintings by different standards when they should judge them by the same standard. By this I do not mean that a photograph should be judged by its success in imitating brushwork or other effects peculiar to painting nor do I mean that a painting should be judged by its success in achieving the detailed illusionism of a photograph. However, paintings and photographs are both pictures, and in any given period there are stylistic and iconographical standards that apply to all pictures however made.

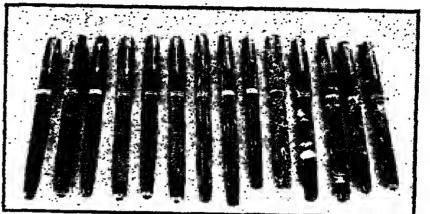

This is what people forget when thinking about the Photo-Secessionists. Most critics, curators and collectors know perfectly well what is and is not avant-garde in painting in any given era. They know, for instance, that in the first decade of the 20th century, when Picasso was painting "Les Demoiselles d'Avignon," soft-focus paintings of languid ladies in orchards and meadows were not avant-garde. When they come to photographs, however, they forget this. In their haste to recognize photography as a fine art, they gather up everything with any claim whatsoever to any kind of attention. Thus, the Museum of Modern Art has in its collection fine photographs by Gertrude Käsebier and Clarenca White, but nothing by the contemporary painters who were depicting the same subjects in the same mood and style. It is as if photography itself is now considered avant-garde the medium itself, regardless of what is done with it.

There is a renaissance for the humble fountain pen—for both those who write and collectors, too.

By ROBERT EDISON

Nearly a century after Louis E. Waterman conceived of the fountain peo, and some 30 years after it was driven into near-oblivion by the ubiquitous ballpoint, his splendid invention is once again finding favor-not only as a quality writing instrument but as a popular collect-grown up in a ballpoint world are discovering the pleasures of writing with a finely crafted instrument that can impart new character to one's handwriting. In fact, some teachers have begun recommending fountain pens to their students as a way of improving penmanship.

Nostalgia and sentiment also are playing a role in this revival. Many people still own founteio pens that were given to them to commemorate special events - a graduation day, a bar mitz-vah, a confirmatioo. One such is Mrs. Robert Christatos, who treasures a gold filigree Wahl pen "given to me on my 16th birthday by my parents. I wouldn't part with it for the world. It still writes like a dream."

Writer Barbara Ziegler becomes almost misty-eyed at the mention of her three modest Esterbrooks, which she purchased io a drug store during the 1950's. Aficionados still regard the low. priced Esterbrook with affection and talk foodly of its vast selection of smoothly gliding points which could be easily changed by the owner. Pens come in a huge variety of shapes, colors and sizes. There are big, blue marbieized beauties; slender, shimmering ones; bulky, "man-sized" models with mind-blowing patterns formed by Isminated rings of pearl and jet; imaginative, twotoned ripple motifs; cooservative mottled browns and vivid garden yellows; gleaming deep-sea green marvels; and rich, hand-finished wood grain effects magically created in hard rubber (this is the substance used in early pens, and is still preferred by purists over the plastic used in later models).

In Los Angeles, a funky new fashlon fad is wearing jazzy antique pens as jewelry. Teen-agers who have oever seen a blotter or an ink well are having pens remade into clips, pins and necklaces (a barking back, intended or otherwise, to the 1920's and 30's, when petite ladies' models, worn from the neck oo ribbons or chains, were the rage). This penchant for pen jewelry has caused one New York collector to come op with a charm bracelet for his young daughter which bas dangling pen poiots of various sizes serving as charms.

Few collectors or dealers will place the same value oo specific pens since there really is no definite standard to go by. For example, a genuine Big Red, officially called the Parker Duofold, sold for $7 when first produced back in 1921. Some people thought the price too high then, and the pen too big. But today a private newsletter circulated among collectors advises

How to Repair Ceramic Tile

By BERNARD GLADSTONE

Although ceramic tile normally needs little or no maintenance, even after years of scrubbing and hard wear, there are times when repairs are required. This may happen when individual tiles work loose, when grout joints crack or become so badly stained that regrouting is required, when soap dishes or toothbrush holders break loose, or when joints between tub and tile walls pop open and need refilling.

Wall tiles that seem loose or about to fall out should be repaired as soon as possible to keep moisture from getting behind them and thus causing further deterioration, and to keep them from falling out completely and possibly cracking (it's often difficult to find new tiles that will match exactly). Loose tiles can be replaced quite easily by using one of the ready-mixed waterproof tile cemeots which are sold for this purpose in almost all hardware stores, or one of the silicone rubber adhesivesealants which are sold for use around tubs.

After removing the loose tile by prying or tapping gently to avoid chipping or damaging the tile next to it, scrape out all loose cement or mortar from behind it,

However, if they decide to shoot in the studio, a set has to be huilt, furnishings and props rented.

Then comes the choosing of the model. Models have many copies of a good portrait made, and these are called head shots, with measurements on the back. The model agencies aend them to photographers and ad agen-

Photographers keep these filed according to types; juniors, children, older adults, high-fashioo, etc. In this case the head shots of "women, high-fashioo" are taken out. The director and the photograpber go through them. They are looking for a model with dark shoulder - length hair. They may even have a certain model in mind. Often, top models are heavily booked, and may not be available oo the day planned for the abooting, and the shooting may be re-scheduled around her availability. The photographer may have a fashion stylist on his staff, or he may call on one who is freelance. The fashloo stylist has contacts with designers and dress manufacturers and will obtain a dress suggested in the layout. If some special jewelry is required, the stylist will go to a jewelry designer, or a store and reot it. The prop hunter does not make final decisions about the furnishings, but will take ootes, or make sketches. or take several polarolds of different things. The final choices are made hy the photographer.

For this shot he chooses an ornate marble-topped table, a tall Chinese vase to staod io the corner of the room, and a small one for the table, and an Oriental rug. Everything must be in the studio for the day of the shooting. Most rentals are for three days to a week, in case a re-take is required.

The carpenter must plan his work so that the two walls with the fan-topped window and door are ready, and wallpapered, and in position in the studio on time. Since everyooe's work has been coordinated, everything is ready on the morning of the shooting; the set is up, the furniture and props have been delivered, and the dress is on hand. The model comes in two hours before the ahooting. Evao though the studio dressing room ia like a small beauty salon, the hairdresser arrives, with the pins, the lotions, the curlers, the combs, the brushes, and the blowers. The photographer, his assistant, the ad ageocy art direc-

the floor, the rug is rolled out, and covered with wrapping paper until the shooting. The truck from the florist shop arrives. Two men bring in a hanging plant, a variety of flowers, and plenty of extra greens which the stylist will arrange in the two vases. They also bring in several small potted trees and bushes to be placed outside the fantopped door and window. The assistant adjusts the lights so it looks like a garden. The photographer looks into the camera. The layout is next

A break; lunch is brought in. Who is on hand for the shooting-the phptographer, his assistant, his rep (salesman), the carpenter, two stylists, the hairdresser, the art director, and his assistant, two people from the client, and of course, the model.

She comes out of the dressing room. Everything about her appearance is checked. She does look marvelous. When she goes over to the table, only then does the art director place the products on the table.

The photographer takes a few polaroids agaio, and a few small adjustments are made. The camera is raised. When the shooting starts, everyone is quiet. It is like a formal quiet dance between the model and the photographer. There is an invisible coonectioo between the two of them. He gives her some directions, she follows them. He tells her how great she looks. A rhythm is set up and there is a quiet excitement oo the set, a creative tension pervades the studio.

During the shooting, the assistant is standing by. He puts a filter in front of the lens, at the photographer's direction, he takes it away. He adjusts a light, he unloads the camera, he puts fresh film in it.

Although she cannot move much, the model doesn't just stand there stiffly, she knows: just how to project the look, the feeling that's needed for this shot. It's remarkable how she transforms herself into the person wanted for the photograph. She knows how to keep her face and hody animated

She has seen so many pictures of herself that she knows exactly how the camera sees her, and how to give what it wants; exactlywhat facial muscles to move, exactly the right tilt to her head. She faces straight front, then slightly sideways; she touches the bottles: sha holds one up. The hairdresser, who has been just out of camera range, steps in every so often and fixes her hair.

The art director whispers to the photographer, who steps aside, and the art director looks into the ground glass. He directs the stylist to move some of the products around white flowers are added to the bouquet on the table.

In less than an hour, the shooting is over, 20 rolls of 120 color film have been exnosed. A messenger from the color lab picks up the film. Although the photographer has shot umpteen jobs like this, nothing is ever left to chance. A few test rolls will be processed first to determine the correct processing times for a perfect color rendition. The set is left up in case a retake will be reouired.

Norman Schwartz, 31, is a creative director at an advertising agency and one of a new breed of young collectors who have learned to be do-it-yourselfers in the course of pursuing their hobby. Mr. Schwartz discovered fountain pens about four years ago, at an antiques fair, and was immediately hooked.

"I started snatching them up whenever and wherever I could, and in whatever condition," he said. "Before then, I hadn't realized that there had ever been such a perfectly conceived writing instrument, displaying such pride of craftsmanship. Then I began tracking down places where I could have my pens fixed. Pen repairing is an old craft, and most of the men practicing it are old, too. I found them to be extremely secretive about their techniques and their sources for replacement parts."

Schwartz taught himself how to replace rubber sacs and other components of the fountain pen. "I broke plenty of pens," he readily admits, "but now I do all my own repair work."

He considers pen collecting an advecture. "The go most anywhere looking for new ber is very sare and greatly contacts. Estate sales are great. Almost every old house has an attic, and in that attic there's invariably a cigar box, and in that box are a bunch of old pens, some of which may even work."

Michael Schapiro, 33, is a producer of television commercials. He first became acquainted with the character of the fountain pen when he happened to rent one for a commercial which called for a 1920's background.

"I own six of them now." he said enthusiastically, "and what turns me on is not so much their names, as their histories, the words they may have written. To me, that is the really intriguing aspect of pen collecting, and the most captivating part of all. If each one of those pens could speak, what a tale it would have to tell!

Time was when the major pen manufacturers all reaired their own products, but that is no longer true for fountain pens. Parker bought Eversharp's pen division in 1957 and today, the big three -Parker, Sheaffer and Waterman - just don't maintain repair departments the way they used to.

Parker repairs their own fountain pens whenever possible, for a nominal fee. But a recent request for a Vacumatic filling mechanism produced a business card which the clerk gave to the customer, containing the address of M.C. Flynn.

Sheaffer does some repair work on its fountain pens, but they don't seem to promote the service. Anyone who mails an old pen to them stands a good chance of getting it back in good working order, with a bill enclosed. However, a telephone inquiry about repairs will probably meet with the polite suggestion to try the Fountain Pen Hospital or M.C. Flynn.

Waterman has been taken over by a conglomerate and is apparently out of the re-

Keeping a Hand In

Dick Frey is apt to feel disappointed whenever he's lotroduced to an aodience. His hosts tend to dwell on . his more obvious attributes: President of the International Bridge Press Association; WEST Chairman of the Goren Editorial Board; dean of American bridge writers; longtime editor of "Tha Cootract Bridge Bulletin," published by the American Contract Bridge League; and euthor of several books.

But like every true bridge player, he prefers to be known for his exploits at the table, which took place before many of today's experts were born. He was a member of the original Four Aces, at a time wheo there were Five Aces; he was a favorite partner of Ely Culbertson; and after a five-year retirement he returned to the tourna-. ment scene in 1942 to win three major titles inside a year-the Vanderbilt, the Spingold and the Goldman

The club stopper seemed too tenuous for a no-trump game, although that would have succeeded, thanks to the even diamond split, the favorable location of the heart queen, and inability of the defense to take five club

Frey therefore attempted a diamond game, expecting to ruff nne or two club losers in the dummy. Unfortunately for him West could also foresee that possibility and made the good lead of a trump. Now Frey saw that he would be limited to ona club ruff, and be would be a trick short even if the heart finesse succeeded. So instead of trying for a club ruff he took the heart finesse, which he would need in any case, and tried a low spade toward

Mario Hirsch

Ninth Avenue and 45th Street isn't exactly the heart of mid-town Manhattan. Which means, if I depended on window shoppers for business, I'd starve.

So, what I do is make sure I give people a damn good reason to come to my store. In fact, I give them two reasons... Prices that can't be beat and service that no one else even comes close to. Ill give you a Nikon F2S, Nikon F2, or a Nikkormat at the lowest price anywhere... try and get it for less.

And when it comes to service - everyone comes to Hirsch Photo. That's because I spend time with my customers. I don't give them the bum's rush. I'll spend an hour with them whether they're interested in a $700 camera or a $20 Instamatic.

I don't pressure people either. If you don't buy from us, fine. I know you'll be back because nobody else will treat you as good as we do. I guess, what it all comes down to, is at Hirsch Photo we don't hand people a line.

SAMUEL A. TOWER

The red, white and hlue of the Stars and Stripes are symbols to mark 200 years of American independence on commemoratives from 'two nations in whose creation the United States played a vital role. Symbols are among the facets of Biceotennial issues from ebroad that make up one of the great omnibus issues of the year.

Israel, a young nation but itself a bastion of democracy in its part of the world, has issued a single stamp in the denomination of four Israeli pounds that shows the number "200" created out of stripes except for a field of atars in the upper half of the "2" and a part of the first "O." The tab sccompanying the stamp bears the familiar star symbol of the American Revolution Blcentennial, The design, the work of Adrian Lucaci, a Rumanian immigrant to Israel, beat out in final competition three other designs that showed North America with the lower 48 states and Alaska in three colors, used the American flag in the shape of a dove of peace and featured the Bicentennial symbol.

The commemorative, according to the Israelis, not only honors the "powerful friend whose struggle for freedom, independence and security two centuries ago was not so very different from that of the young state of Israel in our own days," but acknowledges the "decisive contribution of the United States of America to the establishment, development and security of the state of

Incidentally, Israel is planning to establish a philatelic museum in Jerusalem as part of the Israel Museum, American philatelic circles, dealers and collectors long friendly to Israel, are responding to this new cause. Information oo ways of taking part in espousing the venture is available from L. Straus, American Friends of the Israel Museum Philatelic Divislon, 4 East 54th Street, New York, N. Y. 10022.

Nationalist China on the island of Taiwan, which has been sustained and buttressed by the U.S. ever since the remnants of the Chiang Kai-shek forces retreated there as the Communists conquered mainland China in the wake of World War II, has issued two stamps of like design. Intended to recall the ties between Americans and Chinese, who were allies in the second world war and friends for many years before, the stamps depict the flags of the two countries hot each has a different background color and the denominations differ. "U. S. A. Bicentennial" appears in English and Chinese. Chad has combined the ideas of Israel and National-

American flags on a 150franc nirmail issue.

The Dutch, whose ties to America go back to long before the Revolution, who have been allies in two world wars and who share with the U. S. the spirit of tolerance and freedom, have put their own special symbol on their Bicentennial commemorative a singla four-color 75-cent horizontal. The stamp features a detail from an approximately 200-year-old movable calendar from the isle of Ameland, carved in wood and handpainted. The calendar shows two women figures in symmetric position, each waving an American flag, with a hald eagle hetween them. While the Revolution was still going on, John Adams in the summer of 1780 visited the Netherlands seeking recognition of the American cause, In 1782 the States General of the seven united provinces of the Netherlands recognized the U. S. unanimously, as required by law. John Adams

Like the Netherlands, Belgium shares with the U. S. pre-Revolution ties and the bonds of mutual ordeals. It has combined two symbols in its philatelic celebration of our Bicentennial A 14-franc vertical multicolor reproduces the symbol of the American Revolution Bicentennial Administration. Setenant with the stamp is a coupon that reproduces the text that appears on the memorial in New York's Battery Park. The monument was erected in 1924 as a gift from the District Council of Hainaut to commemorate the 300th anniversary of the arrival of the first Belgian immigrants in America.

ambassador to the Nether-

South Korea, where American troops still remain in the aftermath of an invasion by North Korea that touched off the Korean War, has issued a set of five se-tenant

'zoo" and early British and 100-won stamps replete with red, white and blue symbols. One shows a 1776 flag of 13 stars in a circle and the present 50-star flag. Another shows a map of the U.S. in red and white stripes with the heads of the sculptured Presidents at Mount Rushmore where the stars would be. Others show the Statue of Liberty, the Liberty Bell and the First Man on the Moon. Each stamp also bears the red, white and blue Bicentennial symbol. Gibraltar in a four-color 25-pence vertical commemorative has combined the star Bicentennial symbol with its own coat of arms.

An issue both unusual and instructive is a set of five from the Cayman Islands that uses as symbols on Bicentennial commemoratives tha seals of the 13 original states and the Great Seal of the U. S. itself. Seals, far more than flags, provide information about the nation's past; they embody, symbolically and factually, the ideals, traditions and history of the country. Attesting to the importance of seals is that on the very day the Declaration of Independence was proclaimed the Continen-Congress appointed a committee of Benjamin Franklin, John Adams and Thomas Jefferson to "bring

United States of America." A 10-cent issue from the Caymans shows the seals of Georgia, Deleware and New Hampshire. The Georgia seal has three symbolic pillars of government and a vessel taking on board hogsheads of tobacco and balea of cotton. The seal of Delaware has a rifleman and a man with a hoe supporting a shield bearing an ear of Indian corn and a sheaf of wheat and an ox. New Hampshire's seal, showing a vessel being constructed in a boatyard, goes back to 1775 when it did away with the royal seal, South Carolina, New Jersey and Maryland are on a 15-cent stamp. South Carolina's seal recalls the repulse of the British attempt to invade Charleston and shows a falled oak for the defeated British ships and a palmetto whose logs shielded the fort guarding the harbor. The seal of New Jersey has three plows for agriculture, a horse's head used on early coins, a helmet for sovereignty, the Goddess of Agriculture and Liberty holding a staff with a Phrygian liberty cap. Maryland's seal bears the Calvert and Crossland arms of the families of its founder, Lord Baltimore.

A 20-cent has the seals of Virginia, Rhode Island and Massachusetts. Virginia's shows the figure of Virtue clad as an Amazon treading on Tyramy underfoot and bears the motto "Sic Semper Tyrannus." Rhode Island's seal, bearing an anchor symbol of hope, goes back uo-changed to 1647. The 1775 seal of Massachusetts shows a Colonist holding Magna Carta with one hand and a sword in the other. .

On a 25-cent stamp are the seals of New York, Connecticut and North Carolina, New York's is dominated by a scene of ships in the Hudson River and symbols of its Dutch and English heritage. The seal of Connecticut has three vines, helieved to stand for the state's first three towns. The seal of North Carolina shows deities representing Liberty and Plenty, a cornucopia filled with what the state raised and stalks of grain.

On a 30-cent is the seal of Pennsylvania, bearing a white-sailed ship, a plow and sheaves of wheat, the Statue of Liberty and America's Great Seal, with its eagle bearing a sheaf of arrows for defense and an olive hranch for peace,

The American eagle standing on a striped shield with the Liberty Bell beside it was used on a 100-franc single from Mali, Uruguay showed the American flag and its own and the Bicentennial symbol. Haiti also used the Bicentennial symbol on two stamps: one showing an early sirmail stamp of Haiti in tribute to the U.S. Constituan inscription dedicated to the 800 Haitians who fought in the Revolution. Symbols of instantaneoua recognition, at least to Americans if not to its own people, appear on a set of four from Bangladesh that depicts the Liberty Bell on a 30 poisha, the Statue of Liberty on a 2.25 taka, the Mayflower on a 5t and the four Presidents on Mount Rushmore

The Statue of Liberty, Independence Hall and the Capitol in Washington are used on a set of three from San Marino. Flags and the Statue of Liberty plus the Bicentennial symbol are on issues from Anguilla.

Samuel F. B. Morse. This commemoration of these two outstanding 19th century scientist-inventors is entirely appropriate to the obverse or face design of the bill. As illustrated below, it is an allegorical depiction of Science, the dominant central figure, introducing two children, representing Steam and

Electricity, to a pair of seated figures, representing Commerce and Manufacture. This was the design reproduced on the souvenir card offered by the Bureau at the 1972 A.N.A. convention; it is, of course, no longer available. The 1976 B.E.P./A.N.A. souvenir card is priced at $1.50. In addition to being available at the Bureau's convention exhibit, it can also be ordered by mail. The maximum number of cards per purchase is five. The mailing address is: '76 A.N.A. Souvenir Card, Bureau of Engraving &

Printing, Washington, D.C. 20228. Orders should be accompanied by the proper remittance in a check or money order (no cash!); use a letter-size sheet for ordering; print full return address, including zip code. Deliveries will not begin until sometime after Aug. 24. After Sept. 23 an unlimited number of cards can be ordered, unless stocks have already been depleted. The card will be withdrawn from sale on Nov. 22, or upon depletion of stock, which-

Your preprinted free-standing insert in the Sunday New York Times beats direct mail -any day of the week.

It's a winner-a money-saving alternative to direct mail—that gives you a bonus in advertising effectiveness, too.

Instead of inserting your folder or brochure into an ordinary envelope and mailing it out to selected lists, put it into one of the most eagerly opened packages your prime prospects get every Sunday: The New York Times.

Name your market

Enclosed in the Sunday Times your promotion piece can be distributed to the full national circulation of the Sunday Times or to as few as 50,000 households in exactly the areas you want to reach. Cover the rich suburban markets of New York City...in New Jersey and Connecticut. Find your best prospects in the Boston, Chicago, Philadelphia markets. In fact, all the giant upscale markets of The New York Times are within your reach. With preprinted freestanding inserts in The New York Times.

It's cost-efficient, too

Your promotion inserted in the Sunday Times is a really profitable alternative to the soaring cost of direct mail. You save not only on postage, but on the costs of handling and mailing. It's not a question of saving, but how much you'll save. Why not find out all the details? Write or call Ron Moss, manager, Special Advertising Projects.

The lesson began. There are two parts to the puzzle, Louis Smirnow, explained. The root (understock) upon which the tree peony (scion) is grafted comes from the herbaceous peony. Experience has shown that the doubles provide the hest thick roots, 1 like to use plants et least four years old. The root pieces should be four inches long and a half-inch thick."

The pleces were trimmed from several root clumps that had been dug up earlier in the day. Shorn of leaves, they were just heaped in a small hunch looking so much like a bunch a garden discards.

The next step was to obtain the ecion. Tha variety to he propagated that day was Arcadia, a Lutea bybrid with pale yellow single flowers. Mr. Smirnow chose a vigorous growing upright branch and checked it to see that It had two nodes. These are tiny oobs that were beginning to form at the axil. where the leaf hlade joins the

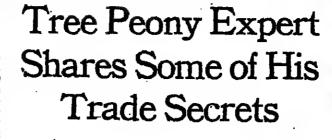

When he was satisfied that be had selected a good scion. be used a single-edge razor blade to make a clean slanting cut. And with the same hlade, he knicked off the leaves. Whet appeared to be just a stick was actually a future tree peony.

The marrying of the graft and sclon is the trickiest part eccording to Mr. Smirnow. The graft must be a tight fit. He shaped a V notch at the top of the understock to match the size of the wedgeahaped end of the scion. When he inserted the scion into the notch in the rootstock, be was pleased to see he had e perfect fit.

With plastic tape, the graft was wrapped tightly, lika a bandage so that all exposed areas were protected. Then it was secured with a tiewrap, and the label attached.

Tree peonies are grafted in August, Mr. Smirnow said, because the buds for the following season are just starting to form. The Lutea hybrids, with mainly yellow flowers. are grafted the first part of the month while the larger flowered Japanese bybrids are grafted later.

When completed, the grafts are stored in the coldframa and there they will remain until April. Rooting media

The grafts are set deeply into this rooting medie and completely covered by it, end wetered. Later in the fall, a three-locb layer of wood chip mulch goes on top and just before real cold weather, a plastic tarpaulin plus another two inches of bark mulch is used to keep the grafts pro-tected through the winter

"The normal 'take' for grafts is anywhere from 30 to 50 percent. That's pretty good. Last year I bad a 70 percent take and I was beginning to think I was a genius," Mr. Smirnow added. Next April when weather begins to settle, Mr. Smirnow will uncover the coldframe gradually. This is the thrilling part for him when he sees what ectually has happened to the bundreds of grafts he made the year before.

"Some of them can be transplanted into nnrsery beds. Or some can remain in. the coldframe. A few young plants may flower in 1978 but most of them will not blossom until 1979 when they are three years old. That's the age I sell my plants." Japanese hybrids are about $9 a plent while the Luteas are anywhere from $12.50 to $15. Mr. Smirnow publishes a full color catalog of his tree peonies for $1 refunded with orders, available from 85 Linden Lane, Gien Head P.O., Brookville, N.Y. 11545.

Scion of tree peony is inserted into notched understock, wrapped and set into a coldframe. Young plants will bloom in their third year in May.

Louis Smirnow was won over by tree peonies 40 years ago when he and his wife, Anna, bought their first house in the Sheepshead Bay section of Brooklyn for $6,100. He wanted to do what he saw his neighbors doing in their yard, gardening, so he paged through a oursery catalog and selected tree peonies. Ha ordered three plants.

"That was the beginning," Mr. Smirnow said, "in my tiny. 10 by 20 garden. Later I joined the American Peony Society, read, and learned all I could. The society encouraged me to go public, into commercial business, because there were so few enthusiasts for tree peonies in those days."

Going public for Mr. Smirnow merely meant spending more of his free time in the reer was already established as a credit manager in the men's wear field.

When he reached retirement age, Louis Smirnow was not ready to gult and tree peonies were not filling that much of his schedule. He went back to school to brush up on his knowledge of finance and gained a license as a stock broker. He is now with the Locust Valley office of Sterling, Grace and Co.

The shipping season will start soon for this modest one-man nursery business, "I have a good tima filling out the orders in the basement. There may be 300 to 400 to fill, involving several thousand plants, But it's not top much work for a man my, age," Mr. Smirnow said. "I'm: just 80." Joan Lee Faust

Rose of Sharon

Maybe everyone has noticed; this is a fine year for rose of Sharon. With flowers resembling the old-fashioned hollyhocks and oval leaves with delicate notches, what could be handsomer. The nice thing about this shrub, it chooses to flower in that summer histus, after the opulence of spring and before the autumn colors.

The similarity of rose of Sharon flowers and those of hollyhock isn't too off base, for both plants belong to the Mallow family. The rose of Sharon is actually one of the hibiscus (H. syriacus) and is sometimes called by another common name, shrub aithea. The Sharon part of the nama refers to the plain of Sharon, near Palestine. The shrub is believed to have been introduced to the Middle East over the old trade routes from China.

Not to add to the confusion, but just to keep the record sraight, there is yet another plant known as rose of Sharon. a low growing evergreen form of St. John's-wort (Hyperi-

Hibiscus syriocus is a relatively simple shrub to grow. It thrives in average soil and does well as a screen planting from neighboring properties. The trick is to keep the plant shapely by pruning. Since it blooms on wood that grew this spring, pruning for shaping should be done next winter or in early spring as soon as it's comfortable to work outside. Some like to prune these plants hard for a tight compact, floriferous display. Others just trim them to keep them tidy and to prevent them from overgrowing their

There are many cultivars (cultivated varieties) available now. Their colors range from laundry perfection white to soft pinks, deep reds and on to purples and hlues. Flowers may be the large old-fashioned singles, by far the most interesting, or the doubles and semi-doubles which often look like so much crepe paper. Now while these shrubs are in their finery, the differences in flower form and color can be sought out and particular favorites can be selected for planting later this season. Gardeners who are near the salty breezes of the ocean and Long Island Sound have found that this one is a decorative plus for their grounds. Just be sure to keep them watered in dry weather and be patient for a few years until the young plants get their roots settled down.

Answers/Ouestions

WINDOWBOX ANTS (Aug. 1). E.R.N., New Haven, Conn. transplanted flowers from their garden to an apartment window box and with them transported a colony of ants. He wondered if the ants will be destroyed by the cold weather or if the colony will survive to next summer. Wa checked with Prof. William L. Brown entomologist at Cornell University who said that the answer depends on the particular kind of ant, It is not likely that winter will kill the colony. The best solution would be to scoop the soil out of the window boxes at the end of the growing season and spray a household insecticide into it, mixing well, or baking the soil in the oven at a low temperature for about an hour to sterilize it.

PALM FLOWERS (Aug. 1)

L, H., Brooklyn, N. Y., has a 22-inch palm growing under fluorescent lamps. It flowers every two months and he asked if he can propagate from these flowers. The palm flower is rather inconspicuous and a mature seed pod would have to develop before any form of propagation could be carried out. According to Taylor's Encyclopedia of Gardening, "Because few greenhouse paints ever produce either flowers or a trunk

And it practically goes without saying, once the aim into their exact identification is most difficult. The technical char-IS in this family are mostly in the flowers and fruit. neither of which is normally produced until the plant has grown a trunk." Ed.

EGGPLANT (Aug. 1)

C.M.W., Pleasantville, N.Y., asked if anyone could explain why his first-year eggplant leaves were wilting and hrowning. Eggplant belongs to the same family as tomato which is susceptible to soil-borne fungus diseases verticillium and fusarium wilt. If tomatoes were grown previously in the same soil where the eggplants are now growing, the tomato wills may be affecting the eggplants. The solution would be a new site for the eggplants next year. Ed.

MORE ON WOODCHUCKS (Aug. 1)

Here are two more ideas on the question from Dr. Z.I., Orangeburg, N.Y., how to conquer woodchucks. Mrs. Francis H. Horan, a Connecticut reader, suggests, "Plant beebalm (Monarda). Let it spread through the flower garden and not just in proper clamps. I have it in scarlet red, magenta pink and light pink. It even works in beans. Incidentally, this remedy will not deter rabhits. I also have a dog." And from Mrs. William Roach Jr., a New Jersey reader, 'The only method that has worked for me is that of filling in regularly and thoroughly the main entrance of their burrows. They are near the edge of cleared land, frequently on a bank behind a tangle of brambles. The entrance must be filled in every time he or she reopens it. It may take a week of daily attention. Eventually the woodchucks get the idea that the neighborhood is deteriorating and they move along to forage elsewhere."

Mrs. J.S., Bangor, Maine, had a jack-in-the-puplit flower this year with two pulpits. She asked if this is unusual and bow to go about propagating the wild flower. Graham Purdy, e New ... York State reader, writes, "Jack-in-the-pulpit seeds will grow if there is enough coarse mulch, at least a half-inch. Cocoa hulls are the right texture. I bava had about a doxen growing in an area three-feet square."

Adhesive can be spread onto back of tile with putty knife.

Calking is best for joint between tile and tub.

wipe off the excess, leaving a slightly concave, neat filling that will match the other joints in the wall.

Soap dishes or toothbrush bolders that come loose can be replaced in much the same manner as a loose tile. They usually are the sama size as a tile (some are tha size of two tiles), so that they fit in the same size opening.

If the cement or mortar behind the soap dish is still sound, and if the depression left is fairly shallow, then the strongest repair can be made by replacing the soap dish or holder with a twopart epoxy cement, rather than tile cement (epoxy will hold better in thin lavers). If the hole that must be filled is sizable, use one of the putty-type epoxies; if the hole is shallow, use one of the semi-paste or liquid com-

After spreading the epoxy ment or tile adhesive on the back of the holder, it is essed into place so that its base sits level with the surrounding tiles. To hold it in place while the adhesive sets, long strips of adhesive tape or masking tape should be used vertically and horizontally. The tape should be left in place for 24 bours, after which it can be removed and the joiot around the dish or holder grouted as previously

When a tile breaks or is missing, then the only choice is to try and buy one or two matching tiles. Since this is not always possible, the next best bet is to buy one or two patterned tiles in a color that will hlend or harmonize with the existing tiles (patterned tiles are available at all tile

In the case of a broken soap disb or toothbrush holder, if no pieces are missing, the unit can be glued back together with epoxy cement. However, if patching is impossible, then it may be necessary to buy a new one, but make certain it has the same size base. If the coinr cannot be matched, then it's best to buy one in a contrasting or harmonizing color. When it is necessary to cut tiles to fit-for example, when half tiles must be replaced in a corner or near the floor-the simplest method is to first score the tile on the glazed side with a glass cutter. Then place the tile face up over a large nail or small metal rod and press down hard on both sides of the cut (by stepping on it; or of the hands). The tile should break neatly along the line scored.

For curved cuts (to fit around large pipes, etc.), score with the glass cutter first, then "bite" off the waste by using the tip of a pair of pliers or a pair of end cutting pliers (called

A frequent problem on ceramic tile walls in or near showers and tubs is a darkening or discoloring of the grout joints. If this is merely dirt then scrubbing with astrong detergent and a small, stiff brush should remove it. However in some cases it is mildew, rather than dirt, and detergeot will not remove this. In this case the joints should be scrubbed with a toothbrush dipped into fresh laundry bleach mixed half and half with water. After each section is done, it should be flushed off with plenty of clean water. In extreme cases where no amount of scrubbing will remove the discoloratioo, the only other solution is to scrape out some of the old grout with a pointed tool (the edge of a chisel or a beverage can opener) to a depth of about inch, then apply fresh grout as described above.

When joints keep opening around the top of the tub where it meets the tile oo the walls, then the best bet is not to use a regular grout since this may just crack out again. Instead, use a flexible calking compound or sealant that is sold for this purpose in all hardware and paint stores. Various types of sealants are available in tubes, but the longest lasting variety is one of the silicone rubber brands. These come in a choice of colors, as well as white, but to insure a good bond they should only be applied to a clean dry joint which has most of the old grout re-tally, bere is how the delegate count stood: Of the 1,130 needed to nominate, Mr. Ford had 1,119, 11 short; of those 367 are legally bound. Mr. Reagan held 1,034, or 96 short; S71 are bound. Uncommitted are 106. What is happening this week. The official events are the keynote address on Monday, the procedural and platform reports on Tuesday, the Presidential nomination Wednesday and the Vice Presidential Thursday, along with acceptance speeches.

But what will really happen depends on a series of incalculables. In an effort to keep secure the delegates be has and to win those he does not through Presidential sussion, Mr. Ford said he planned to go to Kansas City todey for a series of meetings with delegates and delegations, Mr. Reagan will try to force on the floor issues he lost in committee in pursuit of his major objective: to push the convention past the first roll call.

Mr. Reagan's chances of overtaking Mr. Ford may he severely damaged by the outcome of a meeting of the 30-vote Mississippi delegation that will to decide whether to abandon the state's unit rule. The conservative delegation is undecided, and if it should split Mr. Ford is thought to stand to gain 15 to 20 votes,

The picture is elso clouded by Senator James Buckley of New York's announcement last week that he is willing to provide a symbolic candidecy if it would ensure a second ballot and bence a "free end meture decision." Though most political analysts doubt the effectiveness of the move, because a majority of the delegates in five states are required to plece a candidate in nomination, there is general agreement that anything that promotes confusion benefits Mr. Reagan. So do any votes that are not for Mr. Ford. even if they are also not for Mr. Rea-

The Escalating Violence in Southern Africa

A significant increase in violeoce by hoth whites end blacks has raised with seeming new urgency the question of how long the white supremacist fortresses of Rhodesia end South Africa can resist black demands without risking general recial war.

With that question obviously in mind, outside powers, especially the United States and Britain, continue to seek diplomatic solutions to the conflict. Last week, for the first time, there were generalized public state-ments by South Africa's white leaders appaerently intended to show a willingness to compromise. But their actions remained unyielding and, combined with the growing determination of the blacks, a reason for optimism was hard to find.

Here is what happened last week:

In reprisal for an earlier attack by Rhodesian black nationalists based in Mozambique, in which five white Rhodesian troops were killed, Rhodesian forces invaded Mozambique and attacked a guerrilla camp. Rhodesian sourcee eaid 300 persons were killed, including 30 Mozambican soldiers and 10 civiliaus. Mozambique said 618 per-

Mozambique responded with a mortar attack across the border on Umtali, Rhodesia's fourth largest city.

The decision by the Government of Prime Minister Ian Smith to invade another netion was consistent with his stated policy of "bot pursuit" of guerrillas, But the scale of the attack possibly involving an air strike-added a new dimension to the Rhodesian con-

Whet had provoked the decision to

Mr. Smlth's regime has been criticized by its more extreme white supporters for what they see as a "no win" strategy of trying to curb guerril-la activity inside Rhodesia, without bitting at the guerrillas' training bases in Mozambique and other neighboring black netions. White morale has been deteriorating in Rhodesie; there is a high level of white emigration.

The mortar attack on Umtali report edly caused no deaths, but the 11,000 whites and 50,000 blacks who live there expect more barrages from Mozambique, just four miles away.

In South Africa, the Smith's regime's najor source of support, the raid on Mozambique caused apprehension. The South African Foreign Minister, Hilgard Muller, said the incidents could give the Soviet Union and Cuba reason for further intervention in Africa, and he implied-without specifics and without commitment—that South Africa would join the United States in trying to bring about black rule in Rhodesia.

South Africa

Black demonstrators have been battling South African police sporadically since June, mainly in and near Soweto, the bleck ghetto outside Johannesburg. Last week violence spread 800 miles south to Cape Town. The pettern was the same, bowever. Demonstreting young blacks stoned and burned Government buildings to demand the release of blacks in prison for political reasons; police seeking to disperse the demonstrators first tried less forceful methods but then fired into the crowd. The result last week was 29 deaths, bringing the toll since June to at least

The spread of violeoce to Cape Town, one of the few large cities in South Africa where whites outnumber blecks, sbocked many South Africans who had grown used to the outbreaks lo the eastern region of the country. Cape Town has 110,000 blacks, 380,000 whites and 600,000 persons registered as "coloreds," or of mixed desceot. Officials expressed concern that the "coloreds" might join the blacks, Last week, in one Incident at the University of the Western Cape, e "colored" institution, 17 students were arrested after a protest. At the University of Cape Town, a sympathy march by several hundred white studeots resulted in 76 arrests, including many of the While Dr. Muller said last week his country must moderate its racial policles in order to win acceptance internationally, Prime Minister John B. Vorster sald last week that, while be gards apartheid as fundamental and immutable.

His police not only used force on black demonstrators, they arrested more than 50 leaders of black organizations under a law permitting indefinite imprisonment without the filing

South-West Africa

In eddition to its dissension at home end its important peripheral involvement in Rhodesia, Sonth Africa faces difficulties over South-West Africa, or Namibia, the former German colooy that was placed under Pretoria's control by a League of Nations mandate.

Residents of the mineral-rich but largely desert region have heen demanding independence. There bave been periodic clashes between South African troops and guerrillas of the South-West Africa People's Organization and the forces of neighboring Zambia, which supports them. There was another such clash last week.

The United Nations has revoked South's Africa's mandete and set a deadline of Aug. 31 for Pretoria to grant independence.

The United States and Britain bave been pressuring South Africa to set a deadline for compliance. Last week the Vorster Government was reported to be ready to accept the establishment of a multiracial government in tha territory by June 30, 1977, with independence to follow.

Western pressure appears to have belped speed South African action in the case of South-West Africa, but has not yet been effective in bringing about change in either Rhodesia or South Africa Itself.

Mr. Vorster and his colleagues continue to present themselves as resisting communist, rather than black nationalist, ambitions in southern Africa. The Soviet Union and Cuba are described as the real enemies, the example of Angola is constantly raised.

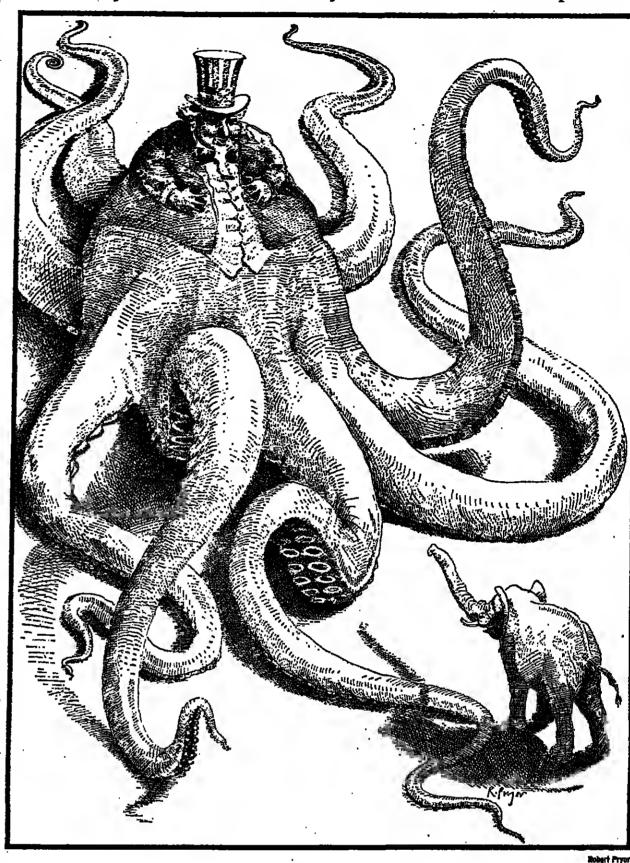

Some Cubans are known to be in Mozambique but not in the numbers of the Cuban force, at one time 12,000 troops, in Angola. Cuba has pledged to withdraw the Angola troops progressively, but many of those with-drawn so far appear to have been replaced by fresh troops.

Russian advisers are present in Mozambique; the Government of President Samora Machel is Marxist, Bot, unless it undertakes a major eupply unlikely to greatly influence current events in the region.

The characterization given the black uprising by South Africa and Rhodesia in effect, e Red threat—is the one the leaders of those nations believe is most likely to evoke Western sympsthy and perhaps aid. The rest of Africa sees events differently. For them, what is happening now in Southern Africa is an inevitable extension of recent history, which began in the 1960's with the overthrow of a white colonial regime in what was then the Congo and is now Zaire.

They See the Bureaucracy as an Insatiable Octopus

Republicans Are Together— In Fear of Big Government

By JOHN HERBERS

Despite the fact that they are almost evenly divided over a Presidential nominee, almost all the Republicans who are gathering in Kansas City this week do, in fact, share e philosophic position that makes it possible to answer the question: What is the Republican Party?

The essence of the answer is that it is the gathering plece for those who are concerned about big government.

Long before Jimmy Carter rolled out of Georgia to capture the Democratic nomination with an anti-Washington campaign, the Republicans in and out of government have at-tacked what they conceive as swollen Federal spending and e bureaucracy grown indifferent and burdensome. For the past eight years, two Republican Presidents and a succession of Cabinet members and agency beads have traveled the country advocating scaling down of Federal power and resources, even as they were in charge of the Federal estab-

The party bas found room for both the ideological right, with its preoccupation with military might, and the party moderates, who have more liberal constituencies than most Republicans. There are many who bold to the traditional Republican belief that their party is best able to institute reforms because it is not as encumbered by political machines and divergent interests; that it is best able to preserve individual and corporate freedom, competition in the market place and the civil rights of citizens because it relies more on the judicial system than the programmatic efforts of the Democrats. But the central orthodoxy that virtually all who converged on Kansas City today could agree to was contained in the slogan spoken by President Ford in bundreds of speeches:

"A government big enough to give you everything you want is a government big enough to take from you everything you have."

There is a Republican concensus that the troubles the party faces this year stem from the legacy of Watergate and from the Ford-Reagan warfare rather than from any weakness in its advocacy for less government et the Federal level. Voter conservatism as expressed in the primaries is seen by Republicans as a fulfillment of their prophesy, as

Ideas & Trends

Senator Barry Goldwater of Arizone is quick to point out. Jimmy Carter's campaign against the Washington establishment and its bureaucracy is viewed as counterfeit.

And there is a difference. Mr. Carter, for example, is more liberal than President Ford in his willingness to assign the Government a larger role and spend more for bealth insurance, emergency jobs and other programs. Beyond that are the basic differences in philosophy of government. When the Democratic Party controls the White House the people who go to Washington are largely those who believe in government, like it and want to make it work. When the Republican Party is in control those who take the top Federal jobs usually bave a distrust of big government and seek to keep it restrained and off the back of individuals and private

During the past eight years, the Ford and Nixon Administrations have been partially successful in reducing the number and extent of the many categorical programs enacted by Democratic Administrations and Congresa over the last four decades through a system of Federal revenue sharing that gives local governments more control over the use of Federal funds. The Republican platform proposed in Kanaas City says in part: 'The Democrats' platform repeats the same thing on every page: More government, more spending, more inflation. This Republican platform says exactly the

Wherever Republicans gather in private there is nearly always a concensus on the central philosophy of the party. The Rockefellers, the Goldweters, the Romneys, the Agnews were compatibla in private while disagreeing in public, where they were appealing to different constituencies. Mr. Reagan, the conservative, and Secator Richard S. Schweiker of Pennsylvania, who had been a liberal, said they found during a long private talk that their basic beliefs were com-

The party's advocacy of e reduced Federal rola in American life has been enhanced by the fact that it has become smaller and more homogeneous in recent years. In 1920, 43 percent of the voters identified themselves as Republicans. Now 20 percent do. A Twentieth Century Fund study published recently in a book entitled "The Changing American Voter' shows that the Republican Party has lost blacks and liberal whites while gaining Southern whites who were formerly affilieted with the Democratic Party but who hold stanchly to the doctrine that e strong central government is anathma. The change, the study points out, makes for a more "consistently conservative" party.

Another factor in the framing of Republican policy is thet the activists in the party tend to be more conservative than the membership. Thus, while public opinion polls consistently show the majority of Republicans nationwide favor President Ford over Mr. Reegan for the nomination, the delegates in Kansas City are almost equally divided.

It is conventional wisdom among political operatives these days that parties do not much matter any more, that independents decide elections and the role of the party is to put up candidates end policies thet appeal to a mejority. One test for the party at Kansas City is whether from its rather oarrow confines it can shape its ticket and anti-big government policy broadly enough to sppeal to most voters.

In Summary

War Is Forcing DeFactoPartition In Lebanon

After a mnrderous seven-week siege, the Palestinian Tell Zaatar camp in Beirut has fallen to right-wing Christian forces, removing the last Palestinian-leftist enclava in Christian-held territory and moving Lebanon a decisive step toward de facto partition or even more deadly civil war.

Publicly, leaders on both sides of the civil war declare that they want to preserve Lebanon'e status as a combined Christian-Moslem nation, But In actuality tha country is now dividad into three segments. One is a Christian region in eastern Beirut and along the Mediterranean shore and in the mountains east and north of the capital. The Moslem-leftist-Palestinian alliance controls Lebanon south of Beirut along the Mediterranean. Syian forces dominate more than half of the county, including the fertile Bekaa Valley.

While the national Government still nominally led by President Suleiman Franjieh exists in name, leaders of the factions in the separate zones already hava taken ilmited steps to establish their own public services and administrations. The Syrians came into Lebenon seeking to preserve its cohesiveness as a nation. But during their presence the partition lines have hardened and they bave seemed unable to reunite the country.

The Syrians originally intervened when it seemed that the alliance of leftists, Moslems and Palestinlans was about to triumph over the Christians. Since then, however, the tide of battla bas turned decisively. Now the Christians, especially with the removal of the Tell Zaatar encleve, bave secured their hold on their quarter of Lebanon and the Syrians have been fighting their former allies, the Palestinians.

This animosity was believed behind Syria's action last week in imposing stricter regulations for travel between Lebanon and Syria. The effect was virtually to close the border between the two countries, which could provide a cover for the movement of more Syrian troops into Lebanon in case of further fighting with the Palestinlans.

The capture of Tell Zaatar, from which thousands of civilian refugees poured out to safety after the Christian forces burst in, was the rightists' greatest victory in the 16-month civil war. No one knows for sure how many persons died in fighting for the camp but even for the Lebanese war, which bas taken an estimated 20,000 lives, the toll was obviously high.

A New Attack on An Israeli Plane

Gunmen claiming to be Palestinian guerrillas trained in Libya attacked passengers waiting for an Israeli airliner in Istanbul last week, epparently as a reprisal for Israel's daring rescue of 100 bostages in Uganda last month.

Palestinian officials denied any connection with tha attack. But Israal's Prime Minister, Yitzhak Rabin, ssid that Israel would pursue air pirates to any country barboring them, including Libya.

According to Turkish officials, the two terrorists captured after the Istanbul attack, in which four persons were killed, said they had flown from Libya vie Rome with smuggled weapons. They were in a transit lounge supposedly awaiting a flight to Baghdad while the El Al flight was loading. Unable to hijack the tightly guarded Israeli plane, as they apparently wished to do, they opened fire on tha boarding passengers. Turkish police returned the fire and subdued the terrorists.

Mr. Rabin's tough response to the incident-We won one battle but tha war continues," he said-carries important Implications if the threat against Libva Is carried out.

The Palestinian terrorists' base in Lebanon has been imperilad by the civil war in that country. Syria, Egypt and other Arab countries near Israel now impose strict curbs on Palestinian activities.

Only, Libya ruled by Col. Muammar el-Qaddafi, a strident foe of Israel. remains as a possible base of operations. But even though Egypt and other Arab countries have their own reasons for disliking the Libyan regime, any Israell attack on Libya could renew inter-Arab solidarity. And that could upset the tenuous modus vivendi that prevails between Israel and its neighbors.

His Peers May Judge Qaddafi

The Arab League and the Organization of African Unity are considering a joint investigation into charges by the Sudan and Egypt that Col. Muammar el-Qaddafi of Libya has gone beyond the point of political rivalry and is now actively trying to sabotage the Governments of the two nations.

President Gaafar al-Nimeiry of the Sudan blamed Libya directly for aiding a sizable force of rebels who tried unsuccessfully to overthrow him last month; he also implied that he thought the Soviet Union might have been involved as well. Since Russia's relations with Egypt have cooled, its ties with Libya bave warmed. The Soviets supply arms to Libya and bave access to bases there.

Colonel Qaddafi, a fervent Moslem, espouses the pan-Arab ambitions enunciated by his bero, Gamai Abdei Nasser, and once hoped to unite his country with both the Sudan and Egypt, But President Nasser's auccessor, President Anwar el-Sadat, has become so dizenchanted with the mercurial colonel that he refers to him publicly as a "lunatic." Last week, it was reported thet Egypt had moved troops, tanks and other weapons to reinforce its border with Libva.

Despite the attraction of Libya's oil wealth as a means of financing domestic development in the Sudan, President Nimeiry has also quarreled with Colonel Qaddafi. Their differences bave shown since 1972 when Khartourn refused to allow a Libyan Army contingent to be airlifted across the Sudan to Uganda, where President Idi Amin, a Qaddafi ally, was fighting

After last month's attempted coup in Khartoum, tha Sudan and Egypt signed a new defense pact, Both countries deny that they will use it to overthrow President Qaddafi with wbom they share membership in the Arab League and the Organization of African Unity. "We are not going to do anything," President Nimeiry said. "We are sure that the people of Libya are going to overthrow him, and we are going to work with the people of Libya to sbow him his feults."

Greek-Turkish 'War' Is Verbal

The Greek-Turkish war of words over rights to resources under the Asgean Sea is continuing at the United Natione and elsewhere, but the threat of war between the two ancient enemies seems to bave subsided as tentstive steps for negotiation of the dispute have been taken.

Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger met yesterday with representatives of the two countries to try to get the negotiations etarted.

The present friction stema from the voyaga of a Turkish survey ship near Greek islands. Greece claims the voyage infringes on its rights to the seabed area; Turkey says the Greek claim to the subsoil is invalid. The potential prize ia a domestic oil supply for two oil-poor nations: Greece has already found oil in the area near Thasos.

Greece has asked the Internetional Court of Justice at The Hague for an advisory opinion and bas also taken its case to the United Nations Security Council. The United States and other allies in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, to which both Greece and Turkey are connected, welcomed the decision to argue the matter out in the international forums. That was preferable to the armed conflict that seemed at least possible as Greece and Turkey, their relations already strained by Cyprus, each made military preparations.

Have-Nots, and What They Want

The radicalism of many of the participants makes it likely that the fifth conference of more than 100 noneligned nations, which opened last week in Colombo, Sri Lanka, wili edopt aggressive positions seeking to implement the meeting's theme: "A new economic order for the world."

The participating nations ere, in the main, the same countries that make up the membership of other international groups of developing nations. But since the nonaligned body defines itself as consisting of nations not belonging to defense agreements with the great powers, it excludes major developing countries like Iran and Pakistan There are others such as Venezuela, who, while not official members, play an important role off-stage with "observer" status.

The United States has no formal representation at the conference but for the first time has sent a special envoy to monitor the talks. As one State Department official said: "We haven't paid too much attention in the past and that was probably a mistake."

The importance of the meeting to the United States and the rest of the industrialized world was evident in the preliminary sessions last week...

Four major issues are likely to dominate the conference: the demand for a commitment by industrial nations to reschedule the debt of poor nations give them more time to repay-as form of development aid; the establishment of an international fund to sponsor domestic development and atablize export earnings without requiring the poor nations to borrow annually from industrial ones; the transfer of technology to poor nations in a way that gives the most benefit of the activities of multinational corpora-

There is not total agreement on all lssues. Disagreements, perhaps public, are possible on some matters, including the division of the former Spanish Sahara between Morocco and Mauritania, which Algeria has strongly opposed; the future of France's last African colony, the Territory of Afars and Issas; and the future of Timor, the former Portuguese colony in southeast

Selling Atoms, a Tricky Business

The sale of nuclear plants to developing countries, a profitable enter-prise for industrial nations, bas also led to conflict among them; tha latest is a dispute between France and the United States. Though the sales are intended to enhance industrial capacity there is by now ample proof that they can also contribute to the spread of nuclear weaponry.

Secretary of State Henry A. Kis-ainger, in the course of an official visit to Pakistan last week, voiced opposition to France's intended sale of a nuclear reprocessing plant to Pakistan, Mr. Kissinger reportedly suggested that unless Pakistan backed out of the deal, the United States might not sell it conventional weapons and might even cut off all aid except food.

American sensitivity on the subject mey have been beightened because, as Washington conceded last week, it Is probable that material supplied by the United States and Canada for a similar plant enabled India, Pakistan's enemy, to become the world's sixth nation to explode a nuclear bomb. (India, like all other receiving nations, bad promised it bad only peaceful uses in mind.)

Tha French Government bad agreed January after American protests but it seems determined to go ahead with the Pakistan contract and privately made clear its "irritation" at Mr. Kissinger's comment

Pakistan has one small reactor now, built with Canadian help, but it plans to build 24 more nuclear plants, costing $1 billion apiece, and the French would like to supply them. As a safeguard, the United States wants Pakistan to agree to use internationally supervised reprocessing centers for the reactors' spent fuels from which plutonium for atomic weapons can be produced. Mr. Kiseinger said that Pakistan and the United States had agreed to seek a compromise.

Soares Gets His Opportunity

Portugal'e National Assembly hes passed the new Socialist Government's program for reviving a troubled economy and providing the basis for a stable and democratic political tife. Success would be a major achievement, since the nation is poor in resources and its political past is one of dictatorship and, since the revolution in 1974, turmoil.

The program of Prime Minister Mário Soares requires that industries and firms already nationalized will continue to be state-owned, but attempts will be made to make them viable. Agrarian reform, the code phrase for annexation of Portugel's old estates, will be continued in a legal framework, with compensation and the return of land illegally expropriated in the first flush of the revolution. The Government also plans to implement a national health service, extensive public housing programs and improvements in education for a country where most students bave not gone beyond the fourth grade.

The program also sets out rules governing freedom of the presa and for worker control of factories. However, its passage was aomewhat overshadowed by the return from exile, the President António de Spinola.

Mr. Spinola, now officially deprived of his general'a rank, fled Portugal after a right-wing coup failed in March, 1975. In exile he was accused of being the mastermind of the clandestine Portuguese Democratic Liberation Movement, disbanded in May but which sought to seize power to avert a Communist takeover in Portugal. When the former general returned to Lispon, he was arrested, but two days later he was released unconditionally. No reason was given. uth-West Africa, an Orphan etoria Can No Longer Keep

By JOHN F. BURNS

TESBURG—Like a balloonist whose craft is sinkrime Minister John B. Vorster moved last week deadweights of Rhodesie and South-West Africa in the hope of keeping apartheid South Africa ith an insurrection among the black population of r. Vorster had his lieutenants signal that he is apport the American push for majority rule in and to approve the installation of a multiracial t in South-West Africa, or Namibia as black all it.

it was an act of realism or desperation, the apport for the other two outposts of white rule continent was a remarkable break with the past. Ontext of domestic politics, where Mr. Vorster is 1 by a conservative Afrikaner constituency that ressed by swartgevaar, the black danger, the decision to cast loose from South-West Africa was the holdest move by far. The territory, larger than Britain and France together, bas been under Pretoria's rule for 56 years, during which it has become, in all hut name, the fifth province of South Africa.

Colonized by Germany in 1884, the vast but sparsely populated region of desert and scrubland passed under South African authority in 1920, when the League of Nations entrusted it to Pretoria es a mandate. The mandate carried with it the obligation to promote the well-being and progress of the indigenous peoples, but in practice South Africa set out from the beginning to model the territory in its own image, with entrenched discrimination against blacks in every sphere.

In 1933, Pretoria sued for permission to incorporate the territory into South Africa, but the League refused. When the United Nations succeeded the League after World War II, South Africa, alone among the mandatory powers, refused to accept a trusteeship. From that point on the territory's stalus has been a subject of international dispute, culminating in the vote by the United Nations Security Council to invoke mandatory sanctions against South Africa if it failed to accept a United Nations supervised classical leading to accept a United Nations supervised election leading to independence by Aug. 31 this year.

With the deadline little more than two weeks away, there has been a rush of activity to arrange an interim settlement that will stave off sanctions, which the debilitated economy of South Africa could scarcely sustain. Nothing definite has been announced, but the outline emerging from statements in Pretoria and Miodhoeck, the territorial capital, is for a multiracial government to take over by June 30 oext year, with the formal transition to independence either then or shortly after.

To guard against criticism at home and promote the notion of an untrammelled popular will working its way. South Africa has insisted that the final decisions will be made by a constitutional conference that has been et work in Windhoek since earlier this year. In fact, the comings and goings between the two capitals suggest that Pretoria still has a large hand in the affair, and will use its authority to see that the conference's decisions fit in within its prediletions.

At this point, it is unlikely that free elections will be part of the package. Mr. Vorster is reported to feel that it will be five years, at least, before the territory is meture enough to risk a free vote. In the meantime, the formula is likely to be a broadly-based coalition representing each of the tribal groups, with a white prime minister, probably Dirk Mudge, the chairman of the constitutional conference, and a black head of state, Clemens Kapuo, head of tha Owambo delegation to the confarence, which represents the dominant tribe.

A Doubtful Formula

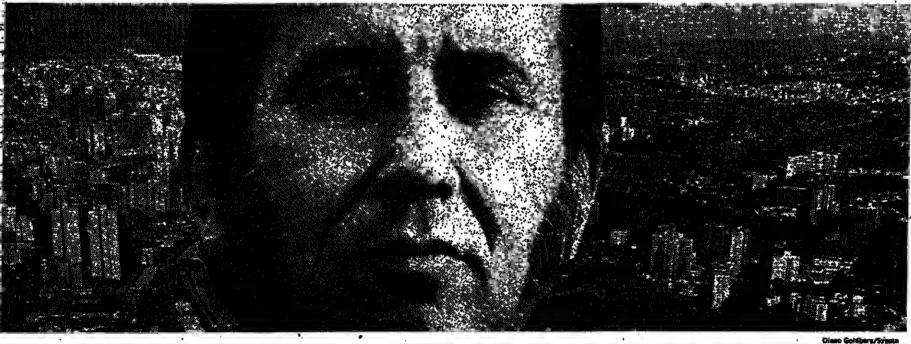

The formula has almost no hope of acceptance at the United Nations, which has approved the South-West Africa People's Organization, excluded from the Wiodhoek conference, as tha sole authentic representative of the territory's people. Mr. Mudge and a number of tribal leaders et the talks bave suggested that the People's Organization be invited to join the interim government, e bid that the group's representatives abroad heve contemptuously rejected.

Inadequate as It may be in the ayes of South Africa's critics, acceptance of multiracial rule in a unitary state is a quantum leap from the position Pretoria was taking only a few months ago. Then, the inclination encouraged by pressure from the territorial government, which is in the hands of South Africa's ruling Nationalist Party, was for a modified form of apartheid, with the whites' interests secured by a constitution dividing the country into homelands, or Bantustans. In effect, the 90,000 whites would have continued to dominate the 710,000 blacks, Bushmen and "coloreds," or people of mixed descent.

In fact, the multiracial government now envisaged would almost certainly be hebolden to Pretoria for many years. As long as the People's Organization refuses to join the coalition, the territory is likely to have a major guerrilla war on its hands, fought by People's Organization guerrillas based in Zambia and Angola. The war, already 10 years old, has tied down thousands of South African troops, whom the territory is in no position to replace, Furthermore, its economy, based almost-entirely on the mioing of diamonds and copper, will continue to require the large infusions of money—$75 million this year—that Pretoria provides, and which can scarcely be procured elsewhere so loog as the United Nations enforces a policy of non-recognition.

ming a rich oeighbor to e poor corner of the not the only factor that gives Venezuelan ignificant voice in international assemblies. More has been the sympathetic foreign policy fashioned at Pérez, Foreign Minister Ramon Escovar Salom trez Guerrero. While the Government is implessed billion domestic development plan aimed at an antional wealth and reducing dependence on ial exports, it has also committed $3 billion, or 10 percent of its gross territorial product, to loans and other assistance to Latin America, the Caribbean and international organizations.

At the same time Mr. Pérez, in voicing his own country's complaints to the industrialized world, embraced key issues affecting most developing nations. As a country receiving the bulk of its income from petroleum and iron ore exports, and depending heavily on industrial goods imported from the United States and other developed netions, Venezuele is vulnerable to price changes in either of these categories.

Mr. Pérez has repeatedly called on industrialized nations to pay "just" prices for the nonrenewable natural resources that the developing nations sell as their chief source of revenues, and has staunchly defended oil price increases. He has maintained that these exports are undervalued by the industrialized giants and that poor nations will never be capable of establishing alternate sources of income if their prime exports are sold at unremnnerative prices. He has argued that the developing world is a key market for farms and factories in Europe and North America, But price increases for food, tractors, heavy machinery and other essential imports to Venezuela remain far ahead of increments made in raw material exports.

The Government has moved to control its own chief sources of income, up until 1974 in the hands of foreign concerns. The Pérez Administration nationalized American petroleum and kron-ore mining companies valued at $5 billion, but carried out the takeovers peacefully. Nationalized firms were compensated, and representatives of the foreign enterprises are still working with the Government as technical and marketing advisers.

The Pérez Administration's reletions with Washington have always been friendly, despite concern in the United States over the newly oationalized Venezuelan oil iodustry, a principal supplier of American markets. Venezuela insists that it will remain a faithful source for its most important customer.

Mr. Pérez, however, has not remained silent whenever he felt that Washington was treading on his country's sovereign toes. He has contradicted Washington pronouncements that oil prices are too high. He and his officials have criticized Washington for tariff restrictions included in the Trade Act of 1974 which affect Venezuela even though the provisions were intended to chastise Arab oil producers who participated in the 1973 oil embargo. Venezuela not only declined to participate in the embargo, but voluntarily increased petroleum exports to the United States. The tariff restrictions were viewed here as one more callous act carried out by a government that apparently paid little extention to, and cared eveo less, about Venezuela

The Perez Administration has also called on the United States to turn sovereign control of the Panama Canal over to Panamanians. Mr. Pérez meets regularly with the Panamanian strongman, Gen. Omar Torrijos, and has called tha canal the single most important issue in relations between Washington and Latin America.

Venezuela supports the elusive goal of Latin American economic integration. Mr. Pérez has thrown his Government's support behind the Andean Pact, which includes Bolivia, Chile, Colombia, Ecuador, Peru and Venezuela. But the group's inability to agree oo means for implementing fundamental economic aims has been disappointing.

As one of the few remaining democracies in a region dominated by military dictatorships, Venezuela would seem to be in a position to preach the virtues of freely elected government. The Pérez Administration, however, is careful not to criticize any governments directly. But when a woman seeking political asylum at the Venezuelan Embassy in Montevideo was reportedly dragged from the embassy grounds by Uruguayan security police, the Caracas Foreign with Uruguayan.

with Uruguay.

The Government is expected to continue following foreign policy lines traced out during the first two years of President Pérez's five-year-term. Two principal goals are most conspicuous: removal of the vexing restrictions laid down by the United States Trade Act, and grouping together Latin states in order to form an effective economic and political bloc representative of regional interests.

The first goal can probably be achieved after the United States Presidential elections. But the second will not be easy. The notion of a united Latin America has been the unfulfilled dream of statesmen here since the time of Simon Bolivar.

Libya Blamed This Time

The Sudan, Where Coups And Violence Are Endemic

By JOHN DARNTON

KHARTOUM, the Sudan—On July 4, after two days of vicious street fighting, the forces of President Gaafar al-Nimeiry beat back an insurrection that, it is now clear, was fomented by neighboring Libya. The rebels were a well-ermed but ragtag troop of exiles, zealots and mercenaries that somehow managed to trek 1,000 miles across the desert unnetected.

Despite President Nimeiry's claim that 80 percent of the invaders were foreigners, it appears that most were Sudanese emigrés, most of them adherents of a fanatical Moslem sect. While the attack could not have been mounted without Libya's support, it could not have been conceived without the home-grown animosities that bave bedeviled the Sudan since it gained independence in 1956.

From the brutal desert in the north to tropical rain forest in the south, the Sudan is a country of violence and mystery, as dark as the muddy waters of the White and Blue Niles. Of all the nations on the continent, only tiny Benin, now under a Markist regime, has had a more be-wildering array of coups and countercoups. Only Nigeria and Zaire have fought civil wars approaching the cruelty of the 17-year conflict between the Sudan's 15 million Arabs in the north and 4 million Christian and pagan blacks in the south. The war, in which 500,000 died, was a legacy of conflicts originating in the last century when the Arabs traded in southern slaves. As in other countries under British rule, such as Nigeria, the hostilities were exacerbated because the regions were administered separately.

Ona month after he seized power in May 1969, in a left-wing army coup patterned after that of Gamal Abdel Nasser's in Egypt 17 years before, then Colonel Nimeiry announced that he would negotiate an end to the war. Three years later be was able to do so, by granting the south regional autonomy. Reconciliation was rapid, but reconstruction slow.

President Nimeiry, who has moved his Government from a military regime to a one-party state with himself as President, has survived numerous assassination attempts, two coups that were uncovered before they were launched, and three that were tried but failed, including one in July 1971, in which President Nimeiry was held captive in the presidential palace for three days.

Only the 1971 coup attempt could be called political in the conventional sense. It was carried out by Communist officers, including three who had been dismissed from the governing Revolutionary Command Council, as President Nimeiry began moving away from a more radical program of nationalization.

The other insurrections heve their roots in the Mahdist movement, a reactionary, mystical sect that traces its origins to Muhammad Ahmad. In 1881, claiming to be the Mahdi, a divinely inspired leader, he spearheaded the rebellion against Egyptian rule that ended in the capture of Khartoum, which was retaken by a British-Egyptian army under Lord Kitchener in 1898.

A Potent Minority

The worshippers of the Mahdi, the Ansars, have been a potent force ever since. They are strong in the western Sudan and constitute perheps 20 percent of tha population. After iodependence they shared political power through tha Umme Party, which was liquidated along with other parties by President Nimeiry's take-over. They were driveo to extremes by his Sudanese socialism, and rose up in 1970 in their stronghold of Aba Island in the White Nile; they were brutally suppressed.

The temporal leader of the Ansars, el-Sadik el-Mahdi, has admitted leading last month's rebellion. With deep-seated suspicion of Egypt, disdain for the Sudanese south, a mission to Moslemize and fanatical anti-Communism, he found a compatible personality and indispensable ally in Libya's Col. Muammar el-Qaddafi. Had the coup succeeded and Mr. Mahdi been installed as head of state, the south would uodoubtedly have rebelled. Libya probably would have attempted to supply arms and Egypt would have heen threatened since its lifeblood, the Nile flows through the Sudan ened since its lifeblood, the Nile, flows through the Sudan.

Ironically the ettempts to seize power have come largely from reactionary elements at a tima when President Nimeiry is moving the nation to the right. Following again in the footsteps of Egypt, he is aligning the Sudan with

Last month's coup attempt occurred on his return from a three-week visit to the United States, where he met with President Ford, Robert S. McNamara, the head of the World Bank, and others to drum up capital and technological aid for agricultural development.

With Libya and Uganda as neighbors, the Sudan touches on two of the more unpredictable countries in the world. Its immense horders are almost unpatrolable but declares and security soak up over a quarter of the annual hudget.

and security soak up over a quarter of the annual hudget. The Sudan is the largest geographic entity in Africa—almost one-third the size of the continental United States. Although cooditions are grim, it seems on the threshold of economic take-off. Some statisticians calculate that 40 percent of the arable land in the Arab world lies within its boundaries, of which only 10 percent is under cultivation.

But whether or not that potential will ever he realized, in a country with external enemies, divisions between north and south, a dissideot religious sect, and a history of political instability, is problematical.

In Summary

A Minimalist Energy Bill Finally Passes

Congress has finally passed an energy bill, designed to reduce slightly the nation's increasing reliance on oil imports by deregulating the price of about 13 percent of the crude produced domestically. The very limited nature of the compromise legislation seems to insure that its inflationary impact will be virtually nil this year. President Ford is expected to sign the bill.

The price decontrol is expected to increase current daily production of 8 million barrels by about 5 per cent by the end of the decade, a far cry from the Ford Administration's goal of independence from oil imports, Before the Arab nil embargo began in September, 1973, 33 per cent ni the oil consumed in the country was imported. During the first six months of this year, 39 per cent of the nation's oil came from foreign sources. The bill on Mr. Ford's desk would alter that

The basic aim of the long-delayed measure is to provide domestic producers with an incentive to extract more oil from uneconomical existing wells by decontrolling its price; it could then be sold at the higher price brought by imported oil. The law would also encourage the use of expensive new techniques to get more oil from mar-

Roselli Dies; Now There Are None

In the early sixties, the Central Intelligence Agency recruited two mobsters to act as middlemen in a plot to assassinate Premier Fidel Castro of Cuba. Now the second man, John Roselli, has been found dead, and as in the case of Sam Giancana 13 months ago, there is no explanation of his death.

Both men were murdered in classic gangland style. Mr. Roselli's body was found last week in an oil drum wrapped in chains floating in Dumbfoundling Bay, an arm of Biscayne Bay between North Miami and Beach. Mr. Giancana was found dead in his suburban Chicago home, six builets in and around his bead. There is no publicly known evidence that the two murders did or did not have a connection to the abortive plot against the Cuban leader. Mr. Roselli was a cooperative witness last year before a Senate committee investigating intelligence activities; Mr. Giancana was killed shortly before be was in testify. And during the period the two men were involved in the Castro plot, a young woman they knew well also had a romantic relationship with the late President John F. Kennedy.

Though authorities have not solved either mobster's murder, they say their belief is that Giancana and Roselli both were killed by other underworld figures. After several days of saying there was no reason for a Federal ioquiry into a local murder, and after several requests from Congress that it do so, the Justice Department reversed itself and ordered the Federal Bureau of Investigation to take a look.

Hays Decides to Quit Entirely

The sex scandal that forced Representative Wayne L. Havs out of his powerful chairmanships in the House. has now forced him out of the House itself. The Ohio Congressman, who has served 28 years, said he would not seek re-election in November for reasons of health and for what he considered press "harassment."

Mr. Hays's decline began when a former secretary, Elizabeth Ray, charged that she had been put on the public payroll at $14,000 a year, solely to bave sexual relations with him. While conceding a liaison, Mr. Hays deried that Miss Ray did no meaningful work. Colleagues nonetheless forced Mr. Hays to resign two important chairmanships.

The Representative's troubles are far from over. He faces investigations by both the House and the Justice Department, as well as a civil suit alleging fraud involving illegal payments to Kelley Starts to Shuffle the F.B.I.

F.B.I. director Clarence M. Kelley has responded to the growing list of disclosures about the bureau's misdeeds by revising the way the bureau is arganized. He also announced the retirement of Thomas J. Jenkins, one of the last members of the burean's upper echelon said to be loyal to the practices of J. Edgar Hoover, Mr. Kelley's predecessor.

Whether the changes will de-Hooverize the Federal Bureau of Investigation will probably depend as much on the actions and enforced policies of Mr. Kelley and meo be appoints as on the structural changes themselves. Mr. Kelley has so far filled two of the three top posts with younger men from the agency's branch offices who apparently do not have an institutional commitment to the old guard; a suc-cessor for Mr. Jenkins has not yet been named.

The primary practical effect of the restructuring is the abolition of the internal security section of the intelligence division, formerly responsible for the investigation of domestic radical and terrorist groups. Illegal and abusive conduct, including burglaries, by agents in that division is under Justice. Mr. Kelley also amounced that he would form an independent internal unit to deal with allegations of misconduct. There has not been one

Harrises Guilty

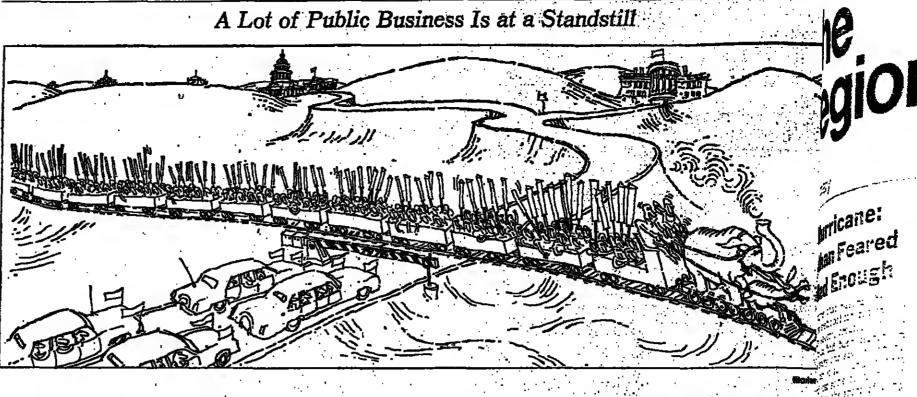

The trial of Emily and William Harris, members of the Symbionese Liberation Army, has ended in their conviction, but it produced little new public knowledge of either that small, violent radical group or its best known member, Patricia Hearst.

A jury in Superior Court in Los Angeles last week found the Harrises guilty of kidnapping, robbery and auto theft, but acquitted them of charges when Miss Hearst opened fire with arising from an incident in May 1974, an automatic weapon to belp them avoid arrest

The trial of the two surviving members of the S.L.A. who kidnapped Miss Hearst, added little to the public record about the group, or the 16 months during which the Harrises and Miss Hearst were fugitives, because the defense presented no witnesses, Miss Hearst, who bad agreed to testify for the state, was not called.

Msis Hearst herself faces the same charges in a state trial next Januar; She is now undergoing psychiatric testing before sentencing on a Federal bank robbery conviction.

Political Fever Is Causing Washington Malaise.

By WARREN WEAVER Jr.

WASHINGTON—Election years are popularly regarded as times of intense activity, when the leaders and candidates of the two parties, emboldened by beckoning political prospects, increase their efforts to impress the electorate with their achievements and govern with exhibitionist vigor.

In fact, the years in which the voters choose their Presidents tend to be times when a number of things do not happen in Washington that very likely would have except for the national campaign. This week's symbol could hardly be more explicit: Republicans will bave absented themselves en masse to Kansas City and their nominating convention. The President. a candidate, left Washington early.

On the theory that a kind of historical pattern can emerge from the events that failed to take place in a given time as well as from those that do, herewith is a random sample of things that are not happening In Washington this year, particularly this fall.

At the State Department, efforts to normalize relations between the United States and the People's Republic of China are not proceeding. For many months, there has been general agreement among foreign policy experts in Congress and the Administration that such progress was not only inevitable but desirable. But President Ford is not about to make friendly gestures to the Communists—at least not until after the Republican convention. Even then, improving relations with Peking entails further alienating Taiwan, and there are many American supporters of Taiwan who vote.

Right oow as steps are not being taken to resume the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks with the Soviet Union, that might be interpreted as evidence of inter-national softness by the Republican Right. If President Ford wins the nomination, however, some observers speculate that oew SALT initiatives could provide helpful autumn evidence of White House leadership for peace.

Until the primary season opened, the State Department was exploring a more even-handed approach to the Middle East, inevitably requiring increased pressure on Israel. But the Arab vote in the United States is barely discernible; the Jewish vote is substantial and active, in votes and campaign contribu-

Postponement of critical decisions in other areas until after the election also has become official Democratic policy. Congressional critics of the B-1 bomber, which has the endorsement of the Ford Administration, have argued that the next President, who may or may not be Mr. Ford, should make the final decision on such a costly commitment. The Senate passed a Defense Appropriation bill last week that deferred the $1-billion purchase until after Feb. I.

The White House's legislative proposal for executive reform of Federal regulatory agencies is not speeding through Congress. In a clear reference to the fact that Mr. Ford bolds his office by appointment and succession, one House Democrat, Represen-tative John E. Moss of California, said no action on the plan should be taken "until we can get the views of an elected President."

Congressional Democrats seeking stronger legislation to protect the public against wiretapping are not working for adoption of their legislation this year. They have tacitly agreed that prospects for an effective measure would be much brighter in a Carter Administration; if there is another Ford Administration, they will have lost nothing but time. Appointments to vacant jobs in the Executive branch are oot being speedily filled. Few men and women are anxious to break off private employment and move to Washington to accept a job that may vanish five months later. The reluctance has been particularly noticeable at the Pentagon, where important posts have remained empty for months.

What is probably more politically significant is that the White House is not pressing shead to: new head of the Equal Employment Opport Commission, an agency that was in trouble 13 its most recent chairman resigned three month. The commission is regarded as unpopular with employers, a number of whom are active Repub.

Another agency employers consider a tricin maker, the Occupational Safety and Health Adv. tration, decided just about the time the 197:22 maries began that it would not be able to prom: new job safety regulations until after Nove Many of these standards had been scheduled to to laws this year, or at least not until after the el Congress took a 10-day recess for the Dem National Convention and is doing the same National Convention and is doing the same Republican convention. Then comes a Labor Iros cess, mandatory in an election year. The leading presently aiming for adjournment by Oct. allow incumbents time to return to their d and campaign for reelection.

Among the measures that may not fit in an area abbreviated fall work schedule is a proposet in the million subsidy for the hard-pressed United Books Postal Service, not a very popular political even in a non-election year. A more certain ca is the recodification of the United States C1 Code, a proposal so full with controversial prothat all the considerable efforts to neutralize purely procedural reform have failed.

Early this year, Congressional leaders agreed there would be no floor action on like abortion and guo control. They are clastoo hot to handle when running for affice, La ers who are also candidates are acutely awar recorded votes on such questions can only and ple at least one segment of the electorate, and earn compensatory goodwill from others.

Now it appears possible that the noneve 1976 may include the Democratic Congress's to approve the Democratic party's keystone for ployment act. .. While Everyone Awaits Dr. Carter

By LESLIE H. GELB

WASHINGTON-Foreign policy in this city Is now mostly living in the future. It is as if the diplomats, Administration officials, Congressmen and their aides and would-be Democratic office-bolders have already bought stock in a Carter victory.

It is like the Middle Ages after the death of one Pope and before the selection of the next. Then, all law was suspended and nothing was considered a crime. Now, as the present Administration seems to fade and before the expected arrival of the new one, reality is being increasingly suspended. For those in waiting until next January, the void is filled with possioilities-for jobs, policy proposals and new regotiations.

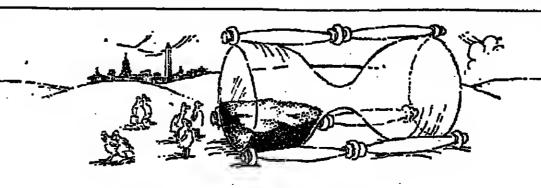

For the leaders of the Ford Administration, there is mostly limbo. Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger is trying to keep things moving, but with the possible exception of the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks, little is expected. It takes a lot of power to make things buppen, and as the talk of the town centers less on Mr. Kissinger and more on his possible successors, his power wanes.

Before Mr. Carter names his top officials, everyone sees a chance. Ambitions and hopes, old networks, all long underground are being revealed. People let slip the titles of positions they will never

The intricate game of positioning begins with finding out what Mr. Carter "believes." Foreign diplomats want to know in order to tell their Governments whether to stall or continue on-going negotiations with the United States, Diplomats from the developing world, for example, are saying they are prepared to sit tight oo the North-South economic discussions, because they anticipate o better deal from Mr. Carter than Mr. Ford.

Those hoping for new power want to know what Mr. Carter believes to determine what they should "believe." Aides to Democratic Senators report telephone calls from the Pentagon and the State Department that are friendlier than ever before. As one aide put it "They give more information more freely, and make more anti-Kissinger and anti-Defense Secretary Rumsfeld remarks."

Warm, moist air is constantly sucked in, giving fresh energy to the spiraling wind system. As the storm moves over land, it loses its driving force and dies.

Last week's hurricage came pretty much straight up the Atlactic coast, scraped the New Jersey shore and then hit Loog Islacd about midway. It crossed the island, constantly losiog force, and Coonecticut before dissipating as it moved northward. There was considerable flooding and electric power was cut off in many places as falling trees took utility lines with them; damage was in the millions. One person died, struck by a tree.

The Next Move Is the Hospitals'

The settlement that ended the fourday strike at New York City linspitals last weekend bought time for the workers and the city, and the prospect of hard times for the independent agency that supervises the hospitals.

The union representing 18,000 largely unskilled workers prevented the dismissal of at least 1,000 people by relinquishing a cost-of-living increase.

But other, greater troubles he shead. The Health eod Hospitals Corporation, which runs the city's 16 municipal hospitals, has been trying to wipe out an estimated deficit of $104 milhoo in its $1.1 billioo budget. The layoffs the workers struck over were only a fraction of all the planned cutbacks.

At the same time, the state has imposed new Medicaid reimbursement rates that will increase the hospitals' deficit more than $20 million. The strike accord brought with it a reprieve for the hospital corporation to find new ways of saving money and increasing revenue.

But if the Emergeocy Financial Control Board, which monitors the city's fiscal affairs, finds that the required cutbacks have oot been achieved, jobs may be in danger again.

A New Deficiency In Day Care

New York State auditors rechecking independent audits of New York City day-care centers have found much amiss, thus adding to the growing list of alleged wrongs in the city's day-care operations.

Auditors who work for State Comptroller Arthur Levitt say that the reports they examined were both flawed and incomplete, lacking documentation for the accountants' findings. The state auditors were particularly concerned with the accountants' failures to check whether people were drawing unearned salaries and possibly padding the city'a day-care bill.

Theoretically the city's 370-odd daycare centers are all nonprofit operations. But state and city investigations of the 171 centers that are directly leased by the city (as opposed to those leased or owned by schools, churches and other groups) have revealed questionable, perhaps illegal, real estate deals, profiteering, bad management and a concentration of ownerships by eight or oine politically well-connected individuals or partnerships. Investigators are looking into the possibility of fraud and influence peddling.

N.Y. to 'Tax' Errant Drivers

New York State has announced plans to impose extra license renewal charges no drivers guilty of serious violations, with the iotention of financing its remedial driving program by, in effect, taxing those who make the program necessary. The plan is similar in intent to the actino taken this year by the Connecticut and New Jersey Legislatures, which imposed charges of $10 and $20 respectively for reinstatement of suspended and revoked licenses.

Under the New York plan, motorists with apeeding and other moving violation convictions in the last three years will be charged double or triple the average $4 and $8 renewal fees. The resulting reveoue, about $2 millioo annually, would be used to pay for the state's driver improvement program, whose funding was cut by the State Legislature. About 110,000 drivers would be affected oext month: eventually about 2 million, or a quarter of New York's licensed drivers, would pay the higher rates.

There is opposition to the increased fees, centered around the interpretation by the State Motor Vebicle Department of legislation authorizing it to impose charges to cover the cost of the driver improvement program. The department expects court challenges based on the argument that only the Legislature has the power to increase licensing fees.

The Search Has Been Brisk in New York and New Jersey

Hunting for Delegates By Building Up Egos

By FRANK LYNN

KANSAS CITY—National convention delegates ere usually dealt with like sheep—in flocks rather than as individuals. Convince the shepberd (a governor, a senatur, a county leader) and invariably the sheep will follow.

But not so for many of the sheep arriving bere this weekend for the Republican National Convention, which will, perbaps appropriately, be within scent of the stockyards.

President Ford and Ronald Reagan have been forced to bargain with individual delegates oo an unprecedented scale.

The New York and New Jersey delegations, for instance, are overwhelmingly pro-Ford, but the President and Mr. Reagao have conetheless been put through the humbling experience of dealing at length with individual delegates.

Thuse efforts are typical of their activity in states where there are delegates who can be swayed. The courting goes on at twn levels. One is where governmental actions are promised or sought. President First has a distinct advantage at this level, and Mr. Reagan has already accused the President of using his official powers for political trading. The other level is more social—friendly phone calls from the candidate or cocknails with him—and aimed generally at enhancing the delegate's prestige at home.

The Connecticut delegation backed President Ford solidly, so there has been little wooing of the state's delegates by either candidate. But examples of retail campeigning nr bargaining for votes in New York and New Jersey abound.

Richard M. Rosenbaum, the New York Republican state chairman who is now a key figure in the Fird campaign, began the bargaining on a large scale months agn when the New York delegation was still uncommitted. He shuttled to and from Washington for well-publicized meetings with the President and Cebinet officials to try to obtain additional Federal aid for New York and other uncommitted Northeastern states. He now claims credit for winning additional aid for mass transit in Buffalo and heading off the closing of part of the Griffis Air Force Base in the Utica-Rome area.

A Brooklyn delegate, Salvatore Scotto, switched from uncommitted in President Ford after a telephone call from Vice President Rockefeller, who set up e series of conferences for Mr. Scotto in Washington to discuss additional Federal aid for the Gowanus Canal cleanup and improvement. Mr. Scotto may be getting action. He was in Washingtoo again last week for meetings with Federal officials.

Beyood this level of bargaining has been what even Mr. Rosenbaum referred to as "bizarre" dealings between the Presidential candidates and individual delegates. Edwin M. Schweok, the Suffolk County Republican leader who is threatened by a revolt within his party organization, tried to strengthen his prestige locally by wrangling an invitation to the Oval Office for 10 minutes several days before his seven-member delegation switched from uncommitted to the President.

Mr. Schwenk came dangerously close to implying vote trading when he said, io announcing the switch, that the President had agreed to look into the fiscal problems of the southwest Suffolk Sewer District.

Another delegate, Ralph DeBlasin of Menhattan, maneged to squeeze from the Ford campaign three V.I.P. tickets aboard the aircraft carrier Forrestal to witness Operation Sail, and from the Reagan campaign a tape-recorded 15-minute interview with Mr. Reagan two weeks ago in Brooklyn.

In New Jersey, eight delegates who were uncommitted, or leaning to Mr. Reagan, were wooed with dinner with Mr. and Mrs. Reagan at the Huliday Inn in Elizabeth. "We talked issues all evening," said ooe of the delegates, Mrs. Eudora Fike, vice chairman of the Middlesex County organization. Mrs. Fike was particularly interested in the deregulation of interstate commerce. Her husband is in tha trucking business.

Obviously capitalizing oo the tight race, another delegate, Daniel Fernandez, a Bronx district leader, switched from the President to uncommitted to the President to Mr. Reagan in 10 days.

Nevertheless, Mr. Fernandez got the royal treatment when he finally landed in the Reagan camp—a personal meeting with the candidate, a block-and-a balf limousine ride with the candidate and a crowded news conference where he hasked in the television lights with the candidate.

Outright vote trading—I'll-vote-for-you-if-you-dothis-for-me—is both a Federal and a state crime. The bargaining for delegate votes usually skirts that line. It is negotiation by implication—I'm-uncommitted - and - 1 - sure - would - like - to - see - you - do something-about-this-matter. That's politics as usual.

The Latest Investigations Involve Day Care Centers

The Poverty Programs: For Politicians, Too

By JOHN L. HESS

Once again, or still, the headlines recite the dreary litany of waste, inefficiency and alleged corruption in the anti-poverty programs that were the proudest achievement of recent administrations.

In New York City, the current inquiries involve day-care centers, free lunches and the Headstart program, all designed to help the children of the poor. With only slight changes, the beadlines could accurately refer to oursing homes, Medicaid mills or manpower training.

They could as well refer to other cities. A recent report by the General Accounting Office assailed the inadequacy of auditing of the $6 billion of reveoue-sharing funds assigned to 39,000 local governments—much as Arthur Levitt, the New York State Comptroller, last week criticized the city's auditing of day-care centers.

The repeated scandals have obscured the great needs that produced these reforms and the genuine relief they provided. By now it is a commonplace, even among many liberals, to say, "You can't solve a problem by throwing money at it." What the scandals suggest, bowever, is that a lot of the money was thrown, not at the problems, but at the politicians.

Because the need was great and immediate, the programs were initiated in haste and confusion, with little or no provision for auditing expenditures and effectiveness. Common abuses emerged within two or three years but by then those who wanted reform were confronted by entrenched industries involving billions of dollars and hundreds of thousands of jobs.

What cynics call "honest graft," the assignment of favors to frieods, had taken hold. The big contracts often went to promoters linked to major city and state politicians. The lesser patronage was divided among district leaders.

The New York City day-care program, supposedly a "nonprofit" system, is a prime example. As early as 1971, city and state investigators complained without result that the Department of Real Estate had signed loog-term leases with a handful of promoters to build ceoters, without regard for oeighborhood oeeds, without justification for rentals, without provision for oegotiation, without supervisino of construction.

Last November, State Senator Major R. Owens, a Brooklyn Democrat, began investigating the situation, with the belp of social workers from the Bank Street Day Care Consultation Service. They found what Comptroller Harrison J. Goldin has now confirmed: Nothing has changed since the abuses were detected in 1971.

In fact, the Department of Real Estate had signed 33 more such leases, for a total of 171, and had actually amended at least 12 to increase the rents. The rents were so bigh that most promoters were able to get relatively low-interest mortgages that exceeded the cost of land and construction.

"A Developer's Dream"

Thus, the typical promoter started out with a net surplus, and no investment of equity. His only cost being the mortgage installments, the balance of the rent was clear profit, to which be added the tax shelter of depreciation and mortgage interest. Cootroller Goldin called it "a developer's dream."

The cheaper the construction, the greater the initial profit, so the program was plagued with leaks in buildings and other defects that made much space unusable. (Mr. Goldin's engineers hava so far found 38 buildings in bad enough shape to warrant withholding the reot.) Most builders installed electric haseboard heating, the cheapest to put in but the most expensive to use—with the city paying the utility bills.

As a result, the bousing cost of the 171 direct-lease cecters (as distinct from the 200 that make their own housing arrangements) now amounts to nearly one out of every five dollars of total onlays for day care.

Ownership of most of the direct-lease centers has been traced to eight or nine individuals or partnerships. The Getz Coostruction Company obtained 10 of the first 15 awarded, and built 26 in all, most of which were later sold to three groups. Getz was represented by the law firm of Leonard Simon, a Brooklyn Democratic Assemblyman and sopporter of Mayor Lindsay. Another major operator, Euclid Avenue Associates, was incorporated by the politically influential law firm of Shea, Gould, Climenko, Kramer & Casey, and was partly financed by the scandal-clouded former Security National Bank. A principal in Euclid is N. Hiltoo Rosen, whose wifa was a former Brooklyn councilman, and whose brother was a former Lindsay aide.

As a result of bad planning, the system as a whole operated at only 75 percent capacity, and some centers were never occupied. Then the city's financial crisis forced the Agency for Child Development to begin closing centers. But its first targets were not the costly direct-lease centers but the cheaper ones that provided their own quarters. The city's rationale was that it would have to pay the rent on direct-lease centers anyway; the suggestion that the leases be broken was ruled out.

The Roc-Somers Day Care Center in Brooklyn was an exception, for a time. A direct-lease operation costing the city $134,000 a year in rent and taxes, it was closed Dec. 31 but reopened three months later under new sponsorship, headed by Councilman Sam Wright. Two day-care centers that occupied public buildings at no cost to the taxpayers were closed and the children assigned to the oew. Wright

A situation that could overshadow abuses in the day-care program concerns New York State's $80 million summer lunch program for poor children, financed by the Department of Agriculture. Justice Department investigators have found indications of enormous waste. Sponsors, some of whom were already heing investigated in connection with last year's program, bad been granted contracts and huge advances without question. Their suppliers had billed for deliveries to nonexistent distribution points; at other sites, large amounts of food went unused.

The scandals sadden the city's social workers, who see the needy as the ultimate victims. They say the children need food, the handicapped need training, the working mothers need child care, and so far, it is the programs, not the abuses, that have been cut.

Senator Owens of Brooklyn summed it up: "Every social service has a built-in ripoff factor." To the many civil servants and professionals who are trying to do their jobs, the ripoff factor is politics.

In Summary

A National Flu Vaccine Program Is Now Certain

The national swine fin immunization program, delayed for weeks because drug manufacturers were unable to get liability insurance, is under way again because of an unusual law, passed by Congress at the urging of President Ford. It provides that all suits for damages arising under the program are to be filed directly against the Federal Government, not against other program participants, whether state agencies, corporations or individuals.

The legislation extends, for the first time, the protection of the Federal Tort Claims Act to persons and corporations other than Government employees. The Tort Claims Act allows certain liability claims to be settled by administrative action rather than court procedures. In combination with other laws, it also provides that in case of liability suits in state courts against several classes of Government employees-including drivers, Veterans' Administration medical personnel and Public Health Service doctors—the Government rather than the individual becomes the defendant and the case is automatically removed to the Federal

The new law does not, however, entirely exempt drug manufacturers, or other program participants, from all risks. If there is a successful suit against the Government, it is free to sue in turn anyone whose negligence

Congressional opponents of the hill claimed that relieving drug manufac-turers from a normal risk of doing business was a dangerous precedent, hut they were overwhelmed by proponents who maintained that without such a law there would be no immunization program at all.

Vaccinations are now scheduled to begin at the end of September, chiefly through state public health services. The public programs will be free; the vaccine will also be available to private physicians, who will be able to charge for giving the shot but not for

An estimated 120 million doses of the vaccine have already been manufactured, hut even if a million shots a day are given after Oct. 1-a rate health officials hope to than half the population will have been covered hy Jan. 1, when the peak of the flu season normally begins. Efforts will be made to vaccinate elderly and high-risk persons first, and in fact the state programs in Massachusetts and Washington may be limited to such persons.

From Disaster To Case Study

In an attempt to learn more about environmental health hazards, medical experts are planning an extensive study of the effects that an agricultural contaminant has had on farmers in Michigan.

The contaminant is a toxic chemical called polybrominated biphenyls, or PBB. It is a close relative to PCB, an industrial pollutant that, in beavily exposed people, causes liver and thyroid abnormalities, nerve damage, skin lesions, pregnancy problems and, in laboratory animals, cancer and growth retardation. PBB is stored in the body fat and can he passed on to succeeding generations.

Three years ago feed mills in Michigan accidentally mixed the chemical into animal feed. Before the accident was discovered, the meat, milk and eggs of tens of thousands of contaminated farm animals were passed on to consumers, and the bodies of many animals that had died mysteriously were used in protein supplements fed to livestock. Ensuing developments bave created a widespread controversy in the state.

Since the discovery, 538 heavily contaminated farms have been quarantined, more than 30,000 cattle and uncounted other farm animals have been destroyed and buried, and many of the farmers have been compensated by insurance companies for damages.

Other farmers claim that their animals have become sick and died as a result of PBB contamination at levels below the 0.3 parts per million that the United States Food and Drug Administration has set as fit for human

Some farmers say that since the PBB got into the products of their animals, they and their families have experienced strange symptoms, including extreme fatigue, menstrual problems, hair loss, inability to resist infections and digestive difficulties. The symptoms are the result, they believe, of eating foods that the state and the Food and Drug Administration say can be safely sold to consumers. Dr. John Ishister, epidemiologist for the Michigan Department of Health, says studies have shown that low levels of PBB have no adverse effects on animals and that "a lot of the cattle symptoms look very much like the result of poor animal husbandry." He says that a survey of PBB farm families turned up "no evidence of any kind of symptom complex related to

The basic question: Do the reported ' health problems occur more frequently in people who have consumed PBB than in people who have not?

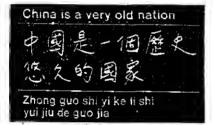

In search of an answer, in October medical experts from the Environmental Sciences Laboratory at Mount Sinai Medical Center in New York will study farmers who have been exposed to PBB and also a control group from outside Michigan and thought to have had no PBB exposure. The findings will then be compared.

The experts say the conditions are almost ideal for studying the effects of an environmental pollutant because PBB was made for a limited time in only one place, and the contamination is still essentially confined to a relatively small area.

China Tries Out Romanized Script

China's effort to simplify its language and make it a tool of mass education has progressed to the point where the first official use of romanized script has begun in one of the nation's 29 administrative regions. Formal use of the script in all of China is not expected for many years.

A three-part language plan, decreed by Mao Tse-tung 25 years ago, is an attempt ultimately to convert all written Chinese from a vocabulary of 50,000 different ideographs, or characters, to a simple phooetic alphabet based on the Roman letters used in writing English.

The first part of the plan is simplification of the ideographs, which must be learned individually. The characters offer few clues to pronunciation, and some require up to 25 brush strokes

The second part is standardization of the spoken tongue by popularizing the use of Mandarin, which is the Peking dialect. There are at least five major and up to 100 minor dialects in China, Standardization of pronunclation is a necessary step to phoneticization. The third part, Romanization, bas not progressed as well as simplification and standardization, but last week the Chinese press agency Hsinhua reported that the new script had been made official in the northwest Sinking Uighur Autonomous Region. Government documents, textbooks and other books, newspapers and street signs will now he changed to the new form. As preparation, the romanized alphabet had been introduced on an informal hasis in achools and some publications.

The Chinese Government sees the language plan as eliminating barriers to literacy and improving communications among the Chinese themselves and with the rest of the world. Romanization is also politically important, especially in border regions, as a means of adapting minority populations to the Chinese language and culture.

Viking Won't Say Yes or No

After nearly a month's accumulation of tantalizing hut puzzling data, Viking 1 scientists are unable either to confirm or rule out the existence of life forms on Mars. The feeling is growing that the present exploration may not yield conclusive proof.

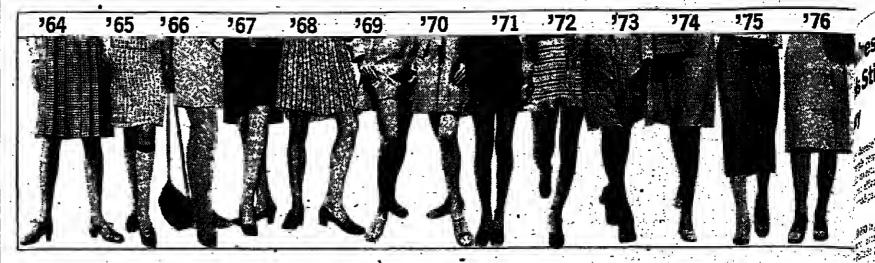

Biology instruments have sent back readings that show an active chemistry in Martian soil, but it is unclear whether the chemistry is the result of recognizable life forms or unusual inorganic processes. Scientists say that many living processes could be, in effect, mimicked by nonliving chemis-

An organic chemistry analysis experiment, designed to search for comands like those produced by Earth life, found mostly dry minerals in its soil sample.

The scientists hope to clarify some of the ambiguitles with "control" experiments in coming weeks, but Dr. Joshua Lederberg, a member of the Viking project team, says that even then; "We may not be able to answer the question [whether life exists] with Viking.'

Some scientists believe the answer, if there is one, will have to await future landers that carry more sophisticated laboratories and "rover" vehicles to sample many areas of Mars. The experiments of Viking 1, and those of Viking 2 scheduled to begin next month, are confined to areas adjacent to the landers.

"Fashion is as profound and critical a part of the social life of man as sex, and is made up of the same ambivalent mixture of irresistible urges and inevitabla taboos."

> RENE KONIG - "The Restless Image: A Sociology of Fashion."

Professor König, a German acciologist, may be right about fashion, but getting even people in the business to admit it these days is like trying to get a definitive Republican delegate count. Because one of the taboos of which Professor König speaks is what Tom Wolfe, the cultural journalist, calls "the anti-fashion taboo."

In many circles, it is considered gauche to admit that one is interested in fashion at all. So a young socialite assures Vogue magazine that aha just slips into "something simple" at night, hy which she means a black, floor-length gown hy Mme. Gres with an emerald pendant.

Anti-fashion is what caused a whole generation of young people in the late 1960's to occasionally vary their jeans-and-tenni costume to Big Jim overalls with workboots. It was, after all, the fashion.

Just what is it that impels people to want to be in fashion, or even anti-fashion? What makes them rush about spending remarkable sums of money trying to look alike, and, more, alike in the latest way? Most people in the fashion industry are convinced that women no longer want to look alike. They want to look different in the latest way. And according to the fashion press and this newspaper, the latest way is St. Laurent's "peasant look." The peasant look has caused considerable excitement among the fashionable, and a like amount of puzzling among the anti-fashionable over why anyone would give a June Weir, senior vice president at Women'a Wear Daily, said, "Why do women pay attention to fashion? Because we all wear clothes, that's why!

"Particularly in the 60's, a tremendous number of women were very status conscious-Vuitton bags and Gucci shoes and Hermes scarves. Women who didn't feel secure about themselves felt they needed Blair Sabol, a sometime fashion or anti-fashion columnist for The Village Voice, said, "I see it as being on three levels. There are people like me who really don't give a damn. Then there's the group that gives lip service to not giving a damn, but they've got the swift eye out. They're in Bloomingdale's every Saturday, slapping those racks, looking for the latest thing.

"The third level is ladies with a lot of money and no taste. They all go to parties and look alike. They have no identity. They go to a designer like Halston or St. Laurent with no idea as to whether it looks good on them, but they know it's safe and in the height of fashion.'

Professor of sociology Neil J. Smelser, in his book "Theory of Collective Behavior," says, "It is im-portant to [style leaders] to be among the first in order to reap the psychological rewards of being in the forefront of fashion, and it is almost as important to flee from a new style when it is assumed by the masses. Further back in the procession, among the followers, the motivation is more purely sociablepersons adapt to styles to avoid being conspicuously traditional, rather than to be conspicuously original."

There are almost as many theories about why we dress the way we do as there are psychologists and sociologists who have written on the subject. With the possible exception of Benthamite Eskimos, few people seem to dress entirely for practicality and protection. Even among primitive peoples, such ornameets as pelts, skins, claws, hooves, teeth, hair, ears, hrushes, feathers, bones, antiers and horns are used both to denote status and for the sheer decoration

Will Hypnotism Entrance the Police?

By RICHARD M. RESTAK

These things have happened recently: . Franklin Edward Ray, the driver of the hus containing 26 children kidnapped last month in Chowchilla, Calif., was able, under hypnosis, to recall the license number of the kidnappers' van.

. In preparation for the raid on Entenbe Airport, Israeli intelligence officers allegedly hypnotized several previously-released hostages. One of them was able to give helpful physical details of the air-

. A hit-and-run driver in New Jersey was apprehended by the use of information obtained by hypnotizing a policeman who had seen the accident. Despite these examples of hypnosis as an information-gathering tool, scientists are far from agreeing on what hypnosis can'do and whether it has any place in criminal investigation. Some scientists even disagree on whether or not hypnosis exists. Still, there are some areas of agreement. First, hypnosis is generally described as a form of concentrated attention which enables a person to focus sharply on topics suggested by the hypnotist. Second, bypnosis is not a state of sleep. Electroencephalographic tracings made during hypnosis show waking patterns, though so far a typical pattern has not been described for all hypnotized subjects. Finally, other acientific measurements have been equally unsuccessful in describing or detecting the hypnotic state. Dr. Martin Orne, director of the ex-perimental psychiatry unit at the University of Pennsylvania, says "There is no technique known to medical science that can say with certainty whether a person is or is not bypnotized." On most other aspects of hypnosis the experts are in disagreement. Traditionally regarded as an "altered state of consciousness" combining elements of both sleeping and waking, hypnosis has been alternatively described in terms of the attitudes, expectations and instruction surrounding its use: in essence, the "role playing" demanded between the hypnotist and his subject.

Such a view conveniently does away with the "hypnotic state" itself. "Since no test has been able to detect the existence of the hypnotic state, there is no reason to assume that such a state exists," says Dr. Theodore X. Barber, director of psychological research at Medfield Hospital in Massachusetts. "Anything obtained under hypnosis can also be gotten by suggestion alone, and in about the same proportion of subjects."

Some other traditional beliefs have also been challenged by recent investigations of hypnosis. For example, a person's hypnotizability, formerly regarded as a hit-and-miss proposition, is turning out to be predictable, testable and relatively stable over long periods of time. With the help of profiles drawn up at Harvard and Stanford, accurate predictions about hypnotic subjects are now possible. People with rich fantasy lives are especially favored, with the best subjects found among adventurers, sports enthusiasts and actors. An intriguing but so far unexplained finding is an association between punishment in childhood and later hypnotizability as an adult.

Such recent scientific inquiry into hypnotism has apparently helped lend it respectability and made easier its introduction as a tool in criminal investigation. But, as at Chowchilla and Entebbe, hypnosis is at present restricted to use with cooperative nesses who are having trouble recalling impor

Epidemiologists are now investigating indications that two persons who attended the International Eucharistic Congress in Philadelphia last week may have also contracted the disease.

The possible "suspect" in the legion-naires' illness is nickel carbonyl, a highly toxic chemical used, for example, in the manufactura of magnetic tape. The symptoms of legionnaires' disease are generally consistent with nickel carbony! poisoning. Federal scientists have ruled out 17

At the end of the week there was still no sign that the disease was contagious, and little indication of new cases, though at least one additional death was under investigation.

The Ultimate Hybrid

The first "hybridization" of human and plant cellular material has been accomplished at the Brookhaven National Laboratory at Upton, L.I., in an experiment that may help explain which chromosomes of the buman cell nucleus are associated with particular

The human nuclei were removed from their surrounding cellular material, or cytoplasm, and then fused into the cytoplasm of cells from a tobacco plant. The resulting "hybrid" contains no cytoplasm from the human cell, only nuclear material.

Since there is evidence that cytoplasm influences the role of the nucleus in controlling the development of a cell, scientists expect that as the cells multiply some of the human chromosomal material may he lost, as happens with man-olouse hybrids. If this takes place, most probably the lost material will be that which the plant does not "need"; specific human genetic characteristics may thus be isolated by exclusion.

Wants 'Third Party' in Teacher Bargaining

Critic Seeks to Complicate Negotiations

eachers and school officials all across the United States are now engaged in collective bargaining. They are oegotiating new contracts where their old ones have recently expired or are about to expire. The major issues which are subjects of negotiations are salary, hours, vacations, holidays, grievance procedures and working

Given the state of the economy, negotlators are having a hard time reaching agreement. Teachers, understandably, want to improve their lot or - at the very least - to keep up with increases io the cost of living. But with massive unemployment, there are billions of tax dollars lost; the unemployed not only do not pay taxes but must receive various forms of public assistance to stay alive. Fewer and fewer dollars are available for schools.

These are tough problems that place great burdens on the collective bargaining process. But there are efforts to complicate and encumber the bargaining process even more. The May 1976 issue of the Harvard Educational Review contains a lead article by Charles W. Cheng on "Community Representation in Teacher Collective Bargaining: Problems and Prospects."

Cheog describes the meteoric rise of teacher unions over the last two decades. As late as 1967 there were only 389 agreements covering 208,000 teachers. By 1973 these figures had grown to 4.200 agreements covering 1.4 million teachers. Chengargues that this growth of teacher bargaining has had undesirable consequences. Public sector bargaining. Cheng maintains, includes not only salaries and working conditions but also matters of educational policy. The nature of the bargaining process is such that school boards hire negotiating experts to bargain with the negotiating experts employed by teachers. These specialists, together with mediators and arbitrators employed by labor relatioos agencies, negotiate agreements that determine policy, says the author. Thus, Cheng writes, "More and more educational policy matters are decided in the negotiating process by fewer and fewer people."

Chang suggests a number of changes in the bargaining process: · Encouraging unions and boards to seek community input in formulating bargaining demands:

· Establishing multi-level bargaining so that supplementary agreements to the main contract are negotiated with regional school boards;.

 Allowing citizens to watch the negotiations in open bargaining sessions; Granuing commonity groups observer status and allowing observers to report to the community · Having multi-party negotiations in which a third force would be formally recognized at the bargaining table.

With the current attacks on teachers, public employees and collective bargainiog, we can expect that Cheng's article will be given wide circulation. That is too bad, since it is hased on the false premise that educational policy matters are determined in negotiations. Cheng cites no evidence at all to show that such policy matters as which subjects to teach, the content of the curriculum, whether schools should adopt a more "progressive" or more "traditional" approach, whether students should be promoted automatically or left back if their work is inadequate - are decided in collective bargaining. The reason he does not cite the evidence is that there is none. Cheng's whole argument is built on sand.

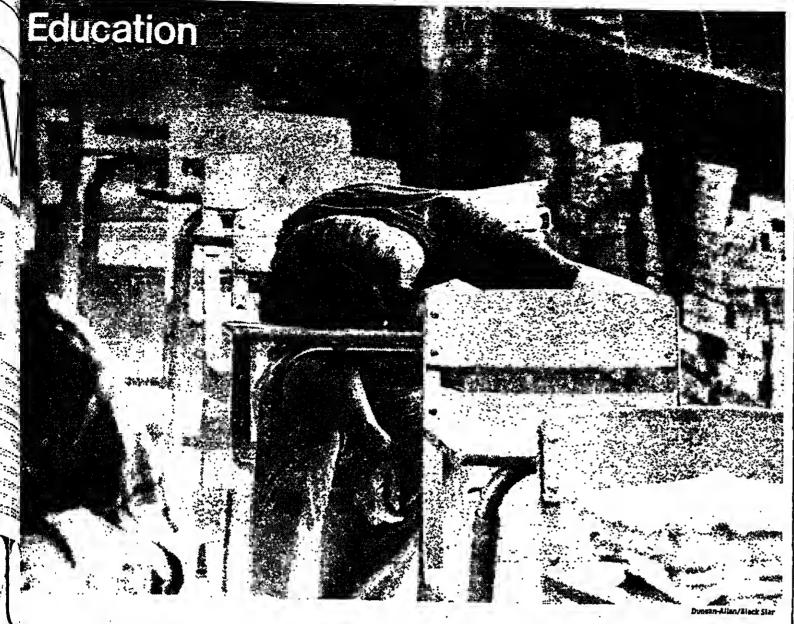

It is true that teachers have long sought more of a say in matters that lie within their professional domain. But to acknowledge that teachers and teacher unions have sought such justifiable input is something quite different from alleging that they. have in fact achieved it - and something quite different from attributing to the collective bargaining process that which lies predominantly outside it.

The rest of his argument is equally faulty. To Cheng, the elected leaders of teacher unions don't really represent teachers, and elected school boards don't really represent their communities, so we have to find a way to bring real representatives people into negotiations. How is this to be done? Cheng writes: "Many parties for instance, Leagues of Women Voters, Urban League chapters, block clubs/PTAs, child advocacy groups, elected officials, teachers' unions or school boards - could call meetings to elect third-party representatives. All but the last three groups mentioned could supply bargainers. The third-party bargainers could include a given number of parents and a given number of community representatives. This latter category may include non-parents, for example, neighborhood youth workers who counsel troubled teenagers, with interest in the local schools and the important perspectives." Is that clear? It so, there are at least a few questions that arise: if teacher union officials and school boards don't represent the people they are supposed to represent, how are we going to find "true" representatives of groups that are far less specifically defined — "the community," for example? And if we are to add layers of people to the bargaining process — difficult enough when it includes just labor and management - how are contracts ever to be achieved?

Cheng's criticisms and his proposals are not new. He is the most recent of a long line of radical critics of business, labor and collective bargaining. He wants to revolutionize the bargaining process so that it will not merely establish agreements on salaries and working conditions but, rather, promote alliances among parents, communities, teachers and students to oppose the status quo, authoritarian and hierarchical school systems.

It may be that some of the changes Cheng seeks are desirable, but to demand that collective bargaining solve all of the problems of education is to ask too much of it. Those who are attracted by Cheng's arguments should compare collective bargaining in America with the functioning of unions in many other countries. American unions have succeeded in obtaining both gains for their members and policy change by knowing the difference between what can be done at the bargaining table and what has to be accomplished through the ballot box. Those who bave confused the arenas have rarely accomplished anything.

Laws in most places allow for the dismissal of tenured teachers for incompetence, as well as for moral turpitude and other "just causes," but hearings are required and relatively few actions - perhaps fewer than a dozen in an entire state in a year - are pursued to conclusioo. The statisties do not show the numhers of teachers who resign their positions rather than face formal

The growing influence and power of teacher organizations in protecting jobs is often cited as a reason that school districts retain teachers widely regarded as incompetent. Teachers have struggled to insure that the stripping away of tenure is a long and arduous process.

From the point of view of the teachers, tenure is essential to academic freedom because it protects them from dismissal for capricious

"It satisfactorily serves the purpose of protecting experienced teachers from unwarranted harassment and giving them due process wheo their employment is threat-eoed," the New Jersey Education Association states in defense of tenure in a booklet published last year.

But everywhere that there is a tenure law there is a prescribed process for removing teachers. Thus, part of the blame for permitting incompetent teachers to remain in their jobs must rest with the administrators and school board

"The problem is to get the people who ruo the schools to be willing to use the process," says Ralph J. Flynn, executive director of the California Teachers Association. We think that school officials prefer to use tenure as a cop-out for doing nothing hecause they don't want to take the time to get involved and huild a case against an incompetent teacher."

Mr. Flynn points out that hearing panels in California have sustained charges of incompetence against teachers in 80 percent of the cases that have been pursued. School officials have apparently contributed to the problem in another way: They have permitted the teouring of teachers who never should have been continued in their positions in the first place.

Teacher Evaluation

The granting of tenure is supposed to follow an evaluation process that occurs during the teacher's probationary period. All too often, educational observers maintain, the evaluations have been perfunctory or nonexistent. Teachers in some areas confide to having received tenure without anyone ever having visited their classrooms to observe their work.

The problem of haphazardly awarding tenure was compounded during the era of burgeoning enrollments, when teachers were needed desperately and short cuts were taken to obtain them. Enrollments are no longer growing, but diminishing. It is estimated that because of the enrollment slowdown and the low turnover in the profession, 80 percent of the teachers who will be in the nation's elementary and secondary classrooms 10 years from now little has been door to get rid of incompetent teachers is the lack of agreement on what constitutes competency in teaching. It is more an art than a science. Much of what takes place in the student-teacher relationship does not lend itself to objective evaluation.

Surely one of the reasons that so

One problem is the difficulty of establishing a valid or reliable relationship between what teachers do and what students learn. Another is that different children learn in different ways at different rates.

"The whole process of teacher evaluation has to be improved immeasurably," says William H. Hebert, executive secretary-treasurer of the Massachusetts Teachers Association. 'We need administrators with the courage to do something about evaluation."

Massachusetts has been a leader in developing a rigorous procedure for weeding out bad risks hefore they get permanent employm state law taking effect this year puts teachers on probation during their first two years and requires their evaluation hy a team comprised of another teacher, an administrator and an appointee of the school board. ATTENTION TEACHERS! ATTENTION LIBRARIANS!

Interesting positions in both the teaching and library fields are advertised in The New York Times Week In Review Section every Sunday!

Look them over. You may be qualified for a number of jobs offered. What's more, you might find an interesting opportunity or two to investigate in another part of the country.

More positions also are advertised in The New York Times on Wednesdays. Look for the "About Education" feature and check out the jobs . . . next Wednesday.

Incidentally, if you have a teaching or library job to fill, the Sunday Week In Review and the Wednesday "About Education" feature are both excellent coast-to-coast showcases for you. They reach 4,505,000 readers on Sundays and 2,664,000 on weekdays.

Reserve your space! And ask about the Sunday/Wednesday combination rate.

At Stake in Kansas City

What happens at a major party convention is bound to be significant to the future of the country, but the convention opening tomorrow in Kansas City threatens to have a more immediate impact on the future of the Republican Party.

The pull of conservatism, which has been intermittently strong for some years, has now become powerful enough to shift that party's political center markedly to the right. In the bitter Goldwater-Rockefeller struggle of 1964 the issue was drawn between conservative and liberal Republicans; the battle of Kansas City Is joined between moderate cooservatives and immoderate conservatives. What is left of the party's liberal faction is reduced to rallying support for a candidate with exceedingly doubtful credentials for liberal leadership.

Even at this late bour there has been nn rusb in the Ford bandwagon, such as one would normally expect for a man as close to nomination as the President now is by all objective counts. The failure of such a development suggests an intraparty ambivalence that borders on paralysis. But since a majority vote is nevertheless almost within the President's reach-incumbency and familiarity are still powerful assets—the Reagan camp may have to settle for such other powerful influences as it bas already exerted on the convention.

Contests over major planks of the platform-foreign policy, abortions, equal rights for women, the Panama. Canal-even where they were not won by the Reagan forces reflected the strength of intraparty currents moving away from the just-right-of-center positions of the Ford Administration. More dramatic perhaps has been the effort to force on bim a conservative choice for Vice President. The chairman of the still uncommitted Mississippi delegation has made known his "shock" that the moderate Mr. Ford should even bave included for consideration sucb possibilities as Senators Percy of Illinois, Hatfield of Oregon, Weicker of Connecticut or Brooke of Massachusetts.

Should the tactics of the conservatives force the convention to a bitter last-ditch conflict, it is hard to see how Jimmy Carter and the Democrats can fail to be the beneficiaries. However strong the right-wingers appear to be in Kansas City, Governor Reagan runs consistently and substantially behind President Ford in the country, according to all the polls. That would indicate that they are still the minority of a minority party. In states where both parties engaged in significant primaries this year, Democratic candidates got 61.4 percent of the total votes cast to 38.6 percent for Republicans.

That is bardly a circumstance in which the Republican Party can be belped by a fierce ideological division. Yet so high is the feeling that between 25 and 45 percent of self-identified Republicans are prepared, according to surveys, to stay bome on Election Day-or defect-if their candidate loses in Kansas City.

If that evidence is even halfway borne out, the G.O.P. may soon be faced with the problem of sbeer survival as a credible party. An irreparable Republican disintegration might force a national realignment into liberal and conservative parties-a polarization that would unquestionably be tidier and more logical than the present system but one that could put a dangerous premium on ideology. In other democracies, that has been the road to political fragmentation and the instability of government by coalition. Reason enough to bope that moderation will prevail in Kansas City.

A Start in Portugal

Gen. António de Spinola had every right to return to Portugal to face his accusers in court and elsewhere; but his arrival in Lisbon at this time only adds to the heavy burdens of a fledgling minority Government-Portugal's first freely elected one in balf a centuryjust as It takes its tentative first steps.

The presence of the former provisional President is divisive in a society already dangerously polarized. It infuriates the Communists and their allies, who charge General Spinola with a long list of offenses, including involvement in an abortive coup of March 1975. And it will embolden further a reviving rightist movement, faithful to the memory of Portugal's long-time strongman, António de Oliveira Salazar.

In the long run, Prime Minister Mário Soares is probably right in believing it is healthier to allow potential opponents of the new democratic Government to come home than to have them plotting abroad. In any event, Mr. Soares understands that the survival of democracy in Portugal depends far less on activities of General Spinola than on the Government's success in reviving and modernizing Western Europe's most backward

With tacit approval of Parliament (no vote was taken) of his Socialist Government's recovery program, Mr. Soares and his ministers must now get down to a staggering task. They must curb the worst inflation in Europe without adding to an unemployment rate already so high as to threaten widespread unrest. They must revive industries, many of which have never been competitive but all of which have been hampered by erratic policies of provisional governments for two years. They must somehow absorb 600,000 refugees from Portugal's lost overseas territories.

Although other parties in the National Assembly criticized the Soares program—the Communists said it would "open the way to a capitalist recovery"-none put down a no-confidence motion. The democratic parties recognized the gravity of Portugal's crisis and were ready to give Mr. Soares a fair chance. But many still believe Mr. Soares would have been wiser to form a coalition with the reformist Popular Democrats, thus insuring a healthy parliamentary majority.

Fortunately, the United States promptly signaled support for the new Government, signing agreements for $25 million in economic and social aid. This is a tiny fraction of Portugal's needs from abroad, but the gesture is more important than the initial amounts as an earnest of Washington's confidence in Portugal's hard-won democracy.

Yugoslav Contradictions

The public attack by President Tito on Ambassador Laurence H. Silberman dramatized the recent deterioration of American-Yugoslav relations. Marshal Tito accused the Ambassador of launching a campaign against Yugoslavia and of ioterferiog in its internal affairs. The most noteworthy fact about Ambassadar Silberman's recent activity, bowever, is his successful effort to gain the release of an American citizen, Laszlo Toth, who had spent a year in a Yugoslav jail after conviction on dubious charges.

In recent years, while Yugoslavia has been warmly wooing American and other Western investors, trying to encourage the largest possible transfer of American capital and technology into Yugoslavia, Belgrade has kept up a propaganda barrage against Western, "imperialism." At the recent European Conference of Communist Parties in East Berlin, Marshal Tito blamed world tensions on "the deep crisis of the capitalist system." And in the United Nations and other world forums, Yugoslav spokesmen have denounced the United States and its policies

Internally, there have been increasing signs of a return to Stalinist conformity, a move that was preceded several years ago by a comprehensive purge of major liberal figures in the Yugoslav Communist leadership. Such a schizophrenic policy is now leading to a head-on collision of arbitrary Yugoslav police action against Americans and other Western visitors and Belgrade's quest for American investment and American technological know-how. It is a dangerous contradiction that American businessmen thinking of investing in the Yugoslav economy cannot safely ignore.

Food Prospects

The Department of Agriculture's August grain crop forecasts suggest that the United States will reap another series of bumper harvests this year. Even though the estimate for corn is somewhat lower than was projected last month, the outlook is still for a record harvest, and thus for an abundance of livestock feed. The latest wheat estimate is 3 percent higher than last month's, placing it only 2 percent below last year's record crop. The soybean outlook is relatively poorer than the expected corn and wheat harvests-12 perceot below last year's-but this would still make the 1976 soybean harvest the third largest in history.

By coincidence the Government crop forecasts were released simultaneously with the July wholesale price indexes. The latter statistics underscored the importance of adequate barvests to the fight against inflation: Overall, wholesale prices rose in July only 0.3 percent, and the July 1976 wholesale price index was only 4.9 percent bigher than a year ago. By the standards of recent years this suggests remarkable stability, and much of the credit for the very moderate wholesale price rise goes to the abundance of farm production. In July, wholesale farm prices actually declined 1 percent, while prices of processed foods and feeds fell almost as much.

The August grain production forecasts indicate that, barring some major catastrophe, this country will bave enough wheat, corn and soybeans for its own needs and will be able to make, as in previous years, substantial contributions to meeting needs of other countries. The drought in Western Europe makes it likely that America's NATO allies may be prime customers for grain in the next 12 months. But the prospect is that United States production can meet these needs, and those of others, without serious strain and without severe inflationary price rises for food such as were painfully experienced in some earlier years of this decade.

The Signs

The urgency that was midsummer begins to relax. You see signs of it in the trees, at the roadside where uncut grass ripens seed heads, in fields and pastures. Early goldenrod gleams in the fencerows where wild asters begin to take the place of daisies and black-eyed

Spring is sprouting and early summer is the rush of growth and the competition of blooming. Late summer is more sedate. It is fulfillment of time and purposethe seed, the fruit, for which growth itself was destined. The time of haste is past; the pod, the capsule, the nut. the seed-head already formed and coming to completion. The egg is hatched, the fledgling on the wing. Even the bees are less argent in their rounds. Rabbits scurry at the roadside, well past the nursling stage. Woodchucks, full of sun and succulence, begin to lay on fat

Hot days are still upon us, August days. But the sun's nooning is from a different angle. Nights lengthen, dusk to dawn. Crows are restless and full of noise. Katydids begin to scratch the night, field crickets rasp at the warm afternoons. All are a part of the pattern, the maturing change that has its own calendar. For who can stay the wind or hasten the apple? Time flows with the season, not the other way round, and the season flows like a river, from its own springs. Summer ripens and matures, even as the wild grapes on their climbing vines. August leans toward September and autumn.

Problems in Combatting Terrorism

To the Editor:

An international convention to deal with terrorism has been suggested by the Federal Republic of Germany and the United States has apparently agreed on the utility of such a convention. But it is difficult to understand what such a convention would contain that could be useful.

Is there any doubt that giving asylum to those who commit crimes abroad without the authority of a state is already illegal at international law? If there is any doubt on that point, is a convention obliging states to refuse asylum to so-called terrorists likely to be accepted by potential asylum states? If there is no present doubt, is oot the refusal of some states to sign such a convention likely to create fresh doubt? A coovention obliging states either to punish or extradite seems superfluous anyhow, wheo a mere refusal to admit, or an expulsion without either punishment or extradition, is often adequate for law enforcement purposes and may be the politically wisest act; a state may want to avoid involvement in cooperation either to suppress terrorists with influential constitutents, or to support them by actually granting

An even more serious problem exists if a convention is urged as a basis for future cooperation to suppress terrorism. How is international terrorism to be defined? Assuming an acceptable

Nixon-Ford Reference

I am puzzled by the criticism of Jimmy Carter for referring to the Nixon-Ford Administration. That is a factual description of what the last four years have been: two years Nixon Administration, two years Ford Administratioo, But the Republicans were elected four years ago to serve a fouryear term, bence Nixon-Ford Admioistration. To go beyond the mere isctual, however, it is indeed still a Nixon-Ford Administration when one observes the game of musical chairs (or is it musical appointments) as one former Nixon aide is moved from Job to job, to replace another former Nixon alde who bas moved elsewhere withio the Administration.

It would seem that of sil the nooindicted or non-convicted members of the Nixon Administration the only one Ford did not retain was Ron Ziegler. It would seem surprising that for a man in Congress for twenty years, that President Ford would have to rely so totally on such a small group to fill hls personnel needs. One would think ss House minority leader be would definition, is it not likely to be more a signpost to the terrorist than an inhibition? If states quarrel about the applicability of the convention in principle, will that not make it more difficult than hitherto for any states, signatory or not, to take cooperative action against a terrorist group?

It seems to be that there are some areas of international law in which the certainty that a treaty creates is less important than flexibility. The automatic sanctions of the League of Nations certainly were no more effective in stopping Italian action in Ethiopia than the political procedures of the United Nations Security Council and General Assembly io stopping North Korean action in South Korea.

I suggest that in combating terrorism, predictability would work to the advantage of the terrorists more than states concerned with combating terrorism. The sppropriate degree of certainty can nonetheless be achieved by forthright unilateral declarations of states indicating their willingness to cooperate as the occasion requires in suppressing terrorism and taking the position that such cooperation is required by international law on the same basis that international law required states to cooperate in suppressing piracy in the 17th and 18th ceoturies. Hurdles in N.A.A.C.P. Transition

Perbaps the most alarming aspect of the current disagreement within the N.A.A.C.P. coocerning the retirement of its highly respected executive director, Roy Wilkios, is that the coverage in The Times has evoked such little public comment-at least on your editorial pages. The orderly transfer of power is the sine qua non of any democratic system. The N.A.A.C.P. is important not only to black Americaos but to all.

As a political scientist who bas served as a consultant at some time to every executive in the N.A.A.C.P. from the Lodge Gossett proposal of 1948 to the education brief in 1953, I know that personslity clashes and differences of opinion between strong personalities have been the rule in the organization. At the very outset, DuBois and Villard engaged in a disruptive controversy over "The Crisis" that ran for many years. The point is that none of these battles burt the organization in a vital spot. Ways were found to resolve them. Nor should the present disagreement be allowed to cause major disaffection in the organization or make orderly transition impossible. No harm can be done at this point by granting the executive director his additional six months of service while appointing his successor to "learn the ropes." It is a sensible arrangement and one that provides at the next N.A.A.C.P. convention in St. Louis a setting filled with sentiment for both Roy Wilkins and the organization. We must build on the past, oot degrade it. Regardless of what commitments may or may not have been made intramurally with regard to the retirement, the present proposals are public and constitute pledges to the membership and to the public in general, A grant of six months is a safe grant.

Regardless of organizational needs, Roy Wilkins deserves every appropriate consideration from the N.A.A.C.P. He was one of the band of "newcomers" who along with Walter

'Useless' Promotions

To the Editor:

George Washington and his memory need no more stars, swards or promotions, especially from the military. [Editorial Aug. 8.] Now is the time to slop any attempt to exalt the Fathers of the Republic with 'useless promotions which serve no one save the promotors. This vain and dangerous precedent then could be used to glorify other Presidents who had served in the Armed Forces, with the reflected glory shining on today's armed services public relations units. Can you imagine: Colonel General Abe Lincoln, Commodors John F. Kennedy, Rear Admiral of the Pacific Richard M. Nixon and Admiral of the Inland Sea Gerald R. Ford?

However, if this practice is to be put in force, all who served should be jumped up a few ranks. It costs nothing; it means nothing. JACK RYAN New York, Aug. 9, 1976

On Paying the Bill

By William L. Taylor

WASHINGTON—The center of the Democratic Party has held, and that is no mean feat. But what is et the center? Or, to put it differently, what is at the core of Jimmy Carter?

Few clues to this mystery heve emerged from Mr. Carter's pronouncement. The question usually posed is, What can we expect from Mr. Certer if we give him our trust end our votes? Equelly interesting is the question of whet Mr. Carter expects of us.

On this the caodidate hes been virtuelly silent. In his ecceptance speech at the convention, he portrayed us as decent folks who have been deceived and betrayed by our Government. The feult, he reassured us, lies not in ourselves hut in our (incumbent) political stars. And clearly there is some truth to the view that we have been victims who deserve better at the bands of our Government.

But if Richard Nixon was a political eccident that befell us, surely millions of Americans were guilty of contributory negligence. If Government officials have been hribed or suhverted, priveta citizeos must have been accomplices.

While millions have lost their jobs during the worst recession since the 1930's, tourism and other luxury trades have boomed end, from the vantage points of Montego Bay and Aspen, aome Americans bave complained of excessive Government expenditures. Surely waste and distorted priorities are not sins that have been specifically reserved to Government.

During thesa years when Government has been serving us ill, some of us Americans bave heen out oo the streets chanting slogans of recial hatred. Others, from suburban sanctuaries, have been watching the cities rot and decrying the criminal tendencies of their inhabitants.

And what are we to make of the fact that the only unruly mob at the Democratic convention was made up of status-hungry luminaries angry at being denied access to the sociel event of the month hosted by the publisher of a sometime antiwar weekly? Liberals all, no doubt, who are still equally concerned about injustice to people other than themselves.

In short, model citizens that we are (as we end our new political leaders keep assuring ourselves during this Bicentennial year) there may be a few minor flaws in our character that still need work. Certainly we need reassurance that we are good folks, but perhaps even more we need someone to tell us how we can be better.

Candidate Carter has told us that he would pursue tax reform, a perennially unsuccessful quest. One may wonder, however, how many of the cheering salesmen, executives, union officials and others at the convention who eke out a living on $30,000-plus thought they were being promised something, not asked for a contribution.

A halimark of American society on its 200th birthday is that even the affluent feel powerless and discriminated egainst. Given this, a little ambiguity on tax reform may be politically prudent even on the part of one who prides himself on candor.

Mainly, Mr. Carter treats us all as ultimate consumers, who deserve better government services, just as we deserve better color television sets. All we need do is give him our vote and he will guarantea us those services. We can depend on it.

We Democrats urgently want a change in January and the harmony exhibited at the hig party in New York was a first step toward that goal. So perhaps it is carping to speculate on what the hill will be. But if we are truly interested in honest government, the cost may be not only participation and eternal vigilance, but the development of new codes of personal conduct.

And, if we are really a compassionate people determined to give everyone a fair chance, we will have to stop building walls around people simply because they are poor, darkskirmed, old or handicapped. The price to be paid for that mey be not only in our pocketbooks but in a willingness to disturb our comfortable lives and to take a few risks.

Then again, when we strip away the rhetorical wrappings perheps all we will find is the status quo—in which event the price will be a continuation of the social and psychic costs we say we find unacceptable now. Either way, however, there will be a bill for the people to pay. You can depend on that, too,

The Reluctant Party

By Tom Wicker

KANSAS CITY, Aug. 14—Despite the narrow lead everyone concedes him for the Presidential nomination, Gerald Ford has been placed in a three-way bind by the proposed rules change that would require him to name his running mate in advance.

Ronald Reagan's forces here are planning to stage a floor fight on the rules change, which would require a candidate to name his Vice-Presidential choice by the morning before tha Presidential balloting. Several elements of the situation suggest that the rules change conceivably could be approved.

For one thing, Mr. Reagao already has made his startling choice of tha liberal Senator Richard Schweiker of Pennsylvania. For another, people generally seem more concerned these days about vice presidents, since so many beve succeeded to the White House in recent years. Many conservatives, moreover, view Mr. Ford's choice with particular coocern; if elected this year, Mr. Ford would be constitutionally ineligible to run in 1980, and his Vice President might well have an advantage in trying to succeed him.

More immediately, some Ford backers are concerned that his running mate will be too liberal, and some others fear he or she will be too conservative. If all of these factors worked together, the rules change could be approved, which would make it clear that Mr. Ford cannot control the convention.

On the other hand, even if the Ford managers here can stave off this Reagan challenge, it could be by such a close vote as to emphasize the President's weakness, and further alienate bitter-end Reagan men.

If the President should lose on the rules change, he would be in the worst position of all. In the speculation about Mr. Ford's choice that ripples through this convention, no one yet has come up with "the perfect name" that would please all fections. That might not matter too much after Mr. Ford's own nomination; but before it, for example, either to name or not to name John Connally of Texas, might well sbake loose enough disappointed delegates to cost Mr. Ford his own nomination,

The effect of this three-way bind, like so many other factors in this strange convention—what other two-man race in either party was so lengthily and closely contested?—is to point up Mr. Ford's essential weakness within his own minority party. The platform is another example.

Whila both sides proclaim themselves hasically satisfied with a document that either candidate could run oo "without embarrassmaot" — although some akirmishing on the floor is possible—Mr. Ford did oot send here and impose on the convention, as most Presidents could and would have, a platform written in the White House and tailored for his own candidacy.

Losing on the Equal Rights Amendment in a subcommittee, his forces pushed it into the platform in the full committee by only four votes. When the Reagan members wanted to come out against Federal aid to education, the best the Ford team could do was to water this down to a promise to study whether or out education aid ought to be eliminated and some new revenue source provided to the states.

The delegate count issued Friday by Mr. Ford's chief heedhunter, James Baker, was another case in point. Mr. Beker claimed 1,135 committed delegates, enough to win the nomination on the first ballot—but by only five votes. Other tabulations by impartial oews organizations suggested that even this total was somewhat inflated. Both factors made Mr. Baker's announcement seem less a confident assertion of victory by an assured frontrunner than another tactical move in the continuing war of nerves between the Ford and Reagan forces.

Mr. Ford'a weakness among Republicans—even if they do nominate him Wednesday night—is due in part to right-wing dominance of the party since Barry Goldwater's conquest of it in 1964, and to the necessary departures from conservative dogma that Mr. Ford, as President, has had to make. In this respect, his choice of Nelson Rockefeller for Vice President may have been a real blunder.

The President is weak, too, because he was appointed Vice President, succeeded to the White House, and has never before run outside of a Michigan Congressional district; so he has less of an established national apparatus than an elected incumbent would have. In the long struggle against Mr. Reagan, finally, he has impressed few people as an exciting campaigner or a bold strategist.

Gerald Ford would clearly be the most reluctantly chosen major party Presidential candidate since Harry Trumen in 1948, which is why so few here are yet willing to say that the President of the United States has his own nomination locked up.

Shifting Aegean Winds

By C. L. Sulzberger

ATHENS—The external dangers of the persistently ugly Turkish-Greek quarrel are blatantly obvious: a threat to world peace and to NATO unity as well as to the complex of United States relationships with the volatile East Mediterranean. But there is also something inherently sad about the fact that this problem, which is in truth so needless and, stripped of emotional aspects, so capable of solution, should be hampering democracy's impressive properess here.

Just over two years ago Greece was still in the straitjacket of military dictatorship imposed by a conspiracy of colonels in 1967. In the wake of that inept regime's effort to seize Cyprus by an abortive coup, Turkey invaded the disputed island. The junta collapsed and Constantine Caramenlis, e previous Prime Minister, returned from his self-sought exile in Paris and restored democracy.

As he himself recounts the record, within 10 months free national and municipal elections had been held, a plebiscite whose results were unchallenged decided on a republican form of government to replace the refrigerated monarchy, a progressive constitution was approved and a president chosen—all without bloodshed. Greece suddenly possessed Free Europe's only strong government dominated by one majority party in Parliament and public opinion. Everywhere else coalition or minority cabinets ruled.

The army—pampered by the colonels it produced—had inadequate weapons and was deeply involved in politics; today it is properly equipped and boasts good discipline and high morale. Those of its leaders who had seized oational power have been purged and tha social structure was not upset thereby.

The economy was hanled out of a morass. In 1974 the growth in the GNP. was minus 2 percent. Last year it was 3 percent and this year it is expected to be 5 percent. The Government estimates 1976 inflation at between 10 and 12 percent.

The balance of payments crisis has vanished and, despita heavy defense expenditures (in hard currency installments), Greece no longer has to borrow. Unemployment during this year's first quarter is 37.4 percent less than for the same period of 1975.

Moreover, Mr. Caramanlis has crossed the threshold of Greece's great Euro-for the same period of 1975.

Moreover, Mr. Caramanlis bas crossed the threshold of Greece's great European dream by gaining acceptance as a member of the Common Market. He estimates it will take two to three years for completa edmission and that the initial period, while this little land's economy adjusts, will he difficult. Nevertheless, he says: "I have warned our industrialista and farmers: 'I am going to throw you into the sea and you will have to swim or sink.'"

This, then, is the picture as Greece teeters on the edge of fresh embroilment with Turkey in an argument that has persisted on and off for generations but was recently revived by the Cyprus and Aegean issues. The new political system is surprisingly stable, considering the volatile people it governs and its short duration.

The Republic's President has adequate executive powers—less than France's chief of state but more than West Germany's. He can exercise e veto, choose prime ministers, decide on plebiscites and influence long-range policy; he cannot intervene in day-to-day decisions.

The press, after seven years of dictatorial shackles, is free to the degree of licentiousness. Political opposition speaks out boldly, especially the talented parliamentary orator Andreas Papandreou. But the opposition is divided; its lack of unity and responsibility is if anything a special weakness of the existing system.

Just prior to the latest, ongoing, crisis with Turkey—this one over mineral exploration of the continental shelf beneath the Aegean Sea—Mr. Caramallis had earned considerable acclaim by offering the tarnished Olympic Games a permanent, nonpoliticized home—ancient Olympia itself, where the whole idea began. Greece was ready to finance a major share of the costs, probably through a long-term loan serviced by quadrennial profits from the competition.

Now, suddenly—tragic, but far from unusual in this passionate, changeable land—tha picture of happy, democratic bealth has altered. A few days ago Mr. Caramanlis was confident his national and parliamentary majority was greater than ever as the free-thinking, free-speaking Greeks savored the additional pleasures of prosperity spliced with

But if the current confrontation develops badly—and in this part of the world anything can happen with utmost abruptness—how will the nation react? Last week the Prime Minister would confidently have bet on greater support than at any time since his return. The Greeks seemed to show overwhelming confidence in his leadership. Next week—who knows? That is the danger of unpredictable Aegean political winds.

Friends, organizations, and just plain good citizens—lend.

Nicklaus, Coody Surge During Third Round

By JOHN S. RADOSTA BETHESDA, Md., Aug. 14

-All but two of the leaders fell back in varying degrees today in the third round of the Professional Golfers' Association championship over the tough par-70 course of the Congressional Country

The result was that the two challengers-Jack Nicklaus, the defending champion, and Charles Coody-were able to gain ground just by playing moderately well.

A heavy rain, accompanied by lightning and thunder, suspended play at 5:11 P.M. and after an hnur and seven minutes, P.G.A. officials decided the course was unplayable. The third round will be completed tomorrow morning beginning at 7:30.

Gil Morgan, the leader going into today's round at six under par, lost two strokes in the first four holes today, but he still maintained his position. At the end of nine holes today, 45 for the tournament, he stood at 171, four under par.

Tom Weiskopf, who had been tied for third, disappeared from the leader board after losing four strokes in the first eight boles. After 45 holes he stood at 178, three over par.

Nicklaus began at even par. He birdied the ninth hole for a 45-hole aggregate of 174. Coody held the same relative positioo, even par at the first tee aod one uoder after the ninth, Coody went on to a birdie at the 10th

Among the others who lost ground in the first half of today's round were Tom Kite three strokes; Gary Player, two shots; Don January, one; Ray Floyd, one: Ben Crenshaw, one.

Scores at 45 holes were Nicklaus and Coody, 174; January, 175; Crenshaw and Player, 176.

Arnold Palmer, who has never won the P.G.A. championsbip, was the pleasant surprise of the day, turning in a two-under-par 68. It was the best P.G.A. 18-hole score he had shot since the final round of the 1966 championship at Firestone.

Morgan, who has a degree in optometry but does not practice, carded his first bogey on the second hole, where he took three putts. He also took a bogey 5 on the fourth hole, where his approach was bunkered. .

For Weiskopf, it was not one of his better days. He three-putted the second for a bogey. On the third hole he shanked a shot across the fairway. On the fourth he pulled his drive under a tree, from which his only shot was a chip to the fair-Continued on Page 10, Column 5

Yanks Beat Twins, 5-4; Mets Win From Reds

By MURRAY CHASS

Special to The Hee York Times BLOOMINGTON, Minn. Aug. 14 - The Yankees overcame their most crucial injury of the season today and defeated the Minnesota Twins, 5-4, for their fifth straight vic-

For the most part, the Yankees have regained their health on this road trip, pulling out of their skid and ending talk of a collapse that might cost them their first title in a dozen years.

The pitchers in particular have blossomed again, with Ken Holtzman winning today and becoming the last of the five starters to atone for their pitching failures during the slump in which the Yankees lost 11-of 15 games. Dock Ellis started the winning streak last Tuesday and has been followed in victory by Doyle Alexander, Catfish Hunter, Ed Figueroa, and now, Holtzman. Martin Injored

But while ell the players were getting healthy-Roy White, for example, rapped four hits today, giving him and Sfor-11 streak after an 0-for-12 slump-their manager was getting himself hurt. "I didn't have an X-ray."

Billy Martin said, "but it's broke, I know it's broke." Martin's left thumb was encased in a splint because last night he injured it on e line drive hit by Oscar Gamble during batting prac-was more likely that he suffered the injury in a fight, considering Martin's reputation. But the manager said, "I hit with my right hand, not my left. A good street fighter will grab with his hls right,"

Fortunately for Martin, the Yankees made it easy for him to manage with his broren thumb. Holtzman, who had allowed 24 runs and 43 hits in his previous five starts, covering 23 2/3 innings, pitched well enough to win, scattering eight hits and holding off a belated Minnesota charge. Then Graig Netties and White connected for nome rluns. White's blow in the sixth turned out to be the decisive run.

With everything working well ecough, Martin's oranagerial maneuvers were reduced. He passed bis first test when he made out hia line-up card before the rame with his right hand (be is a

If Tennis Pros Could Only Understand the Hackers

By J. D. SANDERSON

Every year, when my game falls apart and I start yelling and hitting myself on the head with my racquet, I decide maybe I need a little help, and I go to some professional or other for a couple of lessons. Last summer I even opted for major surgery and signed up for my first tennis camo.

There I had eight professionals attacking my problems. They were saintly to their patience with me and 47 other hackers, and some of us actually began to return a third of our backhands and learned to toss the ball a little bigber than our heads at service.

But everything the professionals taught us about strategy was wrong. These guys are too smart to know bow dumb we play. Every pro who has ever given me a lessoo assumed that soooer or later I was going to be able to execute the strokes he was teaching me, and therefore his strategy for my game flowed from the belief that wa all eventually wake up from a night-

Unhappily, it has at last dawned on me that backers keep dreaming, but oo one of us is ever going to improva more than 10 percent. With the pro holding his arm a backer may actually hit a few strokes right for a few days, but then he goes back to his wrong-footed, the professicoals bave convinced him a deliberate backhand loh winner. He all the time he needs to wind up. matches with his hacker friends and begins to pina for the start of the bowling season.

The professionals just don't understand that there are two categories of people in the world—the tennis players and the hackars—and like Martians and ordinary earthlings we think and play

For example, Nate, our head pro at amp, was a young, curly-haired blood guy who had been a star at ooe of the Florida tennis colleges. I admired everything he taught us, even if I couldo't do it very well, but not until he let me play several games of singles with him did I realize that he, too, didn't band wheo you're coming up to the

Any backer could have told him. If I hit a shot to my opponent's foreband as I'm coming up, anything may happen. But if I hit it to a hacker's backhand, there is practically zero chance he can

"Why do you always hit to my backforehands are equal. Some of them, you "and even the professionals can't hit know, actually prefer to hit backhands kind of a return too well. and that's weird.

Many people don't want to admit they are hackers (a word first applied to lousy golfers). Maybe you like to think of yourself as an intermediate player. An intermediate is anybody who ever picked up a racquet, learned how the scoring weot and played one set. --

The hacker or intermediate category, in fact, ranges all the way up to those presumptive souls who tried out for the school or club tennls team and didn't make it. So there are a lot of us out there, maybe about 98.2 percent of all the people on a tennis court... So, lat me give you my theory about hacker strategy, and how it differs from what those Martians do on TV.

First of all, you have to notice whether your opponent is righthanded or left-handed. It's amazing how many hackers never do figure this out until the second set. But if you don't know where his backhand is, how can you have any.

Then there is the serve. The professionals assume that it is a matter of holy writ that we should strike the ball and immediately charge toward the oet breathing fire. But this is impossible. Eve oever yet known a hacker who oido't lose most of his service games if he tried to do it. Everyone tells us how important it is to seize the net,

The hacker needs all the concentration he can muster simply to get his serve in. If be spends any time thinking about doing something aggressive im-mediately afterward, he double-faults.

The average backer misses his first serve anyway and poops over the sec-ond. If he heads toward the oet he's off-the-wood game. And even worse, if pass me at net and no way he can hit at the mercy of the receiver, who

be volleyed using their own momen back so unevenly that it lands a To a professional, backhands and right at the feet of the incoming se

> ¶Most hacker-servers are too of foot and short of breath to repeat reach even the back of the service c On a hot day after a long rally whole idea is rather laughable.

Tennis players practice, but bac only warm up. No backer any time place ever practiced his serve and ley. We don't even practice volle at the net except when we have to in and pick up the balls and we're lezy to go back and hit baseline. Again. A backer is there for a general party more than the balls and we're all the property more than the property so let's not waste any more time.

The answer, of course, is that hit your serve and just stand ther the baseline waiting. If you get a v return you can manage, you com to the oet behind it. The profession insist that the serving side is doing attacking, but in backer tenns i usually just trying to survive.

The professionals do the best can for us. They are more patient all of us dumdums than we would in their place. They've just got to unstand that the game we play isn't restand that the game we play isn't remis. It's more like big Ping-Pong. 1 what the bell, we enjoy it, right?

J. D. Sonderson is a writer who just finished a book on raising chile called "Adult at Eighteen." He says parents are hackers, too.

Sports Editor's Mailbox: No Love, No Soul and No Graciousness From Nadia

To The Sports Editor:

As one who is glad that human beings are imperfect. I would like to speak about Nadia Comaneci.

'These guys are

know how dumb

too smart to

we play.'

You called her "fearless and tireless." Those aren't the ooly bumao qualities that she lacks. As a matter of fact, she seems to lack all of them.

Once we added the dramatic music, the ballet and modern dance and Olga to women's gymnastics, it became, more than any other sport, a performing art. It is Nadia's drawback as a performer that she is perfect as a gymnast.

There is no performance with Co-maneci. There is no love, no soul. The communication between spectator and performer is gone, and with it goes the beart of sports, particularly this one.

Sports are no place for perfection-Human beiogs sren't perfect. Neither should sports be. When I watch Comaneci I wooder what happened to the besuty, art and, moreover, the humanity that is usually so easily found in this sport. I realize that it is lost in perfec-

The Comaneci article had the words at the top, "The Measure of Greatness." A truly great gymnast is more than an athlete; sha is a performer. Nadia Comaneci is a perfect gymnast; she is not a truly great one.

Good Performances Sometimes Ignored

To the Sports Editor: Although I was enthralled by the grace of tha young Rumanian and Soviet women gymnasts at the Olympics, I was as much appalled by their lack of graciousoess to competitors other than those on their own teams. They appeared completely to ignore the beautiful performances of the others.

An example: When Nelli Kim of the Soviet Union needed, and performed well enough to get, a 10.00 score to win the gold medal to her event, a smile in her direction, or an appreciative handelsp by Nadia Comaneci of Rumania would have been an appropriate, nice gesture of sportsmanship. Comaneci was out of contention at that time, so the cost to her of recognition of a competitor's great performance would have been minimal.

I cao admire these young women ss athletes, but I don't believe I would like them very much as people, were I to meet them. Perhaps someone needs to tell them what the Olympics are sup-posed to mean (if, indeed, anyone knows).

Games Should Espouse Spirit of Competition

To the Sports Editor:

· The article by Neil Amdur, "East German Women's Success Stirs U.S. Anger" (Aug. I), does seem a clear case of "sour grapes" by United States women swim-

Americans sccuse the East Germans of using drugs to achieve their performance and also point out the masculioe appearance of these East German women. The first accusation seems to be a mud-slinging tactic of a loser; the second is a petty observation of a person not prepared to make the substantial sacrifices to attain that level of success. In fact, American women do make tremeodous sacrifices to compete, and these types of remarks will only detract from the credit they should receive. Similar comments could be directed at the success of our male swimmers or our boxers by their disconsolate opponents. We would only condemo those remarks as being the gripes of losers. Possibly, our women swimmers should look beyood the count of their medals to the ideal of the spirit of competition and friendship that these Games are to espouse. This ideal is tarnished by politicians end only a handful of egotistical athletes. The comments of nur swimmers unfortunately place them in this group of gripers.

Many young Americans proved that our amateurs are able to compete successfully with the so-called amateurs of other nations. Those athletes who feel that the advantage of their opponents is too great should stay home. There are others who would take their place and earn our admiration for their talent as well as our respect for their sportsmanlike qualities. Daniel J. Mocarski

Stamford, Conn. A Call for Creativity In Uniforms' Design

To the Sports Editor:

Void of any aod all imaginatioo, lacking style end any element of pride io design, the men's and women's uniforms worn by United States track athletes were a disgrace to the team and an affront to the nation. Wasn't it only four years ago that these same feelings were echoed by the athletes and American people alike? Wasn't it only four years ago that promises were made to correct this very siluation?

I should temper my remarks because the people responsible had only four years to design a proper logo for sweatsuits. I should remember that the same people who need more than four years to design a decent sweatsuit logo petition shirt at the same time. And the parade uniforms. They finally have perfected the 1952 image of what Americans were then and what Americans should still wear, so why change a bad thiog? Why? Because we looked like something out of a Life Magazine year-end pictorial, vintage 1952.

Nothing ever seemed to happeo in Philadelphia, good or bad. The Futile Phillies, as the writers liked to call them in the quaint sports-page jargon of the day, had been the caboose of the National League for years—undistinguished and unnoticed, but quite occessary to fill out the eight-team league.

Robinson had never had any trouble when he played there before thousands of Negroes as the shortstop of the Kansas City Monarchs.

Even the Benjamin Franklin Hotel, the house the Dodgers had used for years, didn't figure to be a problem. They'd had my rooming list, with the black man's name on it, for almost a month, and they hadn't called me to complain. It all seemed to add up to a pleasant

When we arrived in Philadelphia and took cabs to the Franklin, I was blundy told that there were no rooms for us.

"And don't bring your team back here." the manager snapped, "while you have any Nigras with you." While the bellboys stacked our luggage on the sidewalk, I tried to call carpenter and Pennock to sec if they had any pull at the other hotels in town. No answer on cither line, the Phillies' switchboard said. No. sorry, they couldn't be found anywhere.

I very nearly didn't try the second hotel my cabbie took me to, because the fashionable Warwick bloked too ntush: but I brazened it out and asked anyway, mentioning our problem. De-tn ask nic if I'd frund a hotel, I didn't tell him of nur good fortune, just to see if he'd come up with any helpful suggestions, but he remained silent. All the talking for the Phillies was done a few hours leter by their Southern born and bred manager. Ben Chapman, and at nn time in my life have I ever heard racial venom and dugout filth to match the abuse that Ben sprayed on Robinson that night.

Chapman mentioned everything from thick lips to the supposedly extra-thick Negro skull, which he said restricted brain growth to almost enimal level compared to white folk. He listed the repulsive sores and diseases he said Robbie's teammates would become in fected with if they touched the towels or the enmbs he used.

He charged Jackie outright with breaking up his own Brooklyn team. The Dodger players had told him privately, he said, that they wished the black man would go back into the South where he belonged, picking cottoo, swabbing out laurines or worse.

Chapman sang this hate song almost alme at first, but soon ha picked up an infantile chorus behind him on the bench. These were guys who had acquired some bravery after listening to their fearless leader clobber the de-fenseless hlack, and who now hoped to make a hit with the ooss man by parmting his lines. Years later, after I had written some of the details in The Sporting News. the paper sent a reporter to Chapman's home to check on the story. They couldn't believe it, I guess. Ben denied nathing, Rather lamely, he pointed out that Rubinson had been rookie when they worked him over. "We always gave rookies a haptism like that first time around the league, to see how they cruld take it. You wouldn't have wanted us to treat Pohinsnn any different from the white boys, would you?"

The United States Tennis Association made it clear vesterday that a crash course is sex-checking is in store for the peopla who run Forest

Dr. Richards, the U.S.T.A. decided, must prove that she is genetically a woman, or she will not be allowed to compete in the United States Open. That means a scraping must be taken from the in-side of her cheek to deter-mine whether she has male (XY) or female (XX) chromosomes. The test will be administered to all entrants seeking to compete as women

While the U.S.T.A. Is sensitiva to thee rights of in-dividuals to live as they may choose, it believes that the entry into women's events at the U.S. Open, the leading international tennis tournament, of persons not genetically female would introduce an element of inequality and unfairness into the champlonships," they association said.

"We've spent the last eight years trying to build women's tennis," Miss Brinkman said tha other day. "We don't need that kind of publicity." No sport has been more carefully nurtured and aggressively promoted than women's tennis. It has survived any stigma of identification with cigarettes, it has overcome criticism that the true lacks overcall depth and tour lacks over-all depth, and it has created the first aura the woman as superpro. While pro football has drawn several published reports of homosexual activity and the private side of its playars, almost no material has emerged to damage tha intimacy of the women's tenmis circuit.

Results Are Shown

The results speak for themselves: Attendance records were set on the tour last winter, the women outdrew the men on national television, corporations are pouring dollars into the sport faster than they can be absorbed, and more women than men are taking up racquets at the participant level.

Five years ago, when Billie Jean King was pleading with the world to recognize the talents of her peers, the women pros might have considered Renee Richards a publicrelations coup. Now, some woman players and their officials are saying that Dr. Richards's intentions represent a publicity ploy and not a gesture of sportsmanship.

The problem is that the women cannot afford to let as they nixed a proposal for one of their pros to play an exhibition against Frankie Parker on his 60th birthday in Chicago last January.

How would it look for a top 10 woman pro to be beaten by Dr. Richards, especially with corporate money trying to avoid controver-sies? The adverse effect on little girls taking up two-handed backhands is another position adopted by the wom-

Gene Scott, the tournament director of next week's Tennis Week Open at South Orange, N. J., offered this explanation of why he accepted the entry of Dr. Richards:

"The basic reason'I did it." said Scott, "is because from the research I've been able to obtain, the coin could flop either way on this. I knew him as Dick Raskind, he was a sensitive person. He may have a sex change, but that doesn't change the person. And legally, Renee Richards is a woman."

Scott has scheduled Dr. Richards's first match for next Saturday at the Orange Lawn Tennis Club. His list of top entries includes Terry Holloday, Cynthia Doerner, Wendy Overton and Val Ziegenfuss.

"If some of the girls withdraw, I have plenty of other good women in the East who want to play." Scott said. "As it is, I'm mud in the East because I didn't keep more spots open for local players. I did this as a favor to the Women's Tennis Association. They came to me and asked ma to expand the draw from 12 to 32."

The W.T.A. represents all of the top players and has been the most outspoken critic of Dr. Richards's status. The party line is that "it's" has devoted her thole life to tennis" to lose a spot in a draw to a man and to become involved in the "psychologi-cal effects" of losing to someone with a transsexual background.

In drawing up its policy, the W.T.A. seems determined to avoid a costly legal hassle over the question, a situation that could have occurred if the association barred its members or boycotted an event because of Dr. Ricbards's presence. Instead, the W.T.A. is hoping that a sex test can preserve the status quo.

Not everything remains serious in the dispute, however. Says Miss Brinkman: "From everything I've heard, Dr. Richards is a very nice person. I'd love to send her one of our T-shirts."

The T-shirt reads, "You'va

'Bush' Means Without Class

In the years the Yankees dominated baseball, many adjectives were applied. to them, not all complimentary. Depending on where the critic stood, they were mighty, arrogant, gifted, proud, magnificent, supercilious, splendid, smug, stately, pompous or grand. "How can you root for the Yankees?" an actor sked. "It's like rooting for United States Steel." But nobody ever called them bush.
Not then. Not until

now. In a game with the Orioles in Yankee Stadium, a decision at first base went against the home team and the home fans booed. They booed again watching instant replay on the peachy new scoreboard, and they booed a third time when the names of the umpires were flashing on the board-Bill Kunkel, Dave Phillips, Rich Garcia and Lou DiMuro.

It would be gratifying to report that the last boos were directed at the busher who was trying to put the umpires on the spot, but of course they weren't. The crowd was being purposely incited, and it responded as crowds do.

Lee MacPhail, president of the American League, also responded, as a league president should. He slapped a $1,000 fine on the Yankees for a bush performance and he rejected as unworthy of notice George Steinbrenner's telegram of complaint about the umpires. (The Yankees' chief owner, in his infinite wisdom, advised MacPhail not to assign DiMuro's team to "crucial" series such as the one in which Baltimore cut New York's lead to nine games.

A Team With Class

This country used to be populated by Yankee-haters simply because the Yankees won all the time. Their success aroused envy in other American Leagua cities and even in the National League, though they used to beat up on the Nationals only in October. They were pictured as a swaggering collection of robots assembled by a cold-blooded and efficient business office that was ac-cused—usually inaccurately—of buying pennants.

Yet nobody ever denied that they had class. They outclassed every other team in baseball, and they did not suffer bushers gladly. One day Willia Grieve called a cose one at the plate against them in a game with the Red Sox as New York and Boston battled for the pennant. The winning run scored on the decision, giving Boston a one-game lead with a week to go. Naturally, the Yankees disputed Grieve's call hotly and, naturally, they lost the argument.

When it was all over a spare out-fielder named Cliff Mapes, who hadn't even been in the game, put in his bit. 'How much did you have on the game, Willie?" he demanded of the umpire. Bush. Mapes hung around another season or so and then was shipped to the St. Louis Browns, where he belonged.

Times have changed and so have the Yankees. The other day when MacPhail imposed the fina for a deliberate act intended to "produce fan reaction against the umpires," the Yankees accused him of a "cover-up" policy. Bush.

The Great Compromise

Unhappily, the same adjective applies to the decision to foul up the World Series by using designated hitters in alternate years. This is a corruption of the essential nature of the game. It was introduced by the American Leagua as a gimmick to stimulate ticket sales. there is no evidence that it has had that effect and the National League was flatly opposed to it. Bowie Kuhn broke the deadlock by casting the commis-sioner's vote in favor.

The beauty of baseball is the exquisite balance of offense and defense achieved by the ruls in a century of evolution. One of the qualities that distinguish a good manager is tha ability, to decide when to take out the pitcher. Needing a run late in the game with the pitcher coming to bat, ba knows that if ba uses a pinch-hitter in the opa of getting a run, e must lose tha services of the pitcher. Situations like this are the very essence of the game. With the designated hitter, the manager pinch-bits for the pitcher every time around and never as to pay the price. It is hush.

In 1972 American Leagua attendance dipped to 11,438,538, which is still a record low for a 12-team league. On the basis of no evidence whatever, it was decided that more hitting would attract more customers and the way to get more hitting was to let somebody else bat for the pitcher. So tha dh rule was adopted for 1973, and in the next three seasons it so stimulated ticket sales that American League attendance ran 10,583,805 behind the National with its stodgy old nine-man teams.

Obviously, if attendance is the cri-terion, baseball fans still prefer haseball as a nine-man game, and up to now the National League has exercised its right to play it that way through the season, in the All-Star Game and in the World Series. Now Bowie, tha Great Compromiser, says let's play the World Series with nine-man teams one year and ten-man teams the pext and keep everybody happy. Yuk.

Real Thirst Quencher

ANN AREOR, Mich. (AP).—Thirsty University of Michlgan football players can thank Kirk Lewis for the drinks they get during practice this year.

Last season, the Wolverines coach, Bo Schembechler. like many other coaches—refused to let his players take water breaks during their two-hour practice sessions. So Lewis went home and wrote a 26-page medical research paper on the body's need for water. Bo was impresed, and the Wolverines got to drink, Lewis'a research came naturally. The offensive lineman is enrolled in Michigan's accelerated medical school program and plans to become an orthopedic surgeon or neurosurgeon.

But for the time being, he has his hands full as cocaptain of the 1976 Wolverine squad. Lewis is even taking a year off from his medical studies, and has signed up for classes in history, art, music, and religion

Under normal circumstances, he would be spending the fall as an intero in a hospital. But the week before Michigan opened it season last year, Lewis broke both bones in his right arm in the team's final scrimmage. He missed the whole season.

Last week, for example, Roger Staubach and Clint Longley had two fistfights at the Cowboys' camp in Thousand Oaks, Calif. A few harmone fields a purelly harmone fields a purelly harmone fields. harmless fights, usually between linemen, are common in camps. But these were quarterbacks. And they weren't harmless.

The first fight occurred after another of those seemingly endless passing drills, after Stanbach fumbled a center snap as Drew Pearson ran the receiving pattern and then pulled up. Longley, standing nearby, flipped a pass to Pearson, a severe breach of etiquette.

Words pessed, and when the drill was over the two quarterbacks edjourned to space behind a haseball dugout. Danny Reeves, an assistant coach, found them there with Staubach on top of Longley, who had thrown the first punch.

"It's a new form of condi-tioning," said Longley, whose sense of humor is larger than that of the somber Stanbach. "We do it after running sprints end before lifting weights."
Had it ended there, the Cowboys spokesmen who said it was a harmless incident might have been right. But on Thursday the two came to blows again. Long-ley, who later said that Stauley, who later said that Stau-bach had "been on my case since camp started," scored a one-punch decision over Staubach, Later, Staubach required seven to 10 stitches over his left eye. Staubach, who called the punch "gutless," said, "I guess that was his way of saving groudlyse."

MONTREAL — The Team USA players groaned in unl-son whan they bear, the news. "Bobby Hull, Gil Per-reault and Jean Pronovost?" said Curt Bennett. "Why, that's more than 150 goals a year right there."

A line combioing the Gold-en Jet, the French Conoection center and Pittsburgh's brilliant right wing was just one of the impressive experimental unions falling like golden eggs out of Team Canada's hockey training camp in Montreal this week. Every Canadiao skater working up a sweat in preparatioo for the Caoada Cup of hock-ey next month was carrying weighty reputation. Sportiog red maple leafs oo their jerseys were Phil Esposito and Bobby Clarke, survivors of the first Team Canada aeries with the Soviet Union in 1972. That series opened the way for professional-amateur international competition such as the upcoming six-natioo tournament. Next to them oo the bench was Hull, who had been barred from the 1972 tournament because of his defection to the World Hockey Associa-

Other players in the red and white uniforms included Deois Potvin, the 1976 Norris Trophy winoer as the N.H.L.'s outstanding defenseman: Guy Lafleur, the N.H.L.'s top scorer last season, and Reggie Leach, who eoded the 1975-76 season with 80 goals including 19 in the playoffs.

Quick Introductions

Meanwhile, at Team USA's training camp io Providence, R.I., Benoett and his new teammates were busy learning each other's names and quickly developed a team spirit under an umbrella ofgood humor.

'The trouble is we don't have any big goal scorers," said Bill MacFarland, presideot of Phoenix in the W.H.A. and co-maoager of Team USA. "But when the teams are cut down to 25 we can always trade for Reggie Leach if he doesn't make Team Canada."

But behind Team USA's jokes over Team Caoada's prowess and its own obscurity lurks a certain amount of resentment stemming from years of alleged discrimina-tion on the part of profes-sional teams against American collegiate players. The Americans will tell you that in 183 runs anyway.

"If my first three guys get on base six times," Anderson calculated, referring to Pete Rose, Ken Griffey and Joe Morgan, "we'll beat you every time I'll guarantee it."
Anderson"s "first three guys" had got on hase nearly 600 times this summer and, sure enough, they had scored close to 300 runs—primarily because his fourth guy was George Foster, who had betted io 106.

But at the start of yesterday's game, it was the Mets' first three guys who got on hase and who staked Nino Espinosa to a quick lead against Pat Zachry.

Zachry is a 25-year-old Texan who stepped up to the Reds this season from the high minor leagues. They thought he would replace Clay Carroll, who had been traded from their bullpen, bot they needed a starting pitcher and Zachry responded by winning 11 of his first 14

But the 6-foot-5-inch righthander started in the afternoon minus his control and walked the Mets' first three batters: Bruce Boisclair, Felix Millan and John Milner. Two of them eventually scored, on a sacrifice fly by Joe Torre and a single by Roy Staiger. But the Mets, who have scored 200 fewer runs than Cincinnati this season, wasted the chance for real mischief. They sent eight men to the plate, only two crossed it and three were still on base when Zachy pitched clear.

After that, the job of stopping Anderson's machine was left to Espinosa, a 22year-old Dominican who was pitching in only his ninth game in the big leagues. It was also the first time he had ever wrestled with the Reds, and he met the challenge without suffering any bruises until the seventh inning.

By then, the Reds had gotten one hit in five of the first eix inoings, but Espinosa survived by retiring the leadoff batter each time and then steering post the big guns. But in the seventh, the leadoff man was Cesar Geronimo and he broke the spell by looping a ball down the left-field line that eluded Miloer for a triple. Then

The other owners did not expect that Busch, who made his anti-Feeney speech at a supposedly private meeting from which the league president was excluded Wednesday night, would reissue it as a press release less than 48 hours after leaving what they had agreed would be a confidential conclave.

Busch accused Feeney of "incompetent leadership," of failing to call a league meeting to reconsider the labor agreement reached with the Players' Association, of "purposely and deliberately" deceiving the owners during the attempt to move the San Francisco Giants to Toronto, out-of Feeney's selfish desire to keep the league office in San Francisco. It is this writer's under-standing after talking with Survey officials that the maps will vary in size and scale in as much as they will attempt to embrace a certain geographic unit such as the Mount Ranier park, or, as another example, the Allagash Wilderness in Maine.
It will often be possible, therefore, to purchase a single topographic map of a ven area, whereas, under the old system, four or five maps might have been re-quired.

Copies of the Mount Ranier park map may be had for $2 each from the Branch of Distribution, United States Geological Survey, Box 25286, Federal Ceoter, Denver, Colo. 80225. The maps will also be sold through private dealers, but prices may vary from the widely used by the general public in Britain and Europe, but many Americans remain unaware of their value.

In addition to being essential tools for woodsmen, maps also provide many pleasant hours of armchair travel. By studying a topographic map of an area one plans to visit, one cao locate areas of interest-whether a remote pond, a marsh, a trout stream entering a river or an abandoned mine—that could be visited wheo the trip is underway.

Using maps in rainy weather poses a problem and one way to keep them from getting soggy is to water-proof them with a quick dryiog spray. I have used Krylon's crystal clear acrylic for this purpose.

There are a number of good texts oo wilderness travel and map reading, including Calvin Rustrum's "The Wilderness · Route Finder." which is published in paper-back by Collier Books.

Mitic's Scoring Sparks San Jose Soccer Team

SAN JOSE, Calif., Aug. 14 added his key to success (UPI) — For an offensive player who doesn't like to handle the ball a lot, Ilija Mitic of the San Jose Earthquakes has gained quite a reputation as a North American Soccer League point-producer. The secret in being able to score goals, according to Mitic, is to be able to play without the ball.

It sounds rather far-fetched, but Mitic, who teams with Paul Child to give the Earthquakes their devasting scoring punch, insists his soccer philosopy is correct.
There isn't much room for argument because the 35year-old midfielder has been one of the N.A.S.L.'s top score's for the last 10 seasons.

During a practice break, the Yugoslav veteran of tough European soccer leagues explained his reasoo-

"First of all, you can't score goals unless you know what to do when you don't bave the ball," he said. "If you're not in a good position to receive a pass in front of the goal, you can't score." Then, lowering bis voice

"The best way to get into position is to make sure e. defender doesn't pay attention to you."

Mitic has been one of the main reasons for the Quakes sudden success. Only a few weeks ago — and after a disastrous 1975 season—they were under .500 and 31 points behind Dallas. Going into the floal week of the season, the Quakes found themselves playoff-bound in first place with more than enough breathing room.

Since the midway mark of the 24-game schedole, San Jose bas woo seven of eight with Mitic scoring seven goals and Child nine. The goalie, Mike Hewitt, had three consecutive shutouts during one span.

"I never try to hold on to the ball if possible," Mitic continued. I'll pass it, then run away from it to the oppo-site side of the field. If I give the impression I'm out of the play, I can sneak behind the man guarding me and get open in front of the goal. Once I'm there and receive a pass, I can kick with either foot from just about any fact, Volvo had many safety features as standard equipment years before government regulations required them on cars. Things like seat belts. Padded dashboards. And a safety steering column.

To this day, Volvo still has safety features many cars lack. Child-proof rear door locks. 3-point inertia reel seat belts in the rear as well as front. 4-wheel power disc brakes with dual triangular circuits that give you about 80% of your stopping power even if one circuit fails.

Volvo doesn't build cars with decorative roof panels and tiny opera windows. Because those things restrict visibility.

Instead, Volvo gives you 3,830 square inches of tinted glass. And roof pillars strong enough to support seven tons, yet narrow enough to allow you over 90% of your total horizontal field of view. Volvo also feels the better a car handles and performs, that was the end of the ball game for the guys in Chica-go," said Peter Margo, who owns a billiard room in Staten Island and was the leading tournament money-winner last year with $13,500.

The original dispute with the Billiard Congress was over prize money at the open; first prize was reduced from $10,000 last year to $4,500 for the current tournament, and the total fund dropped from $43,000 to $23,000.
"It's a sin, what they offered us," Margo said.
The dissidents, dominated by players from the East, decided to form a new organization and run their townament, with a prize fund estimated at $50,000. Five players—Margo, Mizerak, Martin, Allen Hopkins and Cost up $2,100 apiece, and each of the other entrants contributed $300. The rest is to come from program advertising commercial booths oatside the playing hall, and the gate. Attendance has been averaging 300 or so during the week at $5 a bead. For the final counds tomorrow might, the price goes up to $8.

The players hope to get together a $100,000 tournament for next spring, possibly in New York City. "I think we could get on TV if we get a big prize fund," Margo said. "The fans doo't care what the a game is, the want to see guys struggling for big bucks."

Beyond the prize fund, the players hope to involve manufacturers of billiards equipment in promotions that would provide a boom to their profession similar to the one happening in tennis. The ideal is a return to the billiards atmosphere of the 1920's, when there were billiards atmosphere of the 1920's, when there were 29,000 rooms in the country and players such as Ralph Greenleaf and Andrew Ponzi were as well known as Jack Dempsey and Babe Ruth.

Still Have to Sink the Ball

There are perhaps 9,000 rooms now, and most of the new ones are in the suburbs. The predicted expansion of pool in the big cities 15 years ago, prompted by the success of the 1961 movie "The Hustler," did not materialize. In Manhattan, many of the places that opened with apricot-colored tables and names like "Guys and Dolls" are closed now, done in by population shifts and in some cases—problems with narcotics and prostitution.

The current trend is toward coin-operated tables in bars and tables in the home, According to one industry estimate, 500,000 tables of all kinds—including the toy models for children-were sold last year. A survey of participant sports in America found that 32,000,000 people play pool at one time or another, putting the sport third behind fishing and swimming.

On the tournament level, however, the popularity has not been translated into bigger purses or important matches. "One year, I played in the five big tournaments and won four of 'em and came in second in the other," said Luther Lassiter. "I made $15,000 that year. That's

Lassiter, a slow-talking Southerner of 57, says he hasn't seen much change in the basic game. "you might see different colored cloth on the table,or piped-in music, and maybe a girl playing now and then," he said. "They've been dolling it up, but you'vetill got to put the ball in the pocket to win."

The double-elimination tournament here (two losses eliminate a player) is dangerous for the established stars, he took three putts. Palmer stood at 215 after 54 holes, five over par. Bruce Lietzke, who also had a 68, Was at 216.

Among the other early finishers were Joe Porter, 70— 213; Tom Watson and David Graham, 70—214; Jerry Heard, 69—215; J.C. Snead, 70—215, and Wally Armstrong, 69-218.

Morgan is primarily a self-taught player, though ha has received some instruction from his father and from Bob Toski, the former tour champion whose pupils now in-clude many professionals. Gary Player says Morgan has a fine swing, and Morgan hits his tee shots a bit farther than the average pro.

Morgan is not exactly a household name on the pro tour, but he is definitely an exempt player, one who can enter a tour event without having to qualify with the "Monday rabbits." At the end of last season Morgan just made 60th place, the lowest position on the list of ex-empt players, by finishing third in San Antonio. Last year he won $42,772. The excitement of an unknown leading the P.G.A. has eclipsed the elimination of former champions in last night's out, which was set at 149. They were Doug Ford, Sam Snead, Lionel and Jay Hebert, Bobby Nichols, Julius Boros. Al Gerberger, Jerry Barber, Paul Runyan and Lee Trevino, the 1974 winner who has returned to competition after a two-month lay-off forced by a back injury. Trevino's exit was gallant and characteristic. As he trudged along the 18th fair-way yesterday afternoon, be called out his faithful gal-lery: "Take a good look, folks, this is my last hole."

No Pressure

Morgan, who is 29 years old, professes to be immune to pressure from his lead and from the rest of the field. One reason, possibly, is that he has so little experience in in this position. Only once before has he held the lead alone in an event on the pro tour-after the second round of last year's San An-

"I'm not a high-struing in-dividual," Morgan says in that equable, cheerful man-

He disagrees with the ob-servation of Jerry Pate, the 22-year-old rookie who won the United States Open in June, that younger players are vulnerable to pressure when they lead.

"Jerry withstood it in the Open," Morgao says in re-buttal, "so I can't see what he's talking about."

He says he has complete control of his emotions, mostly through maintaining his concentration. 'I'm concentrating better than I have in a long time," he notes. The only kind of pressure he recognizes at the moment would be self-induced. Asked if he has allowed himself to imagine winning the P.G.A. championship, Morgan answered, "If you do that, you only put more pressure on yourself."

Morgan wears his hair long, down close to his eyes, and he has big front teeth that are highly visible because he smiles so readily. He likes to chat with spectators in the gallery.

He considers himself a steady player, and he believes he does well on "the hard tracks, where you have to be specific with your shots."

Miss Daniel To Defend Golf Title

SACRAMENTO, Calif., Aug. 14 (AP)—Six former winners, including Beth Daniel of Charleston, S.C., the 1975 champion, will compete next week in the United States: Womeo's Amateur golf championship.

Qualifying play is sched-uled for Monday, to be fol-lowed by match play Tuesday through Saturday at the Del Paso Country Club. Miss Daniel defends ber title in the 76th annual event, a championship she captured by defeating Donna Horton of Jacksonville, Fia., in the final round at Brae Burn Country Club, West Newton,

Other former champions in the tournament are 1956 Marlene Stewart Streit, of Stouffville, Ootario, Canada 1956; Barbara McIntire of Colorado Springs, 1959 and 1964; Mary Budke of Dayton. Ore., 1972; Carol Semple of Atlanta. 1973, and Cynthia Hill, of Colorado Springs,

The competition also iocludes four members of the Curtis Cup team—Barbara Barrow of Chula Vista, Calif.; Nancy Lopez of Roswell, N.M.; Debbie Massey of Bethlehem, Pa., and Nancy Roth Syms of Colorado Springs. Misses Daoiel, Horton, Sem-ple and Hill are also Curtis Cup players.

splte a fever of 102 degrees. 41-year-old A. J. Foyt of Houston won the pole position today for tomorrow'a 200-mile Trenton Times Auto The veteran driver, as reti-cent off the track as he is fast on it, led the Indy-type racing-car field of 32 with an average speed of 165.797 miles per hour on the onemile track of Trenton Inter-

Foyt, who has won the Indy 500 three times (1961, '64 and '67), was too sick to make a news-conference appenrance. But Gordon Johncock, who won the other front-row position, showed up. Johncock, of Phoenix, earned his spot with a speed of 165.138. Al Unser, another former Indy victor, followed with 164.835, and Tom Eneva of Spokane, Wash., was next with 163.984.

Foyt, a 12-time winner at this track who drives for the Glimore Racing Team, won his position in a Coyote-Foyt. Johncock, a fight fan as well as a comparative newcomer to racing, was in a hurry to leave the presa box. wanted to watch the George Forman-Scott LeRoux bout on television. Johncock is another Indy victor in the

the prestigious 500 in 1973.

Here last May, Johncock team in two Vollste, battled the eventual winner, cars. Johnny Rutherford, then lost by about nine seconds. He had made a pit stop, but his crew failed to fill his gas tank with einough fuel. Johncock did finish second.

As far as this track in concerned, Johncock said: "I won't run flat out with Al [Unser] and A.J. Al's the sort of competitor A.J. likes.

They can go out and run at "The dogleg fa right just before the turn on the backstretch] and the high banks make this a tough track to drive. You've got to hold it Rutherford, the opposite of Foyt in that he is a ready spokesman for his sport, said before his qualifying run: "I hope we do well. I think we will as long as we get a good ride." "Getting a good ride" means getting a car that functions wel throughout the Rutherford, who won this year's indy as well as the Trenton event last May, qualifled with a speed of 163.934. That puts him in the inside of the third row. The 22 starters will be in 11 rows of two.

Boating Insurance Coverage Should Be Evaluated

By JOANNE A. FISHMAN Marina insurance special-ists were deluged with calls last week from boatmen requesting new or increased coverage. But once Hurricane Belle's path was forecast, the prudent insurance persons stopped issuing binders and battened Beating down the hatches, too. Now is the time to evaluate your boat's insurance coverage, keeping in mind that, despite Belle. September is the traditional month for hurricanes.

Most policies for recreational boating provide all-risk coverage, explains David Van Iderstine, president of Marine Underwriters Agency, Inc., in Red Bank, N. J. Smaller boats, such as outboards under 16 feet, are generally covered under a "floater policy" that is added to your homeowner's or tenant's policy.

Larger boats are covered under an "agreed value" policy. At the time the policy is taken out, the owner and the company decide on the boat's value and if the boat later is a total loss, the company must pay the full, agreed in the agreed value por-icy, there are two key claus-es, says Van Iderstine. The first is colloquially re-ferred to as "new for old." It means repairs will be made without deductions for depreciation. For example, if one plank in your 50-year-old boat is stove in, it will be repaired at the going rate charged by yards. The only exception is sails, or any other canvas-like material.

In the "agreed value" pol-

The "patch clause" stipu-lates that if the hull is made of plywood or fiber glass, the insurance company is responsible for repairs made in a "profes-sional manner." This means the company is not obliged to repair the entire side of boat to fix a hole, nor is it required to paint the en-tire boat to cover a patch. While the premiums for hull insurance are related to a boat's value, the liability premiums increase in proportion to a boat's length. Unlike antomobile insurance, where a minimal liability insurance is mandatory, no insurance coverage is required for yachts.

"Eight out of 10 people make a mistake in thinking that they're not apt to have an accident with their boat; therefore they need little liability coverage . . . but if you are run over by a boat, you're not going to sue for any less than if you are for any less than if you were run over by a car," says Van Iderstine, who recommends the same lia-bility limit for both your of Inter Maritime Agency, Agency, Inc., in Port Washington, L. I., advises reviewing yacht coverage an-nually, Keep in mind such factors as the rising values of used boats, adding new equipment, or changing navigational limits.

To determine your boat's value, check with marine insurance specialists or a broker. Ask to see a current copy of the BUC Book, a listing of used boat prices similar to the Blue Book for cars.

offices from midtown Manhattan to Newport, R. I., according to the executive director, Harry Anderson. The United States International

Marine Engines

Sailing Association will ac-company the Union in the move, expected to be completed by the end of September. Then the Union's new address will be P. O. Box 209-Goat Island, Newport, R. I. The Yacht Racing As-sociation of Long Island Sound, which has shared office space with the Union, will remain in the area.

More than 100 boats are expected to compete in the National Sweepstakes Regat-ta on the Navesink River at Red Bank, N. J. next week-end. The Sweepstakes, the oldest and largest powerboat race in the East, also will inciude the Jersey Speed Skiff world championship.

hallenge Avis. See if the lease we'll write is more right for you.

Before you sign anybody else's car lease, challenge Avis to do better.

There's a good chance we can, Because Avis writes many different kinds of leases, not just a few. So we can write one that's just right

We've got a reputation for trying harder. Make us live up to R.

End of Model Year Savings! Prices Sharply Reduced for Limited Time,*

Now you can get a '76 Audi with comforts and appointments that you might expect to pay extra for, at no extra cost and with special savings too: things like radial tires, front-wheel drive, fuel injection, rack-and-pinion steering, power-assisted front disc brakes, flo-thru ventilation, negative steering roll radius, rear window defogger, plus fully reclining front seats and a quartz electric clock. And on top of all this-great gas mileage: 30 mpg on the highway and 20 in the city based on latest EPA estimates for our standard shift. (Your mileage may vary, of course, depending on the car's condition, optional equipment, as well as the way you drive.)

Get a '76 Audi and get these luxurious features your friends won't believe you didn't have to pay extra for.

*On All New 1976 Audi 100LS Models Purchased Now Through August 20.

See your participating dealer for Pocono Raceway discount tickets for races of August 15 and August 29.

Summer Automobile Sales

There isn't much you have to add to the car. So there isn't much you have to add to the price.

Standard power-assisted front-wheel disc brakes.

Today, most people simply expect to have to add hundreds of dollars in options to the car they buy. Unless the car happens to be rack-and-pinion steering.

something like a Fiat 128 Custom. The Custom comes standard with a lot of things that many cars only offer as extras. Like tinted glass. and radial tires. And it comes standand with other things that many cars don't offer at all. Like an overhead cam engine. And front-wheel disc brakes. In short, for about $3,222 we've tried to include everything on the 128 Custom but the usual taxes, delivery charge and dealer preparation.

Which means that the low sticker price that brings you in to look at a Fiat can actually be the low price that you drive one out for

Carrental, leasing, and overseas delivery arranged through your participating dealer.

*1976 Manufacturer's suggested retail price POE. Inland transportation, dealer preparation and local taxes additional.

'Something for Nothing'

The lure of "something for nothing" has often led consumers of all varieties into adventures of every description. But in no field have the offers been more frequent—or more tempting-than in travel. Two writers who recently took the lure report here on their very different experiences—one good, one bad.

Before the traveler tries his luck, he would be well advised to heed the following suggestions from the New York City

Department of Consumer Affairs:

- · Read the small print in ads, letters and brochures. It may modify or negate claims made in the headlines.
- · Verify prices and other pertinent data with the company involved. See if the company will provide the names of customers with whom you can speak.
- Check the reputation of the company with the local Department of Consumer Affairs or Better Business Bureau.

My frieod Debbie and I chose a Sunday-Mooday combination. The woman oo the phooa said we could arrive anytime after 9 A.M. Sunday and get right out oo the golf course, or, in the case of this nongolfer, the tennis courts.

Unfortunately, said the woman, there was no room left at Shawnee Inn. Instead, we would be put up at the Howard Johnson's motor lodge "adjacent" to the resort. Howard Johnsoo's! She assured me that was only for sleeping. that we would still have the full run of the resort during the day and evening. Still, we felt let down.

I seot in my check for $14.95, and the . Friday before the expedition a Shawnee representative called to confirm the reservation. Everything was

After a two-hour drive from midtown Manhattan that involved one mexplicable wrong turn-inexplicable, considering it's an arrow-straight ride about 90 miles west oo Interstate 80 across New Jersey-Dehbie and I pulled into the Howard Johnson's at Delaware Water Gap, Pa., at 11:15

Waiting for us was some good news and some had news.

The good news: There was room at the inn after all. Sunday had proved a slower night than expected so we could drive right on to Shawnee. The bad news: "You might have to wait before you can get into your room; the girls are cleaning it up." We piled back into the car and from the "adjaceot". Howard Johnsoo's drove about three miles along a thickly wooded country road to a stone gate marked "Fred Wariog's Shawnee Inn" —a carryover from the days wheo the resort was owned by the celebrated nians' chorus. We parked in a lot crowded with the cars of golfers, some of whom were to be seen on the driving range to our left, smacking balls dowo a

chartreuse expaose of meadow. Ahead loomed the inn, a four-story elongated white building with a red pitched roof in a style evocative of both American Colonial and French-bly mod. The floor was covered with a white carpet splotched with giant purple, green and turquoise polka dots. From the ceiling hung a chandelier in matching colors.

In froot of me at the reception desk were two grim-faced couples, arguing with a young woman clerk.

"But they promised three meals." said ooe of the men, who apparently hadn't read the promotional ad carefully enough.

The clerk insisted that only dinner and breakfast were offered with the mini-vacations. In fact, that'a what the ad had promised. But the couples, uncoovinced, stalked off.

The young woman behind the desk sighed with exasperation.

"$14.95 and they want the world," sbe said. I was subdued, as one always is on the beels of someone else's argument, so I didn't object when the prophesy about our room came true: It wasn't ready, wouldn't be until hetween 2 This, we later learned, was standard operating procedure. Mini-vacationers are encouraged to come aarly to enjoy the sports facilities but the rooms are usually not available until mid- or late afternoon. We were allowed to check in and were assigned a room oumber, handed dinner and breakfast vouchers and informed we would be awakened by a call at 8:30 the next morning for our tour of Shawoee Village. What it was or what they wanted us to subscribe to, we still hadn't the Meanwhile, the desk clerk said, until our, room was ready we could change for tennis in the downstairs lockers.

Notes: Call to Congress

By Stanley Carr

By Roy Bongartz.

Inside

The letter arrived late on the afternoon of Dec. 13, 1975, along with a handsomely designed, colorful packet of materials from the Columbia Research Corp. of suburban Chicago. .

The proposition was simplicity itself. All I'd have to do was send in a $15 ooe-time participation fee and pay for transportation and meals. Reservations, the invitation noted, were based on room availability, but since I was flexible as to timing, that seemed to be no problem. The pot was sweetened by the promise that, if I went along, the postman would soon deliver "a $40 Gift Cartoo of brand name household and cosmetic prodocts from hig name companies. . . ."

All this, Columbia emphasized, because the "hotels, motels and business people from the resort areas that make these vacations possible" wanted to acquaint folks like my wife, Doona, and me with their goods and services. The implication, of course, was that we would enjoy ourselves, then return to the vacation spot in later years (on a paying basis) and eocourage our frieods to go and do likewise. The resort areas represented included Orlando (with Walt Disney World), Miami Beach, St. Petersburg, Tampa, Puerto Rico and Las Vegas, and the offer was good for four days/three nights, or three days/two nights, depending on the locality.

Guggenheimer cautioned in the release, "and, in fact, turns out not to be true." In short, as I discovered io checking with the Better Business Bureau of Metropolitan New York and other sources around the nation, the Columbia Research Corp. had what only charity could term a questionable news release was about to be issued reputation. (See box, Page I4.) The reasonable reaction to the Columbia invitation, then, was to toss it in the nearest wastehasket. But it occurred to me that I might pursue the project, for personal and professional reasons. The personal: If things worked out as we hoped. Donna would become pregnant soon and our opportunities to do any traveling would be sharply curtailed—and if the Columbia deal actually cama off, it would give us a holiday we wouldn't take otherwise. The professional: Whether the junket worked or not, there might be an article in it for me.

So I decided to take the plunge. Herewith, some key excerpts from my diary of the oext several months:

Dec. 23, 1975: I write out a $15 check to Columbia Research Corp. and seod it off to Illioois. Maybe I'm wroog. Maybe this will work out just fice. , Jan. 13, 1976: No word, so I telephone C.R.C. long-distance. 1 want to ask aome questioos, but all I hear on the other end of the line is the clear, sweet, tape-recorded voice of "Judy Wilson." Without missing the chance to hand me a further sales pitch, she notes that "if only a fraction [of the thousands of selected recipients] phoned us with questioos or problems, our phone lines would be hopelessly iammed." Please write, she suggests, ending with, "'Bye for now." Later in the day I receive a postcard from the Columbia Research Corp. It seems I forgot to specify a resort in my origioal application.

Jan. 2I: Donoa takes a pregnancy test. We're going to he pareots In September. There's pleoty of time for us to make the trip.

Feb. 7: A letter from C.R.C. in pure computereze: 'Dear D. Berliner. Miami . Florida awaits you . . ." I must fill out an enclosed reservations request and mail it "no later than 20 days prior" to our anticipated arrival date. The request is to be sent-aloog with a $20 deposit to be returned at check-out-directly to Resort-A-Rama in St. Petersburg. (In later exchanges, this company ideotifies itself as Reserv vatioo Services, Inc. and Resort Hosts Internationale, Inc. As far as I could determine, it has no legal connection to C.R.C.) "Happy vscationing to D. Berliner," the letter ends. "P.S. Please allow 4 to 6 weeks for delivery of your extra bonus." The reference is to the $40 gift carton of bousehold and cosmetic products.

Also iocluded with the letter is a form allowing me to invite relatives or friends to take advantage of this once-exclusive vacatioo bonanza. "The more the merrier," the form says.

Fab. 18: I mail my $20 deposit; asking for a room April 24 through 27. Those dates avoid a "seasonal aery? ice charge" in effect Dec. 20 through

March 3: The mail brings a prepaid confirmation for our room for the nights we chose. There are only two things askew. The room is in a hotel in Hollywood-by-the-Sea, oot Miami Beach, which I had circled on the selection form. And, there it is-a "$9. per-person-per-night seasonal charge."

I write hack the same day, thanking them for the reservation but noting that our dates lie outside of the pre-

Letters: Calling Home From Hotels

Having recently returned from 45 days of travel in Western Europe, I would like to bring to the attention of your readers a ripoff which appears to be frequeot among hotel managements over there.

If you can help it, con't place trans-Atlantic telephone calls through your hotel switchboards; the hotels are likely to double or even triple the official loog-distance rates on your bill. As a typical example: for a ninemioute call from Berlin to New York, which would have cost $27 in New York, I was charged $70 on my bill, and my protestations were of oo avail.

It is possible to save oneself this wild overcharge by placing overseas calls at the post office; hut unfortunately, most post offices are closed at the time of the night when trans-Atlantic calls are best placed to reach one's party in the United States during daylight hours.

Since one reaches the United States now in less than 30 seconds by direct dialing io one's botel room, the expense to the hotel of handling such calls is negligible, which makes such surcharges outrageous and indefen-

FRITZ A. KUTTNER New York

[Ed Carr, of the Long Lines Department of the American Telephone & Telegraph Company, replies: A. T. & T. is well aware of the problem, which has long been annoying Americans traveling abroad, and it has been working on this with foreign hotel associations and travel boards. Customers in some European countries have found hotel surcharges on telephone calls ranging up to 300 percent. In April, A.T.&T. reached an agreement, called Teleplan, which substantially reduced and set limits on hotel surcharges for calls from Ireland and Israel to the United States, and it hopes to conclude similar agreements this summer with the Netherlands, the Scandinavian countries and Por-

IT'S JUST

We happened to be oo an airplane heading west on our first trip to Durango, Colo., when we read Grace Lichtenstein's article, "The West Without Crowds" (Travel Section, July 25) and the next day we took ooe of the auto trips she suggested. We left Durango at about 10 in the morning, heading north through Silverton and Ouray. Wa stopped in Cortez, then headed east, back to Durango—a perfect trip and a perfect iotroduction to Colorado's magnificent mountain scenery.

Even though we circulated the "dogeared" clipping of that article all week among our trien is at the conference we were attending-and even though they too headed north for Telluridethose Colorado roads remained uncrowded. We can't wait to go west again and try those other itineraries suggested in the article.

MRS. WALTER M. KARDY Kensington, Md.

To the Editor:

Grace Lichtenstein's article is at affront to anyone who can tell the difference between the Rockies and Coney Island. Picking a bouquet of wildflowers is misguided at best. First, wildrlowers frequently will not grow the following season once picked. Second, many wildflowers are protected by law-picking them is illegal and subject to fines. Third, wildflowers are beautiful where they grow, bot they make awful bouquets-they wilt.

Visit our mountains, eojoy the flowers and leave them for others to

EXERCISES ALOFT

To the Editor:

The ootes item (Travel Section, Aug. 1) describing Lufthansa's plans for exercises while traveling in an airpiane for loog periods of time brings to mind the fact that the late Dr. Paul Dudlèy White, the ooted beart specialist, tried unsuccessfully to get the transcontinental and transoceanic airlines to install leg-exercising devices at each passenger seat on their planes. It was Dr. White'e writings that introduced me to the idea of doing leg exercises aloft, and I can attest to the fact that on an eight-hour flight, the bending of the knees is a fairly good substitute for walking and helps overcome travel fatigue.

The best that such divided famielacking teeth and spitting out lies can hope for is an occasional enreds of thousands of watermelon couraging wave across the hall, for all the shore dinner people are seated alongside the windows that look out on the bay, while the chowder and clamcake people are placed a bit farther inland. Another sign reassures shore dinner customers, however: "People having lobster dinners aod regular shore dinners can be seated

There is a good deal to do at Rocky Point Park to help gourmands build up an appetite, including 31 attractions on the midway, a buge salt water swimming pool, miniature golf course, petting zoo, cocktail lounge and the Palladium ballroom, which frequently has evening dancing. The newest of the amusement rides is the Germanbuilt Musik-Express, in which cars whirl at 70 miles an hour in a sweeping, bouncing circle through a maelstrom of psychedelic lighting and rock music. As the passengers respond to all these kinetics, usually with shouts and screams, the operator adds a little more speed.

The 1898 carousel, the oldest ride, with its wooden borses and fancy carriages, is a favorite and there's an express train and bumper-cars. But the Sansei Flume is the biggest feature at Rocky Point, providing great hollow logs for intrepid passengers to float along a sluiceway at a splashy clip. Do not wear clothing with colors that will run, and leave your camera with somebody safe on the ground, because everybody-especially the lead passenger-gets a soaking when the log, hauled up an incline to a height of 60 feet, is let loose to shoot down the water chute to a stretch of flat water way below. A brisk wind dried out my upper clothing within a few minutes after my first ride last year, and I was soon quite presentable-and ready-for the famous shore dinner.

The question of what officially constitutes a Rhode Island shore dinner is not taken bightly around Narragansett Bay whose shores in the 1850's were lined with dozens of these convivial clam, fish and lobster halls. Conrad Ferla, the president of Rocky Point, has kept the hall's original menu which dates from 1847, when Capt. William Winslow built the bay's first eating emporium:

Tons of clamcakes, hundreds of gallons of chowder are consumed in the world's largest seafood hall. Midway rides whet appetites.

In 1949, however, there was a lapse from the traditional ingredients. The hall advertised a repast of chowder and clamcakes as a "shore dinner," This breach of proper gorging standards was serious enough to get the management haled into Rhode Island Superior Court by a clamcake concessionnaire named Estelle Selwyn who claimed her exclusive clamcake rights were infringed on by the phony shore dinner. Judge Louis Cappelli ruled that the lineup of the sporting event known as the Rhode Island shore diooer must do so privately-preferably at nightin Massachusetts if possible." The judge opined that such a transgressor "must not attempt to fool those from without the state and abuse those from within the state by offering such a second-string, injury-ridden team as clamcakes and chowder as a Rhode Island 'shore dinner.' The proper interpretation of shore dinner here in Rhode Island is tha sum total of the various foods that comprise the dinner. It might be permissible to send chicken in to substitute for lobster, but beyond that simple act, man is creeping toward the outer edges of society." The Rocky Point management manfully faced the roling in an ad two days later that quoted the clamcake-and-chowder decree, but tried to make up for it by offering "a miniature shore dinner" for 85 cents that added fish and french fries to the clamcakes and chowder. Mrs. Selwyn complained that this was in contempt - "both of Judge Cappelli's roling and of Rhode Island shore dinners." Since then the menu bas returned to the spirit of the 1847 "any heretic choosing to tamper with original.

At the height of the resort era a century ago, a fleet of steamboats crisscrossed the 30-mile-long bay, between Providence and the dinner halls, amusement parks and hotels up and down the shores on both sides. The hot competition between boat owners brought on a six-year war over landing rights at various resort piers. A historian relates that "the steamboat owners of Rocky Point fitted its wharf with beavy timbers, tipped with iron spikes and ran these timbers out when any opposition boat tried to land. The thinbers were run out one day when an opposition boat was seen approaching. But instead of stopping or veering off, tha boat passed the wharf at full speed and so closely that it struck the beams, shearing there off short. The owners then built a high fence of wooden pickets at the end of the wharf. But an opposition boat rammed the wharf and demolished the fence."

Later, railroad and trolley lines brought weekenders out to these seafood celebrations, but their number began declining with the advent of the antomobile and now only Rocky Point and a competitor across the water, Crescent Park, operate on the bay.

In spite of the demise of the trolley car and bay steamer, Rocky Point's dinner hall still flourishes and serves around belf a million people during the summer. (One bot day a total of 37,075 chowderhounds filed into the hall and ate all they could.) The clatter of crockery and babble of eaters is deafening, but your ears will already bave been numbed by the assaults from the scores of tinny loudspeakers on the midway rides outside.

But it is burricanes rather than noise that bave dealt roughly with Rocky Point. One blew down tha hall in 1938, and when it was rebuilt, it was destroyed by another storm in 1954-Conrad Feria was on hand to watch the whole roof sail off and land in the parking lot. The present building is constructed so that in burricane winds the windows will blow out first aod leave the roof intact. Ferla, who has been at Rocky Point for 28 years, oversees a staff of some 300, including up to 150 waiters and scores of cooks in immaculate kitchens equipped for corn shucking, lobster steaming, melon chopping, sauce stirring, bread baking, fish broiling, clam steaming, clamcake cannoning and chowdermaking. (Rhode Island chowder, according to Rocky Point tradition, is made with tomato puree.) When Ferla, a quietspoken, round-faced native of Sicily, goes out to dinner with his wife, he prefers a small restaurant with a capacity of, say, 24 instead of 3,000, and if it bappens to specialize in Chinese cuisine, without a clam anywhere on the premises, that is just fine.

Rocky Point, which is in Warwick Neck, R.I., can be reached easily by car from either north or south via Interstate 95 by taking the exit at State Roote 117 east, continuing east to Warwick Neck Avenue and south to the park and shore dinner ball. Buses leave every half hour from the Outlet store on Weybosset Street in downtown Providence. The shore dinners are served every day through Labor Day and then during the same hours (noon to 8 P.M.) on Saturdays and Sundays until the end of September.

Families are saying, "National Airlines, take me, I'm yours," when they hear about our special tours to Orlando. They're one reason 3 out of 4 of our passengers have flown with us before.

ORLANDO FOR GROWN-UPS: $53-$120 per person, double occupancy, 3 nights. Plus air fare.

For just $53, you can stay three nights in a fine Orlando hotel. And that includes a book of 8 exciting attraction tickets at Walt Disney World! That also includes all transfers between the airport, hotel and park. And up to two children (aged 3-11) free in your room!

If you don't want to miss any of the action, stay right inside Walt Disney World's own on-site hotels for only $120 per adult. And again, the same things are included, and much more. We've got lots and lots of other Orlando packages, too. Of course, all air fares are extra. And all prices are valid through December 15, 1976. For more information about all of National's Orlando packages and for reservations, just call your travel agent at The Vacation Store, or National Airlines at 697-9000. And say, "National Airlines, take me, I'm yours."

What's Doing in NIAGARA FALLS

By JOHN BRANNON ALBRIGHT

TWIN CITIES—On both aides of the Niagara River are cities named Niagara Falls. The larger is Niagara Falls, N.Y., with a population of 85,000. Niagara Falls, Ontario, has only 67,000 permanent residents but a more hustling hosiness district filled with wax museums, pitza parlers, souvenir chops and tall observation towers. Linking the two cities is Rainbow Bridge, which crosses the Niagara River a few hundred yards from the fslls. About five miles north is the newer high-level Lewiston-Queenston Bridge, which connects the Nisgara Expressway (Interstate 190) with the Queen Elizabeth Way in Ontario. Between Rainbow Bridge and the Lewiston-Queenston Bridge is the Whirlpool Rapids Bridge, and about 25 miles to the sonth is the Peace Bridge, linking Buffalo and Fort Erie, Ontario. The toll on the first three hridges is 30 cents for car and oriver ann 10 cents for each additional passenger. The toll on the Peace Bridge is 35 cents for a passenger car regardless of the number of occupants.

HONEYMOON HAS-BEEN — Jerome Bonaparte, Napoleon's youngest brother, and his Baltimore-born wifo, Elizabeth Parterson, boneymooned at Niagara Falls in 1803. Railroads hrought more couples later in the 1800's and the falls quickly hecame the No. 1 destination of honeymooners from the Northeast. But superhighways and jet planes have wrought changes. These days newlyweds are more likely to go to the Poconos or Florida; of the more than four million annual vicitors to Niagara Falls, only about 100,000 are honeymooners. There are other changea as well at Niagara Falls, N.Y. The city is undergoing a $250 million, 82-acre civic facelifting that has left the city temporarily ravaged. The fow older huildings in the downtown eection that have escaped the nrban-renewal hulldozer stand stark and lonely, waiting for the day when the last of the concrete is poored, when the flowera and trees are in place, and the shops and etalls are open.

NATURAL WONDER - Nisgara Falls is neither the highest water-fall in the world (that honor goes to Venezoela's Angel Falls) nor the widest (Khône Falls in Laos ie), hat it is one of the most durable and popular sightseeing at-tractions in the world. The falls, named American and Horseshoe, are separated by Goat Island, which sits in the middle of the 28-mile-long Nlagara River. They carry 750,000 gsilons of water a second over a 200-foot rock face aboot three-foorths of a mile wide, The sight inspires awe whether viewed from the United States or Canadian side, but most observers coocede that the broader sweep seen from Canada is more rewarding. Erosion and rock slidee take, a continuing toll, causing the falle to recede at the rate of about three feet a year. Several years ago the Army Corpe of Engineers offered suggestions for retarding the erosion and asked for public comment. After studying the response, the International Joint Commission, which has jurisdiction over the falls, decided to let nature take its coorse and shelvod all proposals.

SEEING THE FALLS—The motorist who wants to get a full viow from the United States side is al-most compelled to find a parking place and walk to the rim, for although the Robert Moses Parkway bordering the river is artractively landscaped, the roadway is too far from the falls for easy viewing. That's true, also, for almost all other roads in the vicinity oxcept the Niagara Parkway on the Canadian side. A number of staterun parking lots are on the United States side; they all charge $1.50 a car. Once on foot, the visitor can get an impressive view of the American Falls by paying 25 cents to enter the Prospect Point Ob-servation Tower, where he has a choice of walking to the top or taking a free elevator. He can also ride the elevator to the hase of the falls and a souvenir shop. Another way to approach the cascading waters is aboard one, of three steamhbats, all named the Maid of the Mist, one of which is hrand now this year. The boats go so close to the face of the falls that passengors are bathed in spray (raincoats and hats are supplied). Departures for the half-hour trip Departures for the half-nour trip are scheduled about overy 15 min-ntes from 9:15 A.M. to 8 P.M. daily. The fare is $3 for adults, $1.50 for children (tel: 716-284-4233). For sightseeing on land in the vicinity of the American Falls, there is the Niagara Viewmobile, which carries passengers in covered, open-sided tram cars at a fare of $1 for adolts, 50 cents for children; riders can get on and off at will. More extensive motorized sightseeing is offered by a num-ber of limousine operators. One, based on the United States side, is Sheridan Travel Bureau, 3480 Ni-avara Walls Roulevard. Tonawanda. Sheridan Travel Bureau, 3480 Niagara Falls Bonlevard. Tonawanda, N.Y. (716-594-3600). The fare for a three-to-four-hour tour is $15.95 for adults, $8.95 for children. On the Canadian sido, two operators offering tours are Canadiana Scenie Tours, 1305 Murray Hill (416-354-4767) and G & G Line of Niagara Falls, Ontario, 5685 Falls Avenno (416-356-5467). Canadiana charges $6 for adults, $3 for children for a three-hour tour; G & G chargea $8.75 in the daytime, $9.75 at night and throws in a pass to the Biblical Wax Museum. A 10-minute cable-car ride (five minutes in each cal Wax Museum. A 10-minute cable-car ride (five minutes in each direction) over the Whirlpool north of the talls is offered by the Niagara Spanish Aero Car, based on the Canadian side on Niagara Parkway North (416-354-5711). Built by Spanish engineers and opened on Ang. 9, 1916, the car this year is marking its 60th anniversary with, a epokeaman said, "a perfect safety record." The car operates about every 15 minutes from 9 A.M. to 9 P.M. daily; fare: $1.60 for adults, 75 eents for children onder 7 if accompanied hy an adult. Daily belicopter rides over the falls are also available. One operator is Niagara Helicopter Tours, Victoria Avenue and River Road, Niagara Fells, Ontario (416-354-2751). Its 1stes are $15 for one person, $20 for two for an $-to-10-minute ride. The helicopter is flown from 9 A.M., to 7 P.M. daily.

THE FALLS AT NIGHT—The daylime show is not too much changed from what the French missionary Louis Hennepin described in 1678 as a "vast and prodigious eadence of water." But at night the falle take on an entirely different look,
With the help of 17 xenon lamps
cquipped with colored filters—red, pink, blue, green and yellow—the falls become a rainbow of cbanging eolors. The honrs of illumination very depending on the time of year, but the lights are turned on for a portion of every evening. A different program is given every night, depending on the operator's mood. Should a firemen's coovention he in town, red predominates; on St. Patrick's Day, green. Through Sept. 6, the lights acre arca. It is open from 9 A.M. to 9:30 P.M. daily; $5.25 for adolts, $1.50 for children. Views of the Niagara River rushing through its 350-foot-deep gorge, a mural by Thomas Hart Benrom depicting the discovery of the falls and exhibits pertaining to the Robert Moses Niagara Power Plant can be seen free of charge at Power Vista, which is four and one-half miles north of the falle on the United States side. The glass-enclosed vista is open from 9 A.M. to 9 P.M. daily; free parking is provided.

THEATER — Plays and musical comedies are offered at 8 o'clock four oights a week in the Psrkway Ramada Inn in downtown Niagara Falls, N. Y. The current offering, echeduled to run through mid-September in the 110-sest thester, is "Camelot." Tickets are $5 on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, $6 on Saturday. A special dinner psckage is avsilable. For $9.95 ($11.95 on Saturday), theatergoers are given a ticket to the show and dinner heforehand in the Ramada Inn with a choice of prime rihs, trout or stuffed ehicken breast. Reservations for hoth the theater and dinner can be made by contacting the inn, 401 Boffalo Avenue, Niagara Falls, N.Y. 14303 (716-285-2541). Across the river, the Canadisn Mime Theater holds forth until Ang. 28 in the newly refurbished Roysl George Theator in Niagara-oo-the-Lake. A repertory of three works, "Old and Handel on Aug. 29, and the season will ecoclude with a Native American Festival of concerts, theater works and powwow dancing from Sept. 1 ro c. Most performances take place at 8 P.M., except on Sundays, when the usual time is 2 P.M. Tickets to all performances are $3 and may be obtained in advance from Artpark Ticket Office, Box 302, Lewisson, N. Y. 14092 (716-754-4375). The charge for parking is $1.50 a car.

MELODY FAIR—Under a geodesic dome in Wurlitzer Park on Niagara Falls Boulevard in North Tonawanda, N. Y., about 12 miles southeast of Niagara Falls, the 3,500-seat Melody Fair Theater offers a summer program of musicals and Las Vegas-style cabaret acts. Opening tomorrow and running through Saturday will he the Jim Nabors and Florence Henderson show. B. B. King, the singer and guirarisr, will appear next Sunday, followed by Gahriel Kaplan, the comedian, from Ang. 23 to 28. Other featured performers are the Irish Rovers (singers) from County Cork, Aug. 29; Tennessee Ernie Ford, Sept. 6-11; trumpeter Doc Severinsen and his orchestra, Sept. 12; impersonator Rich Little, Sept. 13-18; comedian George Carlin, Sept. 19; Chuck Mangiooe and his orchestra, Sept. 24. and 25; Bnck Owens and his country and Western hand, Oct. 3; Johnny Mathis, Oct. 8 and 9. Most performances are at 8 P.M. except on Saturdays when two shows are scheduled, usually at 7 and 10:30 P.M. Tickets range from S5.50 to $10. Parking is free. For a detailed program, send a celf-addressed, stamped envelope to Melody Fair, Wurlitzer Psrk, North Tonawanda, N. Y. 14120 (716-693-7700).

HOTELS—There are more than 5,000 hotel and motel rooms on both the United States and Canadian sides of the falls, priced from medium low to very high. The closer to the falls the steeper the rates. The 401-room Niagara Hilton at Fall and Third Streets in Niagara Falls, N. Y., is part of the Rainhow Center project and is connected by an underground passage to the Convention Ceoter across the street. Geared to convention delegates, it can be noisy and bacchanalian, and it is a good balf-mile walk from the falls, but it has its own shops, restaurants and heated indoor swimming pool. Rates: $27 single, $33 to $37 doo-hle; tel: 716-285-3361. Some other choices in downtown Niagara Falls, N. Y.; the Holiday Inn, 114 Buffalo Avenue, $35 single, $41 double (716-285-2521); and the Parkway Ramada Inn, 401 Buffalo Aveoue, $39 single, $44 double (716-285-2541). On U.S. 62 a major approach to the falls, motels are usually cheaper. One example: Howard Johnson's Motor Lodge East, 6505 Pine Avenoe, $23 single, $30 doublo (716-283-8791). In Niagara Falls, Ontario, more than 100 hotels and motels are concentrated within walking distance of the falls. At the Sheraton Foxhead Inn, for example, rooms with a view of the falls are $52.50 for one or two people, Rooms without the view are $46.50; tel: 416-358-0111.

RESTAURANTS—On the United States side, almost all the motels and hotels bave dining rooms or coffee shops. One that is situated closo to the falls is the Reo Coach Inn (716-285-8431), Weekday luncheon huffets are $2.25, bot roast heef sandwiches $1.50 and strip steak sandwiches with french fries $4.95. A specialty is hot apple pie with rum sauco (95 cents). Away from downtown the Italian style Como Restanrant, 220 Pine Avenue (716-285-9341), has good food, frieodly service, comfortable surroundings and fairly reasonable prices ($1.95 to $5 for lunch; $3.75 to $11 for dinner). It is open from noon to 12:30 A.M. every day. In the north end of the city at Whirlpool Street and Cleveland Avenuo is the Speak Steakhonse with a 1920's atmosphere and chops and steaks priced at about $3.75 for lunch and from $5 to $11 for dinner. Open 11:30 A.M. to 2 A.M. Monday through Priday and from 3:30 P.M. to 3 A.M. on Saturday and Sunday. The phone is 716-285-0824. Oo the Canadian side, a popular dining experience is the revolving restaurant atop the Skylon Tower. Entrees includo tront stuffed with crabmoat ($7.50), prime ribs with baked potato ($9.55) and baked lobster tail and rice ($11.95). The view, if the weather ie elear, is tmsurpassed. Open from 11:30 A.M. to 10:30 P.M.; tel: 415-356-2651.

OUTDOOR RECREATION—The region surrounding Niagara Falls abounds in state and local parks. For swimming there are pools in Joseph Davis State Park, north of Lewiston, and Hyde Park, a city park in the heart of Niagara Falls, N. Y. For picnicking there are facilities in Whirlpool State Park, just north of the falls, Devil's Hole State Park, a little farther north, and Davis Park, Golf courses are scattered throughout the area, with 18-bole public courses in Hyde Park, at Willowbrook, at Beaver Island and at River Oaks on Grand Ieland. The only state park in the region that permits overnight camping, bowever, is Golden Hill, on the shore of Lake Ontario, about 45 miles northeast of Niagara Falls.

CROSSING THE BORDER—Because of the Olympics Games that were beld earlier this cummer in Montreal, Canadian immigration officials have tightened security measures at the bordor. Whereas in the past Americans usually were asked only where they lived and what their nationality was, they are now being advised to carry proof of citizenship, such as a birth certificate, a passport, naturalization papers or a draft card. According to the Canadian Government Office of Tourism, the tightened security will remain in

RAINBOW CENTER—Centerpiece of the mooumental urban renewal project in Niagara Falls, N.Y., is the completed Niagara Falls, N.Y., is the completed Niagara Falls International Convention Center, commonly called Rainbow Center. Capable of scating 12,000 people and accommodating trade shows, sports events, concerts, iee spectacles, eircuses, rodeos and eonferences, it was designed by Philip Johnson to resemble the curvo of a rainhow. The center's roof forms a 600-foot arch that spans not only such interior facilities as an arena, a ballroom, a theater and restanrants but a two-block attetch of traffic-carrying roadway as well. In front of the convention center is the E. Dent Lackey Plaza, a sunken park named for the former Mayor who initiated the development project, It contains an amphitheater, ice skating rink, fountains, trees and gardens. By next March the completed nrban renewal project will include a wide, landscaped, partially covered pedestrian mall running for four blocks to within sight of the American Falls at Prospect Point. The aim is to link the natural phenomenon of the falls and the already landscaped parkland along the Niagara River to the convention eentor.

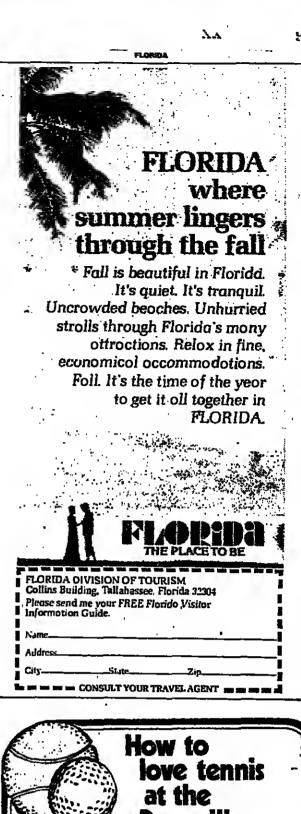

MARINE EXHIBITS—The history of the falls, which have a geologic age of about 12,000 years, is portrayed in exhibits and andiovisual presentations at the Schoell-kopf Geological Museum three hlocks north of Rainhow Bridge on the United States side. The museum is open from 10 A.M. to 8 P.M. daily; admission 25 cents, children under 8 free, Opposite the museum, at 701 Whirlpool Street, is the Aquarium of Niagara Falls, U.S.A., which uses "U.S.A." in its name to distinguish itself from the National Marine Aquarium at the Panasonie Attraction Center, in Niagara Falls, Ontario. At these aquatic facilities performing dolphius are among the major attractions. The U.S.A. aquarium gives a 20-minuto show every bour on the hour from 9 A.M. to 8:30 P.M. Monday through Friday and from 10 A.M., to 9:30 F.M. on Saturdsy and Sunday; soults $2,50, children (4 to 14) $1. The Mational Marine Aquarium is open from 9 A.M. to 9 P.M. daily and charges $3.55 for adults, $1,50 for students and 75 cents for children 12 and under. At the Marineland and Game Farm, 7657 Portage Road, Niagara Falls, Ontario, there is an aquatic circus as well as hears, huffaloes and lions within a 75-

New Faces," "Here Come the Clowns" and "The World of Mime," alternates with a children's show, "Red Noses." Regular performances are at 9 o'clock every night hot Sunday and Monday; children's matinees are at 2 P.M. on Wadnesdays, Saturdays and Sundays. Tickets are $4.50 for adults, $3 for students and the elderly (except opening nights and Saturday evenings). Prices for children's matinees are $2.50 for sdults, $1.75 for children 14 years of age and nuder. Additional information and tickets are available from Canadian Mime Theater, Box 1102, Niagara-on-the-Lake, Ontario LOS IJO (tel: 415-468-3942).

SHAW FESTIVAL—Io Niagsra-onthe-Lake, about 15 miles north of Niagara Falls, Ontario, the annoal Shaw Festival is in progress through Sept. 26. This year'a repertory inclodes three Shaw works, "Mrs. Warren's Profession,"
"Arms and the Man" and "The Apple Cart," and J. M. Barrie's
"The Admirable Crichton." In addition, a series of Sunday concerts takee place at the featival theater.
Cleo Laine and John Dankworth and his ensemble, for example, will appear on Ang. 29 at 2 P.M.
Regular, festival performances take place at 8:30 P.M. with matiness at 5 P.M. on Wednesdays and Sundays and 2:30 P.M. on Saturdays. Tickets rango from $3 to $10 and can be ordered from Shaw

Niagara on the Lake, Ontario, Canada LOS 1JO (416-468-3201).
On the day of performance any available tickets may be purchased at half price by etudents and the aged.

ARTPARK—Alongside the Niagara River Gorge, about seven miles north of Niagara Falls, N. Y., is Artpark, the state's newest performing arts center, which not only offers a atage for performers had also a summer bome for painters, sculptors and other artists who take up rosidence, display their work and are on hand to discuss their activities with viaitors. From Wednesday through next Sunday the Murray Lucis Dance Company performs a circus-motif piece entitled "Hoopla." Erich Leinsdorf and Andre Kostolanetz will conduct the New York Philharmonic from Ang. 24 to 26, and Michael Tilson Thomas will lead the Buffalo Philharmonic Orchestra in two all-Gershwin programs and an all-Bosthoven one from Ang. 27 to 29. HOW TO TURN A 7-DAY VACATION INTO A7-DAY VACAT

While you cruise, you can shoot skeet over the ocean, drive golf balls into the world's bluest green or just sit there and watch the flying fish go by.

And there's no better way to cruise than on a Holland America ship. Only Holland America offers you a complete breakfast and lunch out by the pool or in the dining room every day. And Holland America not only serves you superb meals, but offers you a choice of mealtimes most convenient for you. Plus our midnight buffet and 24-hour room service. All with no extra charges, and no tipping required.

You can also enjoy first run movies, first-rate entertainers and all the dancing you can stand. It's the most vacation you can get in 7 days. And you can get it on Holland America's s.s. Rotterdam to Nassau and Bermuda (the only 7-day cruise that includes both) and on the s.s. Statendam to Bermuda (with 3 days at sea and 4 days at Front St. in downtown Hamilton).

If you have a little more time, you can get even. more vacation on the s.s. Veendam's 10 and 11-day Caribbean cruises.

Each ship offers you the elegant service and experience of a cruise line that's been cruising the world

So if you'd like a vacation that gets off the ground fast, check the schedule below. Call your travel agent or mail the schedule with your name and address to Holland America Cruises, Two Penn Plaza, New York 10001. Or call (212) 760-3880.

ing up as a good deal. Unfortunately, the weather wasn't part of the bargain.

As we walked to the car for our racquets, the sky turned from szure to charcoal gray, unleashing a torrential downpour. We took refuge in the car as the storm lashed the Shawnce Inn. After 20 minutes the deluge ceased but tennis was now out-the six courts were soaked.

We explored the inn with an eye to its wet-weather possibilities. There were plenty of magazines at the sublobby newsstand. There was a cavereous and rakish indoor cool, so we wouldn't be deprived of swimming, no matter what And there was a game room lined with pinball machines around a pool table and Ping-Pong

We bought a table tennis ball from a machine for a quarter (upping our outlay from $14.95 to $15.20) and played several hard-fought games.

Our appetite ignited, we wandered upstairs to the Indian-motif Totem coffee shop to partake of hamburgers, salad and sodas for a total of $7-the only real meal we bad to purchase oo our own.

At 2 o'clock, the rain over, we strolled across the steamy grounds to check out the cooditions of the courts. The pro was sweeping them off with a broom and we optimistically signed a reservation sheet for an hour of play

At 2:15 we checked to see if the room might be ready-it wasn't -and went to pick up our bathing suits from the car, which was turning into our hotel. This time we changed in the dressing rooms by the outdoor-pool, a short walk from the driving range. The pool was vaguely kidney-shaped with a high diving board and children's pools and a snack bar nearby. On the far side was a screen of weeping willow trees and beyond the trees the Delaware River, smooth as a lake, meandered past the resort. We splashed around in the warm chlorinated water and sprawled in canvas sling chairs to soak up the sun's rays while they lasted. .

Which was not for long. As storm clouds gathered, we jogged back across a quarter-mile expanse of meadow to the ina and settled ourselves in rockers on the loog colonnaded perch, piled with the luggage of other mini-vacationers, who were also unable to claim their rooms,

A few chairs down, a woman with a gray poodle on a leash was telling a stranger: "If I had known we couldn't get right in, I wouldn't have brought him. He tied me down. I couldn't even go in for lunch."

3:15 -P.M .- Our -room was finallyready. It was a crisp, cozy place with walls of creamy gray, white ceiling white and orange curtains, a kelly green carpet and a color TV. The windows overlooked the golf greens and gardens.

We changed again for tennis and went down to play on the children's swings and see-saw while walting for the courts to get dry. They didn't. We walked back to the room for a nap before dinner.

Dinner was served from 7 to 8:30 in a barn-size, eiry, turquoise chamber . crisscrossed with large beams and hung with huge cauldrons streaming with greenery. A planist and a bass player were plucking out soft rhythms for dancing between courses.

We ordered drinks (on us) and scanned the meou (on them), opting for a chicken liver pate and shrimp and crab cocktail to start. The entrees included roast sirioin of beef with mushroom sauce, broiled pork chops, skewered chickes with spiced fruit, ticipating our food when-surprise!another Couple sat down at our table. "You'll nave two joining you for din . Shawnee Village was linked to a ne. " said the hostess.

After we all overcame our embarrassment, we had a friendly chat. They were from New Jersey, were also minivacationers and also were wondering why they had asked us all here.

As for dinner—my veal was julcy and tender, Debbie's flounder somewhat bland. Still, we knew we were far ahead of the game - $14.95 wouldn't buy this meal anywhere. For dessert, we chose strawberry and creme de menthe sundaes. And when asked to sample an extra, third dessert-French cream cheesecake the waitress brought it cheerfolly.

After dinner we wandered downstairs into the "Cartoon Room," named for the original caricatures and comics collected there by Fred Waring. a cartoon buff. Jazz had been advertised, but when we arrived, they were playing "Anniversary Waltz" and

"This is early skating rink," decided Debbie, who described the action on the dance floor as a "polyester riot." We'danced one slow one, had a round of nightcaps for $3:25 and left, ending the first day of our mini-vacation watching W. C. Fields and Mae West cavort in "My Little Chickadee" on the room TV.

The telephone rang us awake at 7:30 A.M., an bour earlier than the 8:30 call promised by the reception clerk at check-in.

"You're down for 7:30," the operator insisted.

Down for what? I wondered. We breakfasted sumptuously in the diring room of the night before from a long buffet table piled high with scrambled eggs, ham, sausage, bacon, French toast, hash, home fries, fruit salad and juices. A waitress brought buttered toast and coffee to the table, which this time we occupied alone ... by 52 weeks) and some are st

After breakfast we surrendered our and the mini-vacations-are-sti selves to representatives of Shawnee in the inn lobby.

Would they pressure us to buy property? A house? Join the country clob? Pay more for our stay? "I'm, sorry we can't take you right now," said one of the bostesses. "Everyone'a out. Can you come back in 45 minutes?" We were back, anxiously, in 40.

This time, they were ready for us. They turned us over to a busky man in a brown jacket and open-neck shirt who was clutching a folder of papers and sipping coffee from a paper cup.

Explaining that he needed the coffee to wake up, be guided us downstairs to the Cartoon Room, where we sat at a table painted with a picture of the Phantom of the comics. Across the room, other mini-vacationers were huddled with other Shawnee representatives over other tables.

Our man asked us first whether we take vacations-of course we do, we

C.R.C.'s Boss And the Law

The public hunger for a super-bargain bas spawned a breed of entrepreneur eager to feed it. Raymond D. Anderson, president of Columbia Research Corp., is such a man. His career suggests some of the dangers the bargainhunter faces-and some of the difficulties law enforcement and consumer organizations face in seeking to police the field.

Anderson has been involved with mail order offers for 20 years and has been pursued during that time by Better Business Bureaus, postal inspectors, the Federal Trade Commission, local consumer protection agencies and state attorneys-general.

In June, 1974, for example, he filed bankruptcy petitions on behalf of his firm, Market Development Corp., which had offered the public a package similar to that discussed in the accompanying article. A judge observed that, because of the bankruptcy move. thousands of creditors "stand little chance of recovering claims of hetween $15 and $500 since there are few assets." The company had grossed. a reported $3 million in 1972.

Late last year the New York Department of Consumer Affairs accused Columbia Research Corp. of making "false, deceptive and misleading advertising claims." The department convened a hearing on the charges Jan. 12, but action was deferred when no one appeared on behalf of the corporation. The matter was subsequently turned over to the regional office of the Federal Trade Commission which in turn, passed it on to its counterpart in Cleveland, where the case is being

According to John Mendenhall, an F.T.C. attorney handling the case out of the Cleveland office, the commission is seeking a cease-and-desist order directing C.R.C. to halt the alleged practices. Should an agreement not be reached out of court, the case will probably be stated for trial before an administrative law judge some time in the fall. The possibulty would remain open for further actions in Federal Court in an effort to seek restitution on behalf of alleged victims.

The Department of Consumer Affairs, in accusing Columbia Research of "making false, deceptive and misleading advertising claims," was one of several Government and private agencies investigating C.R.C. Among the accusations were the following:

The vacation and cosmetics were not free because the $15 fee constituted a charge.

Vacationers beaded for Las Vegas were promised a food and beverage atlowance (actually, they would have to pay for the most expensive meal on the menu in order to receive a secondone free) casino money (each dollar would have to be matched by one of theirs at a $2 table), cash nickels (they would be required to put up $5 to receive $6 worth) and lodgings that were of dubious "first-class" rating.

A rare chance to enjoy a 12-day Gulf cruise— with all the comforts of a round-the-world vessel.

There is something special about the elegance of a round-the-world vessel. You sense it on no other ship. There is an uncrowded vastness to its decks and lounges. A comfortable spaciousness to Its limited number of cabins. A deft, nimble graciousness to its seasoned crew:

Most people who take short cruises rarely experience the exhilarating pleasure of such a vessel. But this fall you can sample it to the full. For 12 glorious days.

Aboard the Royal Viking Sea. Before leaving on her third round-theworld cruise in January, 1977, the Sea will take two 12-day Gulf/Caribbean cruises. Here is your chance to combine the convenience of a short cruise with the luxury of a long cruise. Even people who have salled these waters a dozen times before will find the experience extraordinary.

It begins the moment you come aboard.

MEXICO

There are a mere 289 cabins, all First Class. 94% of all passengers enjoy sweeping, outside views. With fewer people aboard than ordinary short-cruise vessels, the 300-man crew has ample time to care for everyone.

The experience continues throughout the ship, thanks to a spaciousness that lets you live your days as actively or as quietly as you choose. There are deck games, and quiet out-of-the-way lounges. There is a swimming pool large enough for swimming, and decks quiet enough for dreaming. There is rousing evening entertainment, and deserted moonlit railings. The dining room, set high on an upper deck, is large enough to serve everyone at a single, relaxed seating. This freedom to vary your pace to match your moods is the hallmark of luxurious, lengthy cruising. The Sea expresses it beautifully.

Along the way you will visit Playa del Carmen and Cozumel, Mexico. Georgetown, Grand Cayman. Montego Bay, Jamaica. And Port-au-Prince, Haiti. Ports carefully chosen to offer you a variety of shore amusements: beach-strolling, sightseeing, shopping.

If you are thinking of taking a short cruise this fall, here is a marvelous opportunity to take it with long-cruise luxury. Aboard the round-the-world Royal Viking Sea. Of Norwegian registry. And spirit.

Each cruise offers a choice of embarkation ports. The first departs Fort Lauderdale November 16, and New Orleans November 19. The second departs Fort Lauderdale November 29, and New Orleans December 2.

Mexico's close enough to your home to visit often. And the more often you come the more likely you are to find a warm and welcoming abrazo. That's because you'll make close friends among the smiling people. You'll enjoy nearby Baja California, Cancun, Cozumel, Guadalajara, Mazatlan, Merida, Mexico City or Puerto Vallarta. Some are colonial, some pre-Columbian, some chicky modern. Each is different but each shares in extending the traditional Mexican but each shares in extending the traditional Mexican hospitality. Take worldly Acapulco. Its sun smiles like a friendly face, every sea breeze caresses you, the waters bestow a gentle kiss. It's a place for elegant restaurants, informal beach parties, where the nights shall be filled with music. Friendly people welcome you to the oldest culture in America. It's nearby, still your best buy. Come see us soon.

Icelandic has more to offer than the lowest jet fares of any scheduled airline to Luxembourg, in the heart of Europe. We also have excellent hot meals, complimentary wines, after dinner cognac and attentive, courteous service.

In short, we have the same kind of service you'd get from other airlines, without the same high costs. Because our air fares aren't just a little lower. They're a lot lower.

For example, on a 1-13 day trip we can save you $201 (Cost: $499). On 14-21 day GIT Fares we can save you $121 (Cost: $420). On 22-45 days we can save you $106 (Cost: $450). And on our APEX fare, we save you $66 (Cost: $398)? That's a lot of money.

And it stands to reason, the more you save on the way to . Europe, the more you'll have to spend when you get there. See your tavel ageot. Write Dept. #NT, Icelandic Airlines, 630 Fifth Avenue, N.Y.N.Y. 10020. Or call: 212-757-8585 (New York City). Outside N.Y. area call looking across the piazza to where she was standing in the doorway of her father's shop. Our eyes met, and we smiled our daily greeting, but we never spoke.

Sunday was Easter and my ship was leaving the next day. I sent her flowers -an orchid corsage, delivered to ber home, with a card: "Buona Pasqua . Happy Easter." That's all. No salutation because I didn't know her name. No signature because mine wouldn't have mattered. Just "Buona Pasqua," sent to her bome on Easter Sunday morning.

That afternoon, tha watchmaker's shop should have been closed, but it wasn't. The watchmaker'a daughter had forced her father to open his store on that Catholic boly day and she was standing in the doorway, wearing my corsage—ready to smile when I

Time had also muddled my memory and my search for the piazza became an endless round of false starts down winding streets which seemed invariably to lead to still less familiar corners

I stopped people on the street. "Venti anni fà," I found myself saying-"Twenly from home and lonely ty years ago. . . . " They all found my Italian quaint and my story enchanting, but none remembered the plazza.

It was in total desperation that I stopped a lone policeman, patrolling one of the crowded streets leading to Piazza Cristoforo Colombo, the city's main square. .

ing me alone in the piazza. It had turned into a parking lot, jammed with small Italian cars. The police station bad become headquarters for a veterans association. And the doorway to the watchmaker's shop now advertised the services of a dressmaker. It took time to decide to go in. The changes frightened me and I paced nervously for awhile, wondering whether I really wanted to know any more. But I had traveled more than 3,000 miles and the answers to questions that I was afraid to ask aloud seemed to lie just beyond one more door.

I pushed it open and entered. "Mi acusi," I began. "Venti onni.

Her hair was short and gray. She was not as tall as I remembered, nor was she as slim. The years had erased the accent between waist and hips; she had become a matron. Only the I interest you in a bracelet, or a mole on her face betrayed her identity.

I walked into the shop and to the bench where her father was working. She glanced briefly in my direction but returned quickly to the discussion with the youth.

"Mi scusi," I said to him, "ma le parlo Italiano povero. . . .' "Non fà niente," he said. "Porla bene.

"No," I said to the watchmaker. "I won't need a souvenir. I'm not married." I was still staring at the glass showimage of his daughter. She was still deep in conversation with the boy, not the least interested in me.

It didn't matter. We both had changed. "I think I'll be going now," I said to the watchmaker, turning to walk out the door. "Arrivederci." "Arrivederla," he said. "Torn'a San

LAKE CHAMPLAIN

To the Editor: Many of the smaller motels in the Lake Champlain area of Vermont are somewhat perplexed wondering "where all the tourists have gone."

The feeling among traveltransportation industry people here this summer is that rumors of overcrowded facilities resulting from the Olympics in nearby Montreal and the Bicentennial have caused many would-be visitors to change their plans.

Actually, vacationers need oot be coocerned about finding a comfortable place to stay in the Lake Champlain area between the Green Mountains of Vermont and New York's Adirondacks, Furthermore, officials in Rutland, St. Albans and Grand Isle also report a surplus of accommodations.

THE LOIRE VALLEY

To the Editor:

In regard to the article, "What's Doing in the Loire Valley" (Travel Section, Aug. unless things have changed drastically in the last six years, beware of the guided tours of the chateaus.

The tourists become captive audiences of the guides, and we found no wey to escape from the long-winded explanations of the most minute appurtenances. The guides would not allow us to wander around by ourselves, and we found the tours extremely long and very dull. I think tourists might have better luck going it on their own.

It is inconceivable to me how Mr. Lottman could possibly suggest to the reader to pass by Chinon and just traverse the city itself. Having just returned from a 'mind-and-soul broadening trip to this area, I was overwhelmed by the grandeur and the historic value of Chinon. Commanding the sweeping views of the Vienne and the plains below, through which hordes of invaders have come sioce time immemorial, the towers and rooms still preserved at Chinon today are worth a trip in themselves.

. Inside one of the remaining rooms ooe can see a complete replica of the chateau as it stood in its days of glory, a mighty fortress and miracle of architecture. In one of the remaining towers the Templars were imprisoned during the 13th century. The secret writings, scratched into the soft limestoce, tell of their sufferings and torture. It was at Chinon that

and throw out the invading take Eastern Airlines' sl

Today, the French historical societies are trying to raise sufficient funds to restore Chinon to its former state, by rebuilding it stone by stone. To my mind, all other castles are mere showplaces, eye pleasing toys compared to Chinon, which, even in ruins, finds no equal in the historic Chatean Val-

NORWAY AND IRELAND To the Editor:

To the Irish Husband who complained about freeloading American relatives dropping in for a visit, I say shake hands with your counterparts, a Norwegian-Americancouple in the United States. It's a known fact that when Norwegians come here to visit relatives, they expect and get the royal treatment, but strangely enough, it doesn't seem to work in re-

When we visited our relatives in Norway, the four of us spent days and days touring the countryside. True, they used their car, but we paid for gasoline, meals (at least four every day), lodg-ings, souvenirs and all sight-seeing attractions en route. Not once did a Norwegian make a motion toward his pocket Later, our Norwegian host and his wife visited the United States on a two-week business assignment with a generous expense account. Now we picked up where we left off in Norway-euto trips, dining out, sightseeing -and a good bit of it all was paid by you-know-who. Furthermore, if we had not been alert, our home would bave been stripped of everything they could carry. On the surface, it would seem that we are rather gullihle to be so taken in. But not at all. Similar experiences have been related to us by many of our Norwegian-American friends so ours was not an isolated incident. It will, however, be our last: we have learned our lesson. May we, too, omit our names. We are just interested in letting Irish Husband know that he is not alone. NORWEGIAN-AMERICAN Brooklyn §

n January 15, 1977, the Queen Elizabeth 2 embarks on what can only be described as an international event - a cruise around the world.

Twenty-one ports in eighty-one days.

The Queen Elizabeth 2 follows a sun-filled warmweather route across the seven seas to four continents and twenty-one ports from Rio to Cape Town, Bombay to Hong Kong, You cross the equator, pass the international date line and steam through the Panama Canal.

And all the while you'll be wined, dined and pampered as only Cunard knows how. Imagine, 3 crew members for every 4 passengers.

No other ship is so well suited to world cruising.

The Queen Elizabeth 2 is á born world traveler. Her gallant speed gets you to major ports quickly, so you can enjoy more rime ashore. Her great size assures you of smooth sailing all the way. And her staterooms-the largest affoat-provide a maximum of comfort.

Be one of the few people to visit China.

By special arrangement between Cunard and the People's Republic of China, you can be one of the select number to enjoy a land excursion to this great country. Once there, you'll see the

Take only part of the cruise. still see China.

For the first time ever, Cunard has made it possible for a limited number of passengers to visit the People's Republic of China even if they are not taking the entire cruise. Choose from five special segments, all including China.

For instance, 39 days from Hong Kong to New York is $4,367 to $6,607 with air fare and land arrangements all taken care of by Thomas Cook. The full 81 days: $6,950 to $30,000. (Prices per person, double occupancy. The cost of the 3day China excursion will be about $300.)

Opportunities like this are rare indeed. Reserve at once.

See Your travel agent now for a free brochure. Or write Vaugha Rickard, Dept. A3, 555 Fifth Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10017. Then get set to sail. Depart from New York or Fort Lauderdale. Return to Los Angeles if you like. If you can bear the thought of coming back at all.

How the jet set turned a 7th century European city into the 8th wonder of the world. Dubrovnik.

Sophisticated Europeans have made this charming old city the new place to go. A white-washed playground set along the blues and greens of the Adriatic. Shaped by ancient fortifications, with a backdrop of craggy cliffs civilized by sculptured greenery and softened by dunes of sun-washed sand. In the distance, the soaring silhouettes of mountain peaks rising to dizzying heights above the red tiled roofs, then plunging headleng to the wave-curled floor of the sea. Here, the sun is king. Its political implications may be equally consequen-tial, especially if the winner in the November Presidential election is Jimmy Carter.

Designated by the Democrats as the spiritual embodiment of the New South, Mr. Carter could exert in the textile battle a major force on the pace and direction of the South's metamorphosis from the plantation mentality of an agricultural era to the rising expectations of an industrialized one.

The catalogue of testers' problems run from starting and stalling, to faulty tailpipe mounts, beadlight failures, carburetor trouble, poor quality ("We have a drawer full of little parts that have broken or fallen off," wrote Car & Driver after a long test) and mushy shifting ("Hunting for a gear is like stirring minestrone with a stalk of spaghetti," said tha magazine).

Volkswagen says that the troubles were on early models and have been corrected at a cost of $10 mil-Hon. Mr. Perkins says "who can tell?" when asked if the troubles were hurting sales.
"But I think we've gotten credit for stepping up to them on a voluntary hasis. Now, we have the job of explaining our engineering of this car. We haveo't dooe a good job of this yet."

campaign, heavy display of satisfied owners, seems aimed at the trouble.

Bugs aren't unusual in new cars, hut Volkswagen spent 25 years after World War II getting them out and improving Beetle quality. "Americans think they are built by elves in the Black Forest," V.W. of-ficials used to say. That old image may make Rabbit defects even more noticeable. What's more, the new car carries the familiar "box on wheels" design common to many small cars, and lacks the design and engineering umusualness of the old Beetle. And, of course, the Japanese and Americans are offering more competition today in the minicar market.

V.W. men at first blamed the sales slump or a scarcity of Rabbits, and when they were crowding out of the hutch they hlamed revolt agaiost small cars. But V.W.'s higgest competitors aren't slumping today; Toyota and Datsun now outself the V.W. here and even the little Honda is creeping uncomfortably close to V.W.'s tail—and the three porting their small car sales here ahead of last year. More recently, V.W. blames the price of their Rabbit for their problems.

Whatever went wrong, it's been devastating. V.W. sales in America collapsed from 570,000 cars in 1970 to 270,-

The Bulls Are Coming!

Could It Be A Calvin Coolidge Rerun?

By VARTANIG G. VARTAN

The Republicans are setting out to bave a lively time in Kansas City this week, pick-ing their Presidential candidate amid hurrahs and promising victory at the polls on Nov. 2.

On Wall Street, expectanot oecessarily for a G.O.P. win (after all, Democrat-Jimmy Carter leads in the public opinion surveys) but for a bull market to break forth very soon after a frustrating half-year of stale-

The trigger, says analyst Edson Gould of Anametrics Inc., an investment advisory coocern, "just might be the forthcoming Republican con-vention." Back in 1924, after months of market duliness, stocks began to climb following the nomination of Calvin Coolidge by the Republicans,

Then again, Leon G. Cooperman, chairman of the investmeet policy committee at Goldman, Sachs & Company, pins his hopes for a climbing market on another factor.

"Between oow and the election," he says, "there's very little any candidate can do to affect the favorable economic oumbers for the halance of this year."

He points to steadily improving corporate profits and dividends, a forecast of 7 percent in real economic growth for 1976, stable longterm interest rates and the expectation of a relatively moderate 5½ percent infla-Consumer Price Index.

At Argus Research Corporation, Joseph J. McAlindeo sees the coming campaign months as a period when good economics will out-weigh the politicking. "We would be inclined to be fully invested," he sums up.
"We're looking for an up-ward move in stock prices. at almost any time."

An additional prop to Wall Street's optimism is the be-lief that the opposing candidates will hew to a generally conservative fiscal line, Mr. Carter simply does not in-spire the sort of jitters ea on rour as Senator George McGovern sought the Presidency. Neither does either of Republican hopefuls.

Politics aside, investors are pondering certaio basic questions. What timing strategy should be employed in this election year? What stocks ers, domestic and international oils, office equipment and banks. There appears to be no significant risk in the stock and groups of stocks appear most attractive? How high will the Dow industrials go?

Right cow, the Dow is roughly cowhere. It finished on Friday at 990.19, up just 4.19 points for the full week and keeping to its rather trendless trading pattern. The replacement of Anacooda hy Minnesota Miniog and Man-ufacturing as one of the 30 Dow components was per-haps a highlight of its per-

As for the potential in the Dow, Mr. Cain offers two possible scenarios: a retracement first to the 950 area that could limit the upside potential to a maximum 1,075—or a more severe decline, to perhaps Dow 900, that would shatter Wall Street's current complacency and, somewhat paradoxically, pave the way for "a

For the final leg—Mr. Cain holds to the opinion that the hulls run oo three legs io Wail Street—the investment advisor favors such groups as aerospace-defense (including Raytheon, Northrop and United Technologies), capital spending (Foxboro, Sun-strand, Babcock & Wilcox) and oil exploration (Hughes Tool, Schlumberger, Baker International).

At Goldman, Sachs, Mr.
Coopermao advocates a "value oriented approach" with a diversified portfollo stressing stocks with low price-earnings ratios, good dividend returns and strong halance sheets. For the individual investor now, he would advocate a portfolio with 15 percent in cash reserves, 25 perceot in quality municipal boods and percent in selected eavities. He's most positive on such groups as airlines, machinery, cooglomerates, property and casualty insurmarket between now and yearend." he states. Meanwhile, his forecast for tha Dow is a high somewhere be-tween 1,050 and 1,100 by the end of December."

Howard Stein, president of the Dreyfus Fund, doesn't make any precise forecasts for the Dow, but for all practical purposes his mutual fund, with assets of nearly $1.6 billion, is fully invested In the second quarter, the fund made new commitments in such stocks as Aetna Life & Casualty, Baltimore Gas & Electric, First National Boston, TRW Inc., Fairchild Camera, Alcan Aluminium and Bucyrus-Erie, among others, as well as a sprin-

Why Japanese stocks? "I don't know," Mr. Stein replied. "T've just always made money in them."

"I think we're going to see more of a slowdown in the economy this year than most people expect," he continued, but added that "such a development could be very posltive for the stock market, with both interest rates and the inflation rate running below expectations."

William G. Garrison, who heads his own asset manage-ment coocern, is less optimistic than some over the prospects for stock prices generally. "I can see the Dow in a 70-point trading range, staying between 960 and 1,030, from now until the end of the year," he says.

However, within this con-text, he retains a full-invested position for clients and favors such items as telephone utili-ties (American Telephone is a big bolding) and insurance-oriented issues (Connecticut Geoeral, Frank B. Hall, Alexander & Alexander).

"You can't invest today for next year's market, because you don't know what Carter's going to do," he says, adding that "I think a Carter victory is terribly obvious,"

"As we go into 1977, I

Among interviewers covering a cross-section of investment professionals, the person most sanguine about stock prospects this year was a money manager who tends a diversified portfolio of more than $600 million.

The record for this man, who prefers to remain anonys, puts the performance of the big money-center banks to shame in recent years. In the first half of 1976, for example, his portfolio rose 25 per cent in value, compared with a 15 per cent advance for the Dow industrials.

"I think the next big move in the market is up," he said,
"but I can't put a time frame on this feeling. I'm being paid for waiting, meanwhile, with rising dividends.

"I can see the Dow going to 1,200 perhaps by the end of this year. Why? Because too many people are afraid of inflation and that's the last war-the wrong war-to fight

now. The pace of economic advance is slowing and interest rates are coming down."

What strategy, then, does he follow in picking specific stocks?

'I think the basic industrial stocks—such as International Paper, Dow Chemical, U.S. Steel—still have the potential for going up another 20 "I don't like the traditional growth stocks, with the ex-ception of LB.M., because they are over-valued in terms of price. On the other hand, some of the smaller technology issues selling at lower price-earnings ratios can perform very handsomely in the next market upswing."

He, too, feels that the odds-on favorite to win the November election is Jimmy Carter, but he thinks that this already is factored into stock prices. .

Though the underwriting problems are of comparatively recent vintage, at least one former Continental officer thinks that many of its other woes can be traced to the iron hand with which J. Victor Herd ran the Continental group from 1957 until his retirement in 1970.

He was "virtually autonomnus," the former official re-calls, at the end even finessing the company's mandatory retirement-at-65 policy with two overage extensions. "It was like working in a mom and pnp stnre, nuly pop did all the talking," the former officer says.

Herd's hand picked auccessor, Nathan H. Wentworth— very much under the Herd shadnw during his own ten-ure as vice-chairman—was left with the job of cleaning up some of the fall-out from his predecessor's diversification program.

As of 1968, Continental became a holding company, adding a flurry of holdings to its basic line and continu-ing in write insurance under a series of subsidiaries and affiliates.

Mr. Herd pumped part of Continental's investment in-come — mightily augmented by a generally rising stock market-into such acquisitions as the Diners' Club Inc. and a major investment position in the Franklin Life Insurance Company.

There were other pur-chases, all aimed at lurning Continental into a full-line financial services company on the model of the Transamerica Corporation 2- an amalgam of insurance and lending outlets that would profit from the "synergism" of similar markets and combined sales forces.

The hard realities were not long in surfacing. It turned out that there was no way of meshing the Franklin Life and Continental distribution set ups, and Diners' Club was in far worse abape thao anyone had dreamed.

"It was so bad that we found uopaid receivables tucked away in boxes in a warehouse," the former Con-tinental official recalls.

The Diners' Club investment-and the subsequent rehabilitation that absorbed much of Mr. Wentworth's time-cost Continental well over $90 million, Diners' Club is now turning a small profit, hut Mr. Ricker unabashedly admits that he'd be delighted to sell off both Diners' and the Franklin Life investment. All he wants, probably a big order, is buyers "at the right price. Some of Continental's internal problems may be easier to resolve. With the he of a management consulting firm's study, Mr. Ricker has consolidated Continental's 30 subsidiaries into four operat-

In effort to pinpoint re-sponsibility, he is husily redistributing the awesome authority that bas accreted over the years to the chairman's office.

signing on as a special agent with the Cotton Fire & Marine Underwriters in Memphis, Tenn., at a salary of $100 a month. ("I also got a car and expenses," Mr. Ricker recalls.)

It came off in Dell, Ark.

Continental, and one of the things that tickles Mr. Ricker most is the fact that his first policy is still in the house. "It's bringing in premiums of $10,000 a year," be says. Including a four-year hitch in the Navy during World War II, Mr. Ricker spent 24 years with the C.F.&M.U., ultimately as manager of the company at a salary of $24. 000 a year and with an itch

"They'd gone flat on sales because they were afraid we'd lose profits. I bad to convince them we could have profit and growth," recalls Mr. Ricker, "I even had a stamp made with the letters "P" and "G" oo it and I began stamping papers all began stamping papers all over the place with it."

There was profit and growth for Mr. Ricker, too. The marine business went great guns in a period when not many of Continental's nther managers chuld point to rising sales—or earnings

Mr. Ricker was rewarded first by being made chairman of the Marine Office—and then an executive vice-president of Continental Corporation, the parent compa-

Mr. Ricker parsed that last promotion as a "signal" that he might be headed for bigger responsibilities. So did other officers of the compa-

That possibility, however, according to Mr. Ricker, was never explicitly broached by Mr. Wentworth.

"They just told me I had a desk over here and left me alone," says Mr. Ricker. In the 15 mooths between the date on which be was named president and the date on which he became chair-man and chief executive officer (made room for by Mr. Weotworth, who remains on the board) Mr. Ricker spent much of his time on the road, talking to officers of Contineotal's noninsurance subsidiaries. "I'd go into Chicago or Denver and get them all to-gether and try to get them to realize they were all working for the same company," says Mr. Ricker. Was that peripatetic, glad-handing pattern better preparation than an immersion in the day-after-day responsibil-ities of the top job be seemed to be slated to inherit?

"It wasn't the best way," says Mr. Ricker. "A relief should get a really good grounding."

"I probably knew better than anyone what was going on in the subsidiaries and affiliates but not so much what was going on in insurance," he continues, "But I grew up the insurance business. and it doesn't take long to pick up what's going on there."

His own experience at Continental reminds Mr. Ricker of a story that sounds almost like a scene from "Mr. Roberts." In 1942, Mr. Ricker was a freshly minted ensign, a "90 day wonder" assigned to a submarine chaser in the Caribbean. He'd been on the ship only a short time when he was suddenly ordered to take over

"That's okay," came the response. "Come on, we've got to top up the tanks. Take it over to the fuel dock."

"I got it over there somehow," recalls Mr. Ricker, but "I must have alammed into that dock at about six knots. There was no damage, but it taught me quite a lesson—always make sure you've got a qualified relief working be-unions, spurred by strikes that stretched the completion time on his Alameda Plaza to 50 months from the projected 24 months. He's a member of the Associated Builders and Contractors, the nonunion construction organization that's caused an uproar in the building trades around the nation. "Many workmen want to work where their own skill and productivity are recognized in their paychecks. They don't want to be hampered by restrictions like not being allowed to pick up and carry things. The regulations and restrictions are why we complain about the high prices" of building, he says. His company also contributes to the legal defense fund of the National Right to Work Committee. "They're doing a tremendous job, he says.

Booster that he is, Mr. Nichols has been a strong supporter of the expan-sion of the University of Missouri branch here, and he was finance chairman of the bond campaigns for the new international airport and the football and baseball stadiums, and he is a plan-ner of e $1,000-a-plate Republican reception that President Ford (whom he supports) and Mr. Reagan (whom he would like to see as vice president) are expected to attend Wednesday.

He sees events like the Republican National Convention starting here tomorrow as a plus for the Midwestern

The important thing is that people will look at our city and go away with a favorable impression of the city," Mr. Nichols says. "They will plan to come back for conventions and to stay in the hotels and patronize our businesses and take vacations bere. They will bring money into the community."

Mr. Nichols, who graduated from the University of Kansas with a degree in economics in 1934, has always been in his father's business. "I've worked here since I was a kid. I was never interested in anything else."

Hs and his wife, Catherine, live in Mission Hills, Kan., one of the wealthy suburbs across the state line the Nichols company pioneered. They have four grown daughters and one grandchild.

Mr. Nichols says his hobbles are the business and the community and his ranch in Colorado which the family visits several times a year.

"I go out there and work, I have 400 head of steer. All the family like to get involved. We get on a horse and go up the mountain to check a fence or irrigate or check cattle. It makes it more fun to go back there than if it was just a place to go and sit on the patio.

A tall, white-haired man, he speaks proudly of his father's work, the compamy and his vision of Kansas City's future, all of which are intertwined to him. He turned 65 last month, but didn't mark the occasion with any fanfare. "I don't believe in celebrating my antiquity." he said, and he also says he'a not slowing down. "I like my job and I like what I'm doing, and I'd rather do this than anything I can think of." "I don't like sitting on the patio as much as I did building the patio."

RANKING 1600 STOCKS

Every week of the year. The Value Line Investment Survey, using computer-based programs developed over years of testing, ranks 1600 stocks—each relative to all the others—for Probable Market Performance in the Next 12 Months, as follows:

100 of the 1600 stocks are ranked 1 (Highest) 300 of the 1600 are ranked 2 (Above Average) 800 are ranked 3 (Average)

300 are ranked 4 (Below Average) 100 are ranked 5 (Lowest)

The ranks are designed to measure probabillties. Wa expect higher-ranked stocks to go up more in a rising market—or down less in a market drop-than lower-ranked stocks. And conversely...

We expect the 400 stocks ranked 4 or 5 for Performance to go DOWN MORE or UP LESS than all the rest of the 1200 stocks within the 12 months immediately ahead.

The presence of any of these low-ranked stocks in your portfolio will probably do some damage o your overall results in the next 12 months. We urge you to check your holdings at once against Value Line's current Performance ranks for 1600 stocks. A quick and easy way to do this is given below,

GETTING BETTER ODDS

Note: Not every stock will always perform in accordance with its rank. But it is a fact that favorably ranked stocks, as a group, have outperformed poorly ranked stocks with remarkable consistency since the ranking system was introduced in 1965.

The Holt Investment Advisory discusses . . .

How Much Longer Can the Market Stay Flat

And how sharp is the next major trend likely to be

Confounding bulls and bears alike, the market has trended neither upward nor downward for more than half a year. History suggests, however, that such a horizontal pattern can't persist very long. At some point, the averages will break out of their narrow trading ranges. Chances are, the subsequent market move will be quite sharp.

That major trend, we believe, will be pointing downward. Billions of dollars of stocks have obviously been bought in anticipation of an "inevitable" electionyear boom. But as recent retail figures suggest, the business recovery may actually be faltering. And with the election less than three months away, time is rapidly running out for politicians to create the much-expected boom.

Bear Market Strategy

But a bear market is nothing to fear, as long as you don't "freeze" and ride it all the way down. Indeed, to many innovative investors, sharp market movements—down as well as up—represent unusual capital-building oppor-

Moreover, even in a bear market, some selected stock groups and non-equity issues will probably push ahead. Very often, in fact, the more the general market declines, the more these contra-cyclical issues appreciate. In a special flow-of-funds report titled "The Unwinding", The Holt Investment Advisory explains why we believe the coming decline will be supersteep. And it presents a comprehensive Investment Strategy to help open-minded investors protect and build capital in such a bear market.

Our municipal bond portfolio planning kit could save you thousands.

People who do not take the time to fully understand municipal bonds very often buy bonds that are not right for them. Assuming they are satisfied with the rating, they simply reach for the highest yields they can find. And that is one of the most common and most costly mistakes municipal bond buyers make, particularly new buyers. Because almost without exception this means long term bonds or one of the municipal bond funds which consist entirely of long bonds. And while these may be right for some people there's a good chance you're not one of them. Understanding municipals means knowing the relative advantages and disadvanteges of premium and par bonds, discount bonds, long term bonds and short term bonds so that you can decide how to select bonds that offer the combination of coupon, yield, and maturity most suitable to your investment goals.

Thet's what our Municipal Bond Portfolio Planning Kit does. In it we tell you about e few different people with fairly typical investment objectives. Then we show you how we would construct a ... model portfolio for each, explain the reasons why and give you the results in dollars and cents.

All you have to do is compare your own situation to one of the models and you will get a good understanding of the type of municipal bond most suitable for you and why.

Our Municipal Bond Portfolio Planning Kil is easy to understand, very educational and it's free but to a municipal bond buyer now more aggressive than we had to be in the 1960's when we had people standing in line and had 50 to 60 percent of the import market" against about 15 percent today. For example, V.W. has dealer incentive contests, remainder are V.W. Beetles and higher-priced Dashers and Scirocco models). While about 2,000 Beetles still are sold a month, it's the Rabbit that Volkswagen counts on and the car destined for American production.

We made a mistake and enough last year. We lost our momentum and blew our inventory," says Mr. Perkins. There's general agreement that the Rabbit has price problems. Even small American cars are priced below the V.W. "I have to think their cars are overpriced now." says Robert O. Link, sales manager for Nissan Motor Corporation which sells the Datsun cars.

"I paid $4,200" says W. C. Foote of Detroit, who likes his green four-door Rabbit, but says "you can almost buy an Oldsmoble Cutlass for that."

V.W. advertises that it's the best car in the world for under $3,500, (the suggested retail price for the lowest price model is $3,499), but it's doubtful that anyone in America drove one out a dealer's door at that price

At Bristol Motors Inc., a V.W. dealer in Manhattan, for example, a two-door Rabbit with automatic transmis-sion ($250) and some trim lists $4,352.55, without the 8 percent sales tax. A four-door with some trim but manual shift lists at $4,522.55. The sales tax would push it close to $5,000.

The auto maker's officials admit that prices won't go down when they begin producing the cars in Pennsylvania at the end of next

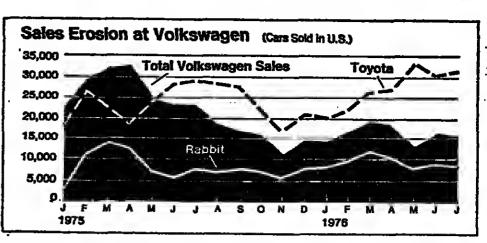

Instead, future price in-creases will be tied to Ameri-can inflation rather than the can inflation rather than the climb in German costs and the strength of the mark, "We won't be at the mercy of currency changes anymore," says Mr. Perkins, "Other cars will be going up in price and the gap will be narrowed."

Mr. Perkins says that the sales "skid has already been stopped, I think we have bottomed out. You will begin to see improvement in the next few months."

The dealer force has de-clined from 1,130 to 1,060 in the slump, and others have taken on competitive makes to sell alongside V.W. in the same showroom. But "there is growing optimism among them," he says, and some dealers agree.

"Business has been a lot

just as Detroit does.

as Detroit dealers do. "I would say they are more flexible in their trade-in al-lowances now," Mr. Perkins

The diesel version will go on sale early next year and also be assembled at New Stanton And despite the current popularity of larger American cars, Mr. Perkins is con-vinced the small-car market will grow.

"The energy crisis is still there and I have a feeling that when the election is over gasoline prices are going way up and hig cars aren't going to be very popular unless they get big mileage."

8 surprising ways DREYFUS Liquid Assets can work for you

Earn income on your cash reserves even ever short periods of time. If you're keeping extra money in your checking or savings account-money you don't need now but might need later-put some of it into Dreyfos Liquid Assets until you actually need it. Even if it's just for a few weeks, your money will be working for you.

Write checks on your Dreyfus Liquid Assets account to pay large bills. You can write a check for any amount over $500. You'll earn income right up to the day the check clears. We give you a free supply of checks. Pay your doctor, your broker, taxes, tuition-any large bill. Or take out cash for

Save yourself the trouble of making your own money market investments. If you've been buying notes, bills or certificates of deposit for yourself or your organization, you'll find it's a lot easier to buy Dreyfus Liquid Assets, There's no paperwork, no worrying about maturity dales, roll-overs, safe-keeping or delivery-and there's no sales charge.

A Take care of fiduciary duties. someone else's money—as an executor or trustee—a Dreyfus Liquid Assets account may be an appropriate way to handle those funds. The money will be available instantly when it's needed, and until then it will be productively invested and professionally managed.

5 Give yourself a regular monthly income. You can keep your dividends reinvested in additional shares—or have them paid to you monthly or quarterly. And if you invest $5,000 or more, you can arrange to receive fixed payments of $50 or more every month or quarter. Of course, such a plan may re-sult in your account being depleted if

Take advantage of current in-terest rates. Dreyfus Liquid Assets invests your money exclusively in large money market instruments. You benefit from higher interest rates than you may be able to find elsewhere, especially if you want total liquidity. And you can invest as little as $2,500.

Maintain liquidity and stabil-ity. As a shareholder of Dreyfus Liquid Assets, you own on interest in a very large and relatively stable pool of money morket instruments. The money you invest is not tied up in any way. You can cash in your shares at net asset value at any time, or add to your investment whenever you wish (minimum $100). And because your money goes into stable short-term obligations, there is very little fluctuation in the value of your shares.

Biversify your portfolio. Drey-fus Liquid Assets invests only in U.S. Government securities, certificates of deposit of the largest banks, blue-chip commercial paper, and bankers' acceptances. Do you have this kind of quality and safety in your partfolio new?

Amalgamated Clothing and Textile Workers Uoion, formed only two mooths ago through a merger of the weak textile union with its bigger and stronger brother in meo'e clothiog, the Amalgamated Clothing Workers.

By union standards, the Amalgamated itself ranks as big business. In addition to conventional responsibilities as joint administrator of employer-financed pension and weifere funds, it operates a commercial bank in New York, an insurance company ments and health centers. George Meany, president of the American Federation of Labor and Coogress of Iodus-trial Organizations, has promised "complete, total, all-out support" for a nation-wide consumer boycott of Stevens towels, lineos, carpets and other products. "Stevens is the key to the South," says e Meany aide. A pledge of support oo a worldwide basis — Stevens has operations in Canada, Mexico, France, Australia, New Zealand and Japan—has already come from the Brus-sels-based secretariat of the International Federation of Textile, Garmeot and Leather

The Southern textile industry is the graveyard of dozens of union organizing drives, the most ambitious of which was e $2 milioo campaign launched in 1937 uoder the auspices of the Committee for Industrial Organization as part of its otherwise highly successful effort to or-genize the mass production industries.

Overall, only about 10 percent of the 700,000 textile workers in the eight South-eastern states hold union cards today, and the only union election victory of any dimension in recent years was at Stevens — where Workers voted 1,685-to-1,448 to unionize the company's Roanoke Rapids, N.C., complex two years ago. The union has been trying unsuccessfully ever since to get agreement on a contract

Stevens insists that its pay scales match or exceed community standards in the mill towns in which it operates. But the weekly wage for textile workers, natioowide, still averages only $145, egainst $208 for all factory workers and more than $300 in both autos and steel. The gap is even wider when pension and other fringe benefits are thrown into the equation.

An influx of new plants, often representing higherpaying industries, is exercing some upward pressure on wages in the South. This has become increasingly noticeeble in the last year or two with the arrival of European multioationals - Sweden's Volvo car maker, for example, and France's Michelin tire company.

But the union obviously feels this is not ecough.

"We look et this as not just a question of unlonization but of the hasic princples of this country—a strug-gle for industrial democracy, a fulfillment of the civil rights revolutioo, a moral issue," said Jacob Sheinkman, secretary-treasurer of the merged union. "The processes of law are proving too slow so we are taking our fight to the public."

But to James D. Finley, chairman and chief executive officer of Stevens, the union is "deliberately, ruthlessly and without mercy trying to destroy" both the company and the jobe of its workers. Stevens views the boycott as an improper ganging up egainst it by many unions, the kind of attack that would be illegal under the antitrust lawe if Stevens combined with other companies in a comparable effort to coerce a third party. The company takes the union's defeat in all but one of the 14 elections held at union request since 1963 as "irrefutable evidence" that the vest majority of Stevens employees do oot want out-side representation.

The union vehemently rejects that conclusion, arguing that the company's wholesale violations of the labor laws in the last 13 years have poisoned the climate in s man-ner that bars genuine freedom of choice.

letest of the Netional Labor Relations Board complaints against Stevens, issued last mooth and spurred by the two-year contract dekey at the Roanoke Rapids plant.

The complaint, scheduled for hearing Nov. 1, accuses the company of having engaged since mid-1963 in e "massive, multistate campaign" to deny its employees their legal rights to unionize and bargain collectively.

The board has found the company guilty io IS cases of illegally discharging or intimidating workers or of refusiog to oegotiate to good faith. Io court, Stevens has lost 11 appeals egainst these decisions. It has paid $1.3

The Amalgamated and the A.F.L.-C.I.O. do oot underestimate the difficulties involved. They acknowledge thet it will be e more complex campaigo by far than the 22-month strike Amalgamated started in 1972 against the Farah Manufecturing Company in Texas, io which the hoycott weapon was employed with considerable efployed with considerable ef-fectiveness. That one cost the unioo upwards of $3 million.

Tactics have oot been finally established yet, but one prong of the pincer they plan to clamp on Steveoe will be based on an exhaustive study of all its products and who buys them. Federal, state and municipal officials will be discouraged from is-suing public contracts to 'lawbreaker' Stevens and epparel makers, hig users of Stevens fabrics, are likely to find themselves under a similar squeeze.

The other, mejor effort involves cooverting the boycott into a "moral" issue. The emphasis will he on enlisting groups of the kind that rallied to the union cause in the Farah strike and in the long fight of the California farm workers led by Cesar Chavez—youth, women, civil rights groups and the Boycott is itself a tricky weapon, ooe the labor fed-eration has officially sanc-tioned only four times in the two decades since the A.F.L. and C.I.O. merged, There is always the danger of e boomeraog effect developing in any of three ways.

Oce is the possibility that coosumers, especially those hostile to labor, would treat the union leaflets as e chop-ping list. The second is that unionized companies that use Steveos fahrics could he hurt. The third is a danger Stevens: itself ie concentrating on in messages to ite employees: the possibility that an effective boycott would wipe out

"The boycott is not directed egaiost the workers' liveli-hood," said tha union's Mr. Sheinkman. "But we are fighting as in a strike, you have to pey a price. Nothing comes without a struggle."

The ineffectuality of past textile organizing drives has been in considerable measure a mirror of pervasive com-munity hostility, part fos-tered by the mill owners and part expressive of worry over possible damaga to Southerr mores in everything from race relations to life style

However, the focreasing urbanization of the South. the cosmopolitan character of much of its new industry and the substitution of tech nocrats for plantation-style paternalists in textile companies that were ooce family? dominated, have changed things.

Indeed, many Southern executives now say the only thing stopping the spread of unioos is that organized labor itself has run out of hoth organizing zeal and use ful purpose as an iostrumeor. of employee advancement.

It is in this connection thet special interest attachee itc the possibility that Georgia's former Governor, Mr. Carter may be the next Presideot The leadere of the Amalgamated were among hie earliest hackers.

"We helped him get e start as state Secator." recalled Mr. Sheinkmao. "We think he represents the new South, emerging from a deep slump; the kind of South we want to help build."

But the union's cordielity appears to kindle no auto matic suspicioo io textile industry ranks. Most of the textile chiefs were large cootribotors to the Nixon campaign funds in 1968 and 1972. However, Mr. Coleman of Riegie said he might wind up voting for Mr. Carter this time.

"As a politician, his first concern is getting elected so I don't take too seriously all his campaign promises to labor," he explained. "It is incoocelvable to me on bis whole record that he could be anything but what he save he is, a businessman who recognizes the oeed for e reasonable profit."

The company, ona of the country's biggest pants makers, with plants in El Paso and San Antonin, was headed by Willie Farah, a rugged individualist, who warned that he would let his machinery rust before he surrendered to unionization.

The conflict between Mr. Farah and 3,000 Mexican-American strikers polarized El Paso before the company chief agreed, under pressure of not only the boycott but also the diocesan bishop of In the two-and-a-baif years

On the corporate side, however, things have not been going well. A steady stream of profits ($5.6 million in-1971) was interrupted in 1972 with an $8.5 million loss. There followed a token, $43,-000 profit in 1973, a $2 mil-

Irony Behind Those Big Oil Profit Gains

By CHARLES T. MAXWELL

It may seem peculiar for a security analyst to feel gloomy just after his industry reports earnings gains 25 percent above last year's, as the oil companies have done in the second

But this immediate good news for the investor is based on some of the same factors that bode ill for the nation over the long term, namely the increasing demand for gaso-line and other oil products.

The terrible irony is that oil company profits: are up just when the conservation ethic is. down. The conclusion is inescapable that the United States is moving toward an "Arab solution" of its oil problems. Wa are more vulnerable to a cut-off of foreign oil supplies now than we were before tha 1973 embargo. Unless current trends are reversed or sharply checked, we will be dependent on foreign sources for two-thirds of our oil within the next decade, with more than one-third of all supplies derived from the Middle East.

There have been a number of recent indications that this country's energy problems are becoming more critical: lower domestic oil and gas production, higher crude oil imports, halance-of-payments deficits, tight gasoline inventories and rising prices, and, at the end of July, a tripling of interstate natural gas prices by the Federal Power Commission. Improving oil industry profitability against the background of gradually declining domestic production and rising costs to the consumer can be expected to become an issue of increasingly heated debate. .

For the moment, the financial position of the oil companies is showing significant improvement. Exploration and production budgets for oil and gas in the United States are beginning to move up again after a hesitation in 1975. The oil companies are also spending heavily on coal and nuclear develop continuation of improving earnings is likely, with rates of gain trending only modestly lower from a projected 22 percent increase over the whole of 1976 to 18 percent in 1977 and averaging 15 percent over the last three years of the decade for the domestic companies. (The international companies, owing to slower economic growth abroad and nationalization problems, ara projected at a lower series: 14 percent for 1976, 12 percent for 1977, and 11 percent averaged over the last three years of the decade.)
The issue will now be joined on whether a current loosening of government price con-trols on refined oil products, and rising profit margins in natural gas, will spur large increases in capital expenditure by the industry and et the same time lead to greater public and industriel energy conservation as a conse-quence of higher prices. That would be an ideal sequence of events.

The first question, then, is whether such a trend will be approved by the political process. If it is, the next question is whether these actions will be sufficient, and in time, to ward off the eargy problems bearing down on us in the late 1970's and early 1980's. So far, the political necessity of re-election bas led the government to artificially hold down prices for oil products, giving the United States close to the lowest energy costs of any major industrial power. But the piper

The shape of the "crisis" that could occur is now becoming clear. Demand for oil is rising faster than expected; domestic production continues to fall; and the gap between them, representing imported barrels, is widening Energy planners are currently predicting that consumption of refined products in the United States will grow in the range of 2½ to 3½ percent annually for the period 1976 to 1980. Our calculations indicate that a 4½ percent growth is more likely.

Failure of Congress to approve price deregulation combined with environmental and regulational restraints on increased exploration and production activities have ereated an increasingly serious supply problem in gas that is not likely to be turned around over the next five years. Coal, for its part, has been restricted in its expansion by environmental, financial and transportation problems that will continue for some time. Nuclear power in the next five years will probably be slowed more by technical and environmen-

The assumption is that the Government has a plan to close the supply gap.

tal problems with existing plants than by the now being fought out in the national forum. The second reason for the growth of oil above expectations derives from the early abandonment by both government and public of the energy conservation ethic. For example, the Administration invelghed against the overall effect of the Energy Policy and Conservation Act of 1975 in its early stages of formulation, but ultimately the President signed the bill. While it did cootain some useful longer-range conservation measures, the new law also reduced the price of United Statee crode oil to an average of $7.58 a barrel, thus bringing down the cost of oil to the consumer and, among other things, helping to underwrits the current boom in gasoline usage. With supplies once again available, higher prices being taken in strida by a public intent on getting back into tha driver's seat, and the government taking no action to restrict rising demand, it is not surprising that the sense of urgency on conservation has evaporated. Turning to the supply side, oil production from domestic sources is currently on a downward course, dropping some 3 to 4 percent each year. Critics beve questioned how this can happen in a period of generally higher are persuasive.

The domestic companies exploration and development budgets have nearly doubled over the past five years. They now constitute some two-thirds of total company expenditures, and in aggregate were larger than profits in 1975. Nevertheless, they could have been substantially higher if the government had not cut back industry cash flows by eliminating statutory depletion and foreign tax eredits, if margin freezes on petroleum products had been released when other industries were freed, if netural gas prices had been decontrolled, and if epotimed Congressional ettacks on the industry had not created a climate of uncertainty concerning future returns on investment.

General public indifference to the problem of gradually-increasing foreign oil dependence now that the more dramatic period of the embargo end large international price increases has passed, may be partly premised on the assumption that our government has a working plan to deal with the wideoing domestic supply gap.

However, that plan, Project Independence, is now reduced to a set of theoretical guide-

support for it has never developed Mean-while, in 1975, some 37 percent of our domestic oil consumption came farm rioreign sources: 11 percent of the total from the Mildie East. We anticipate a two to three year respite efter 1977 as North Slope oil from Alaska comes onstream. However, the level could reach 50 percent by 1980 or 81 and Middle East oil might represent 25 percent of total United States consumption.

In the mid-1980's, when Project Independ-ence was scheduled to have reduced imports to the 10 to 20 percent range, we would esti-See percent dependent on foreign oil sources with about 35 percent of all supplies derived from the Middle East. Obviously, new initiatives must be taken.

of hily The F.P.C. handed down e ruling that permitted interstate prices for natural gas on-stream after Jan. 1, 1975 to hise from $0.52 at to $1.42 per thousand cubic feet, with additional estalation over time. While in percentage terms this was a sharp move, controlled intrastate prices generally remain above the new $1.42 rate, and the price of natural gas on a comparative thermal basis is still only found off. Nevertheless, off companies now have substantially higher revenue support and expanded gas exploration programs in areas # Reagan's Quiz Kid I served by interstate pipeline connections.

An important follow up to the F.P.C. action would be final approval by President Ford of an energy bill approved by Congress last week an energy out approved by congress has ween that would decontrol the price of oil from stripper wells and establish energy conserva-tion programs involving changes in building codes and government loans for commercial and residential installation of energy-saving equipment and insulations.

Concerning the effectiveness of capital expenditures being made today it is not generally realized how long the lags are before the commitment of funds results in new facilities. coming oustream, particularly relating to delays from the regulatory process With Environmental Protection Agency, Federal Energy Administration and Interior Department approvals—plus those of state and local authorities as well as the F.P.C.—it will have taken nine years to obtain the first oil from the North Slope. A typical Guif of Mexico offshore find requires five years to come on production. The same time lag epplies to the construction of a grass roots refinery.

Not only are vast amounts of capital tied up for many years without being able to add to production, but also projects become more vulnerable to the effects of inflation because of delays. The North Slope line, for instance, was originally projected at $900 million lo-1968. We have recently estimated it at $8.5 billion for '77 completion. The average investment cost to bring on a new barrel a day of crude oil production in the United States was approximately $3,800 in 1970: It's $6,500 today. On the processing side, one barrel ado of refinery throughput carried a price of $1,400 in 1970. Currently, it is between $3,000 and $3,500.

Thus even the oil companies rising profits have been unable to compensate for cost escalation in their principal areas of operations. The net result has been to slow the drive towards greater energy self-sufficiency at an

We are forecasting that the oil industry will maintain relatively strong earnings growth through the next five years to 1980. While political attacks involving threats of a return to more regulation, divestiture, high-er taxes and so on will doubtless be a regular-feature requiring constant accommodation, we also believe that demands for the continued expansion of our economy will make mandatory a greater concentration on potential energy problems that could hamper

Only the skilled management and technical teams offered by the large integrated energy companies, with oil groups paramount among them, can hope to make reasonable progress against long-standing problems of this magnitude. They will therefore need to be given reasonable scope and encouragement to get on with the job.

Books: Was That All There Was to Revson?

FIRE AND ICE, THE STORY OF CHARLES REVSON-THE MAN WHO BUILT THE REV-LON EMPIRE, by Andrew Tobias, William Morrow and Company, New York, 282 pages, $10.

By MARYLIN BENDER

The long-awaited biography of Charles Revson, the late and only king bee of the beauty industry, is an indica-tion of how far and at what angle the genre of business biography is traveling these days. Andrew Tobias's "Fire and Ice" is a long distance from Affred R. Sloan's "My Years With General Motors" and it veers in the direction of Judith Campbell Exner.

The dirty gossip school of history that has overtaken the United States Presidency seems to be moving in on the businessman. Formerly regarded as a crashing bore by all but the muckraker, the businessman has caught the attention of the general in-terest book publisher. Unfortunately, there seems to be a case of mistaken identity

Almost every working business journalist had been approached by a publisher to do a Revson biography before Mr. Tobias, a business-savvy writer for New York Magazine, took it on. Judging from the way the assignment was usually described, the book publishing crowd had been taken in by gossip column accounts of Mr. Revson's yacht-and-tri-plex style of living and by the legend of his trascibility. It was obvious that he was being confused with Aristotle

S. Onassis although, truth to Every chepter cootains a putdown. "Charles never innovated anything but color. Ha stole everything," says an unidentified advertising man This dubious source relates how Mr. Revson would pick up something developed by a small, innovative outfit, copy it and market it with all of Revion's promotional bat-teries behind it.

Mr. Tobias makes that sound sinister. But isn't that the American way? Small innovators usually go broke or are bought out. Big companies generally wait for someone generally wait for someone class to test a near idea. one else to test a new idea. Then they take it and make it a success. The formula is, don't be first but don't be third either.

Mr. Tobias acknowledges that Charles Revson was a pretty good salesman once, but he gives the impression that the skill was confined to seducing cosmetics buyers. As for his the famed Rev-"perfectionism," Mr. Tobias says that was really e fear of making decisions. He makes Revion Inc. appear the prospect for achieving fundamental tax reforms seems likely to be even more than usually difficult for ei-ther a President Carter or a Treasury Secretary serving a reelected President Ford or a new Republican President.

The reason is that the one carrot that can be held out to those who would lose some special tax preference as a result of tax reform is that their total tax payment would, nonetheless, be re-duced. This carrot can be held out to everyone only if there is room in the budget and the economy for a major net reduction in taxes, which seems unlikely in tha first two years of the next administration. If the economy goes well, the fiscal stimulus of a major tax cut could be unwice policy. If the growth unwise policy. If the growth rate slows down, any stimula-tive tax policy that might be desirable would have to be of relatively modest propor-

Then there is the question:
Who would get hurt? Who would pay more?
The Treasury recently disclosed that its tax reform studies are based on the assumption that there will be, and ought to be, nn redistri-bution of the tax burden. Soma people in every income others would pay less, but each broad economic class would continue to pay the same share of the total tax hurden. Wheo Secretary Simon started talking publicly about basic tax reform, he held out hope that with all special rules eliminated, individual income tax rates could he reduced from today's 14 to 70 percent range to 10 to 35 percent. He said this would reduce the taxes of those making less than $20,000 and increase them for those above $20,000.

But an earlier Treasury study showed that a top tax rate of 35 percent would bring tax reduction, not tax increases, to most high-income persons. Secretary Simon has now abandoned his claim that basic tax reform could bring tex relief for the masses. His reform program would thus appear to rely, for its support, on those individuals within each income hracket who would pay less tax under a drasti-cally reformed system and those whn want a simpler tax form so badly that they will make themselves heard on the issue, even if their total tax bill goes up slightly or remains unchanged. It seems problematical that such a di-verse group could constitute an effective political force for reform.
As for Mr. Carter, he has maintained total silence on the question of whether his reform proposals would have any redistributive effects, although a heavy majority of his known tax advisers are expected to recommend poli-cies that would increase, at least modestly, the share of the hurden borne by upper income taxpayers.

From a political standpoint, possibly the most puzzling aspect of Mr. Carter's plan is his intention to take a whola year after he is elected to devise it, and not to present it to Congress until January 1978, Congress proved in 1969 that it can, if sufficiently pushed by both tha White House and its own leaders, pass a major tax hill in only one year. But this is the only recent instance of enactment of a major bill in one year. And what Mr. Carter intends to propose is much more sweeping than the 1969 In addition, there are and-less problems if the tax sys-tem is to be simplified, such rate reorganizations.

Furthermore, how should the reform package deal with the feeling, shared by many, that anyone who made a dea under existing tax law is en-titled to have that law re-main unchanged for the life wins, will be a year old.

Corn, Kansas and August

By JOHN M. LEE

ELLIE FORBUSH was understandably giddy when she first seng a generation ago that she was as corny as Kansas in August. Kansas is the largest producer of wheat, not corn (that's Iowa). But everybody knows there is a lot of wheat and corn somewhere out there in the American heartland. This week, the Republicans are there too and the corn is indeed as bigh as an elephant's eye (that's "Oklahoma!"). In short, it's another great agricultural summer in America, and that's a metter of worldwide importance.

Agriculture, alone among the major productive industries, is still capriciously dependent upon the weather, and this year has seen a crazy-quilt pattern that has overturned some of the fears and assumptions of the past

Northern Europe has suffered one of its worst droughts in e century. France, which normally produces two-fifths of the Common Market's wheat, has been hardest hit. West Germany's agricultural losses have been estimated at $2 billion and in Britain, cattle have been sacrificed as fodder prices doubled. On the other side of the world, Australia has been parched and wheat acreage cut in half.

As serious as the situation is, the drought is not expected to have a major effect on world food supplies this year. Ironically, the worst drought areas of a few years ago have improved markedly. Along the southern edge of the Sahara, where starvation provoked a world outcry in 1972-74, adequate rains have brought good African harvests. Normal monsoon winds have returned the rains also to India, Pakistan and Bengladesh, and farm conditions have improved there and in Southeast Asia.

But the balancing act in world agriculture, is still performed by the United States and the Soviet Union and fortunately, the enormously efficient American farm machine can produce enough for both.

Last Thursday, the Agriculture Department estimated that the total wheat crop this season would be a bountiful 2.1 billion bushels, just 2 percent shy of last year's record. With export orders slack—hunger and drought ontwithstanding—prices have dropped to about $3.26 a bushel, compared with $6.50 in 1974.

Although wheat is crucial and two-thirds of the crop is turned into export dollars, corn is the archetypical American produce. This year, the corn farmers of lows, Nebraska and all the rest (including Kansas in 8th place) have outdone themselves. A record harvest of 6.2 billion bushels, up 7 percent from last year's record, is expected.

Demand has been heavy for this feed grain, which influences the price of pork, poultry and beef, and largely as a result of exceptional Russian demand for last year's crop, reserves have been run down. But huge new supplies are expected to replenish the larder. Prices have already been pushed down to $2.80 a bushel. The record high was $4 in 1974.

Soybeans, the third major cash crop, are also having a good year, with the third largest harvest forecast—1.3 billion bushels, down 13 percent from last year. Prices are up from their lows of the year, but at $6.48 a bushel, they are less than half the $13 peak of 1973.

Fortunately, American affluence offsets Russian shortcomings, whatever the reason for them. The Russian grain crop, including everything from rice and oats to wheat and corn, is estimated by the Agriculture Department at 195 million tons this year, a big improvement from 1975's disastrous 140 million tons but still below Soviet goals and records of recent years.

The Russians have already served notice they will be buying more here than the minimum required under a long-term purchase agreement oegotiated last year. The egreement, which is intended to stabilize erratic Russian entries into the American market, was reached after President Ford temporarily embargoed exports because of a political outcry over tha effect of such exports on American food prices.

American rood prices.

The increased Russian buying intentions are good news for farmers and merchants who now hold surplus stocks for sale both here and abroad—rather than the Federal Government as in years past. One of the achievements of the Republicans, now convening in the Farm Bett, has been the withdrawal of the Government from the grain storage and subsidy business and the inauguration of full-production policies.

When full production depresses prices and politics limits sales ebroad, the farmers get unhappy. So far, free-market prices have boosted farm income. But the mood in the farm states eppears somewhat apprehensive, and if e wheat glut drives prices down sharply, the Republicans could pay the price this fail.

On a worldwide basis, the American bumper crops suggest a period of market stability, with adequate export supplies, no panic buying and a fairly equable price trend. The inflationary thrust of 1973-74 is gone. But higher processing and marketing costs are expected to keep pushing prices up moderately for the consumer. The Agriculture Department has forecast a "modest upcreep" of 3 to 4 percent in retail food prices this year, about half

A larger question is whether the success of this year's harvest will produce complacency on the long-range problems of world food supply. The World Food Conference in 1974 established a World Food Council and set out to achieve greater food security, including emergency food reserves and Government stockpiles to stabilize prices. But little progress has been made. A $1 billion international fund to spur production in poorer countries is also

Perhaps it would be belpful to recall an old farm proverb.

Dow Gains 4.19 In Slow Trading

The stock market wound up the week with a small gain as investor concern over the economy dulied interest. The widely-watched Dow Jones industrial average closed on Friday at 990.19, up 4.19 points for the week.

Turnover on the New York Stock Exchange, still in the summer doldrums, last week fell to 76.59 million shares, from 82.42 million shares in the preceding week. On Monday, trading was cut by 1 hour to e 3 P.M. close because of Hurricane Belle.

Some analysts cited last Tuesday's report that retail sales fell 1.2 percent in July, from June, the second significant decline in retail sales in the last two months, as contributing to market weakness. They viewed the disappointing sales as an indication that the economy was not improving as much as bad been expected. Also, many Wall Streeters now believe that earnings statements of retailers for their fiscal second quarter, which will be released in the next few weeks, will be below earlier predictions in many cases. Investors mostly ignored a report, issued by the Labor Department on Thursday, that the wholesale

Labor Department on Thursday, that the wholesale price index rose only 0.3 percent in July, slightly less than the 0.4 percent rise in June.

One analyst expressed the view that investor concern over the Presidential elections coupled with the market's technical deficiencies "are preventing stocks from responding to the positive fundamental news."

One of the most actively-traded issues last week was American Telephone which traded at a nine-year high of 60 on Wednesday. It closed Friday at 59½, up ¼ for the week.

Prices in the credit markets were sharply higher last week helped by the report of the slim wholesale price gain. The Federal Reserve report of an increase in the money supply was largely ignored.
